OF

DR. JOHN DEE,

WARDEN OF THE COLLEGE OF MANCHESTER.

EDITED BY

JAMES CROSSLEY, ESQ.

PRINTED FOR THE CHETHAM SOCIETY.
M.DCCC.LI.

PREFACE

TO THE AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL TRACTS.

THE following Tracts having been printed off some time ago, it has been considered desirable to include them as part of the present Volume. The Correspondence of Dr. Dee, with selections from his MSS. and printed works, will form a separate publication, to which will be prefixed a fuller account than has yet been given of the Life and Writings of this most extraordinary person.

The Tracts consist of:

PAGES

1 — 45. "The Compendious Rehearsall of John Dee." This exceedingly curious document was only to be found in a printed form in the Appendix to Hearne's Johannis Glastoniensis Chronica: Oxon. 1726, 8vo, of which work the number printed being very limited, it is consequently scarce. Hearne's printed copy has been carefully collated for this republication with Ashmole's transcript of the original before it was burnt, now in the Ashmolean Library, through the kindness of J. O. HALLIWELL, Esq., who has contributed so largely to the materials for the Life of Dee, by the publication of his Diary in the Camden series.

46 — 47. "Supplication to Queen Mary."

48 — 49. "Articles for the recovery and preservation of the ancient monuments." These, which serve to illustrate the "Compendious Rehearsal," are reprinted from Hearne's Appendix to J. Glastoniensis Chronica.

50 — 67. "A necessary Advertizement." This forms the preface (⊿ij — E*iiij) to Dee's "General and rare Memorials pertayning to the Perfect Arte of Navigation," Lond. 1577, fol. which is now an excessively rare volume. The "Advertizement" has appeared, but not very accurately, in Beloe's Anecdotes of Literature and Scarce Books, vol. ii. p. 263, and is more correctly reprinted in the Collectanea now issued from a copy of the "General and rare Memorials" in my possession. The "unknown freend" who writes this singular "advertizement," it is scarcely necessary to observe, is Dee himself.

69 — 84. "A Letter containing a most brief Discourse Apologetical." This Letter, which was sent by Dee to Whitgift, 1594-5, was republished by Meric Casaubon at the end of his preface to the "Relation of what passed between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits," 1659, fol. The present edition is a fac-simile reprint from the scarce 4to of 1604.

THE COMPENDIOUS REHEARSAL,

ETC.

THE COPPY OF THE FORESAID SUPPLICATION TO HER MOST EXCELLENT MA^{TIE}.

Most gracious Quene,

FORASMUCH as the intollerable extremitie of the injuries and indignities, which your most excellent Majesties faithfull and dutifull servant, John Dee, hath for some yeares last past endured, and still endureth, is so great and manifold, as cannot in briefe be unto your Majestie expressed, neither without good proof and testimonie have credit with your Majestie: and because also, without speedy and good redress therein performed, it is to be doubted, that great and incredible inconveniences and griefes may ensue thereof in sundry sorte; (which yet may easily be prevented) your Majesties foresaid most humble and most zealously faithfull servant beseecheth your Majestie, to assign two or mo meete and worthy persons, nobly and vertuously minded, who may and will charitably, indifferently, advisedly, and exactly see, heare, and perceive, at the house of your Majestie's said servant in Mortlake, what just and needeful occasion he hath thus to make most humble supplicacion unto your Majestie: and so of things their seene, heard, and perceived, to make true and full report and description unto your Majestie. And thus your Majestie's foresaid most dutifull servant beseecheth the Almighty God most mercifully, prosperously, and allwaies to bless and preserve your most excellent Majestie royal. Amen.

A. 1592. Nov. 9.

Be it remembred,

That this Supplication being exhibited unto her Majestie by the honourable Countess of Warwick the 9th of November, and read by her Majestie's selfe; thereupon her Majestie immediately appointed the honourable Mr. Secretary Wolley, and Sir Thomas Gorge, Knight, Gentleman of her Majestie's Wardrobe, to be the two Commissioners, according to the tenor of this Supplication.

And so, the foresaid two honourable Commissioners came the 22nd day of November, A. 1592, to my house at Mortlake, to see, heare, and perceive some things, according to the intent of the former Supplication. To whome being set at one table in the midle of my late library-roome, and next before them two other great tables, being covered; the one, with very many letters and recordes of fifty years course, and testimonies of my studious lyfe, in and from the most famous places and parties of all Christendome; and the other with such divers books of my making, printed and unprinted, as I had in my foresaid tyme written or devised: then I did begin my declaration, concurring orderly with the text of this booke, purposely and by the Commissioners' advise, in some order of method most briefely and speedely contrived against this day.

A BRIEFE NOTE AND ABSTRACT, IN DIVERS CHAPTERS AND PRINCIPALL POINTS, TO BE CONSIDERED IN THE RACE OF THAT HALFE HUNDRED YEARES, WHICH (WITH THE FAVOUR AND HELPE OF GOD) I HAVE ALREADY RUNN, FOR ATTEYNING OF GOOD LEARNING; SINCE MY FIRST BECOMING A STUDEANT IN CAMBRIDGE AN. 1542, IN NOVEMBER. AND NOW BEING A. 1592, NOVEMBER 22, DOTH PROVE THE RACE TO HAVE BYN OF JUST HALFE AN HUNDRED YEARES.

CHAPTER I.

THE ENTRANCE AND GROUNDPLAT OF MY FIRST STUDIES.

ANNO 1542. I was (in November) sent by my father, Rowland Dee, to the Universitie of Cambridge, there to begin with logick, and so to proceede in the learning of good artes and sciences (for I had before, in London, and at Chelmisford, been metely well furnished with understanding of the Latine tongue): I being then somewhat above fifteene yeares old, as being borne A. 1527, July 13.

In the yeares 1543, 1544, 1545, I was so vehemently bent to studie, that for those yeares I did inviolably keepe this order; only to sleepe four houres every night; to allow to meate and drink (and some refreshing after) two houres every day; and of the other eighteen houres all (except the tyme of going to and being at divine service) was spent in my studies and learning.

After I was Batchellor of Art, I went beyond the seas (anno 1547 in May) to speake and conferr with some learned men, and chiefely mathematicians, as Gemma Frisius, Gerardus Mercator, Gaspar à Mirica, Antonius Gogava, &c. And after some moneths so spent about the Low Countries, I returned home, and brought with me the first astronomer's staff of brass, that was made of Gemma Frisius' devising, the two great globes of Gerardus Mercator's making, and the astronomer's ring of brass, as Gemma Frisius had newly framed it; and they were afterwards by me left to the use of the Fellowes and Schollers of Trinity College: some proofe hereof may appeare by the letters of Mr. John Chistoferson, who afterwards was Byshop of Chichester elect.

In this yeare of 1547, I began to make observations (very many to the houre and minute) of the heavenly influences and operations actuall in this elementall portion of the world. Of which sort I made some thousands in the yeares then following: as may appeare by my owne writing in my Ephemerides, and in sundry other bookes purposely recorded and here lying before your Honor.

I was out of St. John's Colledge chosen to be Fellow of Trinity Colledge, at the first erection thereof by King Henry the Eight. I was also assigned there to be the Under-Reader of the Greeke tongue, Mr. Pember being the chiefe Greeke Reader then in Trinity Colledge. Hereupon I did sett forth (and it was seene of the University) a Greeke comedy of Aristophanes, named in Greek Εἰρήνη, in Latin, Pax; with the performance of the Scarabeus his flying up to Jupiter's pallace, with a man and his basket of victualls on her back: whereat was great wondring, and many vaine reportes spread abroad of the meanes how that was effected. In that Colledge also (by my advise and by my endeavors, divers waies used with all the other Colledges) was their Christmas-Magistrate first named and confirmed an Emperor. The first was one Mr. Thomas Dunne, a very goodly man of person, stature, and complexion, and well learned also. They, which yet live, and were hearers and beholders, they can testifie more, then is meete here to be written of these my boyish attemptes and exploites scholasticall.

Anno 1548. I was made Master of Arte, as may appeare by the Universitie's testimonie under their seale, lying here on the table.

In the yeare 1548, I went over beyond the seas againe, and never after that was I any more studient in Cambridge: as may appeare by the whole course of my lyfe after that, manifestly testified by the letters and other recordes here before you.

I became a student at Lovayne A. 1548, at midsomer, and there I made aboad, till the 15 of July A°. 1550; as appeareth by the notes of my Ephemeredes, and divers letters sent to me from divers partes, as being knowne to be at Lovayn then.

CHAPTER II.

HEREUPON FOLLOWED MY GOOD ESTIMATION AND CREDIT IN MATTERS OF GOOD LEARNING, BOTH ABROAD AND AT HOME IN ENGLAND.

ABROAD AS FOLLOWETH.

Beyond the seas, far and neere, was a good opinion conceived of my studies philosophicall and mathematicall. First, from Lovayne did the favourable fame of my skill in good literature so spread, that thereupon divers noblemen (Spaniardes, Italians, and others) came from the Emperour Charles the Vth, his court at Bruxelles to visit me at Lovayne, and to have some proofe of me by their owne judgementes: so came the Duke of Mantua to me: so came Don Luys de la Cerda, afterwardes Duke de Medina Cœli in Spaine, unto me: so came to me, after them, from the Emperour's court at Bruxells, the honourable Sir William Pykering, Knight, and there with me remained some tyme, and of me was instructed in logick, rhetorick, arithmetick, in the use of the astronomer's staff, the use of the astronomer's ringe, the astralabe, in the use of both globes, &c.

Thither came some out of Bohemia unto me, with strange and no vulgar opinion, settled in their imaginations, of my skill, as may appeare by the Record of some part of the History in my Ephemerides noted.

Thither came some out of Denmarke unto me, as Mathias Hacus, Danus, Regis Daniæ Mathematicus; Joannes Capito, Medicus Regis Daniæ, and a good mathematician also; as by letters lying on the table is evident.

There I did, for recreation, look into the method of the civile law, and profited therein so much, that in antimonys, imagined to be in the law, I had good hap to finde out (well allowed of) their agreementes; and also to enter into a plaine and due understanding of divers civill lawes, accounted very intricate and darke. Of that my study in the law your honor hath on the table the testimonie of the University of Lovayne; and by other letters unto me about that time it may appear.

From Lovayne I tooke my journey towardes Paris A. 1550, the 15 day of July, and came to Paris the 20 day of that moneth. Where, within a few daies after (at the request of some English gentlemen, made unto me to doe somewhat there for the honour of my country) I did undertake to read freely and publiquely Euclide's Elements Geometricall, Mathematicè, Physicè, et Pythagoricè; a thing never done publiquely in any University of Christendome. My auditory in Rhemes Colledge was so great, and the most part elder then my selfe, that the mathematicall schooles could not hold them; for many were faine, without the schooles at the windowes, to be auditors and spectators, as they best could helpe themselves thereto. I did also dictate upon every proposition, beside the first exposition. And by the first foure principall definitions representing to the eyes (which by imagination onely are exactly to be conceived), a greater wonder arose among the beholders, than of my Aristophanes Scarabeus mounting up to the top of Trinity-hall in Cambridge ut supra. Of this mathematical reading very many testimonies lye here before you.

In that University of Paris, were at that tyme above forty thousand accounted studientes; some out of every quarter of Christendome being there. Among these very many of all estates and professions were desirous of my acquaintance and conference, as Orontius, Mizaldus, Petrus Montaureus, Ranconetus, Danesius, Jacobus Sylvius, Jacobus Goupylus, Turnebus, Straselius, Vicomercatus, Paschasius Hamelius, Petrus Ramus, Gulielmus Postellus, Fernelius, Jo. Magnionus, Johannes à Pena, &c. as by letters lying on the table may partly appeare.

There I refused to be one of the French kinge's mathematicall readers, with 200 French crownes yearely stipend offred me, if I would stay for it; I refused likewayes a good stipend of Monsieur Babeu; and a better than that, of Monsieur de Rohan; and a better than that, of Monsieur de Monluc, who was then sent ambassadour to the Great Turk.

And not only in Lovayne and Paris Universities hath God sent me good credit and estimation with the favour and love of very many (noble lovers of good learning, or well learned themselves), but also in Orleans, Collen, Hædelberg, Strasburg, Verona, Padoa, Ferrara, Bononia, Urbino, Roma, and (to conclude herein) in many other universities, cities, and townes of Christendome; as may appeare by the multitude of letters and other recordes lying here to be seene and perused in this case; from anno 1547 till and in this present yeare of 1592.

A sufficient proof of my great forraine credit.

To be most briefe therefore as concerning my forraine credit, it may suffice me, a poore studious gentleman, for my forraine credit for ever; that in this tract of my studious race I might have served five Christian Emperors; namely, Charles the Fifth, Ferdinand, Maximilian, this Rodulph, and this present Moschovite: of every one their stipendes directly or indirectly offered, amounting greater each, then other; as from 500 dollars yearely stipend to a 1000, 2000, 3000; and lastly, by a Messenger from this Russian or Moschovite Emperor, purposely sent, with a very rich present, unto me at Trebona castle, and with provision for the whole journey (being about 1200 myles from the castle, where I lay) of my coming to his court at Moskow (with my wife, children, and my whole family) there to enjoy at his Imperial handes £2000 sterling yearely stipende; aud of his protector yearely a thousand rubbles; with my diet also to be allowed me free out of the Emperour's owne kitchin: and to be in dignity with authority amougst the highest sort of the nobility there, and of his privy-councellors, &c. Of this last great preferment offered, many Englishmen, yet living, and in this kingdome, be witnesses: the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassell his letter is ready to be shewed, and other letters of men of credit can be sufficient testimonie; besides the forerunner to seek me, and the embassadours or messengers, their owne writings thereof here lyes.

Note, the Commissioners jointly read two of the testimonies of the Moscovite's great offers and promise.

CHAPTER III.

MY CREDIT AND ESTIMATION IN ENGLAND, FOR THE MOST PART OF THE FORMER WHOLE RACE.

That may also appeare evidently even from the beginning and originalls of it, with the encrease thereof ensuing:

As first, A. 1547, by the letters of Mr. John Christopherson, afterwards Byshop of Chichester, elect.

2. A. 1548, by the Universitie of Cambridge their letters testimonial, with their seale annexed.

3. By Mr. Cheke (afterwardes knight, and one of King Edward the Sixtes schoolemasters) whose good liking of me declared to Mr. Secretary Cecill (now the right honourable Lord Treasurer of England) was notified unto me by the letters of Mr. Peter Osborne, late Remembrancer of the Exchecquer; and by the same I was sent for to come to the speech of the said Mr. Secretary anno 1551, 12 Dec. which I did, and yet I remember whereof his discourse with me then.

4. By King Edward his voluntary guift of a pension of an hundred crownes yearely; and after that, bettering that pension with bestowing on me (as it were by exchange) the rectory of Upton upon Severn; a sufficient testimonie of his Majestie's presenting me to that rectory lyeth here, with an authentick seale annext to it. A. 1553, 19 Maii.

5. Mr. Secretary Cecill, now Lord Treasurer, his testimonie by letter of my well bestowing of my tyme beyond the seas A. 1563, 28 May, is here.

6. I must highly esteeme her Majestie's most gracious defending of my credit, in my absence beyond the seas, as concerning my booke, titled Monas Hieroglyphica (dedicated to the Emperour Maximilian, A. 1564) against such Universitie-Graduates of high degree, and other gentlemen, who therefore dispraised it, because they understood it not. Whereupon her most excellent Majestie (after my coming home from beyond the seas; when also I brought the Lady Marquess of Northampton from Andwerp by sea to Greenewich) did vouchsafe to read that book obiter, with me at Greenewich. A. 1564.

7. Of the University of Oxford, some of the chiefe studientes (Doctors of Divinity and Masters of Art) caused a yearely good stipend to be offered unto me to read the mathematicall sciences there. Mr. Doctor Smith of Oriel Colledge, and Mr. Dr. Bruarne of Christes Church, were chiefely agentes in that cause: A. 1554.

8. Mr. John Wolly his very courteous letters unto me A. 1568, Junii 8, who is now even your honour, the only Secretary for the Latin tongue to her most excellent Majestie, and one of her Majestie's privy-councell; and here this day the chiefe Commissioner in my present most lamentable case of distress.

9. Mr. Secretary Cecill, now Lord Treasurer of England, his honourable offer of his courtly frendship by a letter written with his owne hand. A. 1568, 20 Augusti.

10. The honourable Earle of Oxford his favourable letters A. 1570.

11. Her Majesties very gracious letters of credit for my marriage. Anno 1575.

12. The right honourable Earle of Leicester's letters for the same.

13. Mr. Christopher Hatton (afterward Lord Chancellor of England) his letters for the same.

14. Her Majestie's favourable lycence and pasport, with my two servantes and our geldings: A. 1571.

Two other Kings, their ambassadors (Leidgiers here) their pasports at the same tyme, for free and safe travailing in their Prince's dominions, &c.

15. Sir Henry Sydneys his honourable letters unto me, while he was Lord Deputy in Ireland. Sir Henry Sydneys his letters unto me, when he was Lord President in Wales.

16. The honourable Lady Sydnyes her most courteous and many letters unto me, and inviting me to court, &c. A. 1571.

17. Mr. Doctor Julius Cæsar his letters unto me (who now is Judge of the Admiralty, and one of the Masters of Requests extraordinary) An. 1577.

18. Sir Francis Walsingham his passport for my winter-journey, in her Majestie's weighty affaires, 1578.

Omitting herein very many letters, and other things, testifying my honest credit here in England (with all degrees of the Nobility, Gentlemen, and Universitie-Graduates), in and for the most part of all my studious race, these may suffice.

CHAPTER IV.

OTHER HER MAJESTIE'S SPECIALLY GRACIOUS AND VERY BOUNTIFULL FAVOURS TOWARDS ME USED.

1. At her most excellent Majestie's first coming to Somerset house, her Majestie was willing, that, after Dr. Mallet, I should have had the Mastership of St. Katharine's, wherein Dr. Willson politickly prevented me.

2. Her Majestie very gratiously took me to her service, at Whitehall before her Coronation, being to her Majestie commended by the right honourable Earle of Penbroke, and the Lord Robert, after Earle of Leicester. At which tyme her Majestie used these wordes unto the said Lordes, "Where my brother hath given him a crowne, I will give him a noble."

3. After this some yeares, at the Lady Marquess of Northampton her humble sute for me A. 1564, Dec. 8, her Majestie granted unto me the Deanery of Gloucester, being then voyd: and a caveat was entred on my behalfe; but the same deanery was afterwardes bestowed on one Mr. Man, who was sent into Spaine in her Majestie's service. [And now this Lent 1594, when it became voyd again, I made motion for it, but I came too late; for one, that might spend £400 or £500 a yeare already, had more need of it, then I belike; or else my former guift was but words onely to me, and the fruit ever due to others, that can espie and catch better then I for these thirty-five yeares could doe.]

4. Not long after, the Provostship of Eaton by some my friends in court, was humbly at her Majestie's handes sued for to my behoofe, and favourable answers were given therein.

5. Her Majestie willed Mathew, Lord Archbyshop of Canterbury, to grant me a dispensation for ten yeares, to enjoy the two rectories of Upton and Long-Lednam, and any other within that terme, of me gotten. Which dispensation I enjoyed for onely those two rectories.

6. After my journey into the dukedome of Loraine, A. 1571, in my very dangerous sickness I received chiefe helpe and comfort by her Majestie's great favour towards me, not onely sending carefully and with great speede from Hampton Court unto me Dr. Apsloo and Mr. Balthrop (who faithfully and prosperously did their parts of skill with me), but also in sending the honourable L. Sidney in a manner to tend on me; to discerne, how my health bettered, and to comfort me from her Majestie with divers very pithy speches and gracious, and also with divers rarities to eat, to encrease my health and strength: the most dutifull and thankfull memory whereof shall never dye.

7. Her Majestie's most gracious offer was sent home unto my house by Mistris Blanche à Parry of any whatsoever ecclesiasticall dignity within her kingdome, being then or shortly becoming voyde and vacant, to make me owner: when both byshopricks and deanries were voyde, and more became shortly after voyd: but my most humble and thankfull answer to her Majestie by the same messanger, was, that, cura animarum annexa did terrifie me to deale with them.

8. Her Majestie not long after, as your Honour, Mr. Secretary Wolley, can well remember and testefie, for some better maintenance for me, then of those two rectories onely, which I then had, declared her most gracious will and pleasure to be, that I should have of her Majestie's guift other ecclesiasticall livings and revenues, (without cure of soules annexed) as in her Majestie's books are rated at two hundred poundes yearely revenue; of which her Majestie's guift I never as yet had any one penny.

9. Her Majestie (A. 1583, Julii ultimo) being informed by the right honourable Earle of Leicester, that whereas the same day in the morning he had told me, that his Honour and the Lord Laskey would dyne with me within two daies after, I confessed sincerely unto him, that I was not able to prepaire them a convenient dinner, unless I should presently sell some of my plate or some of my pewter for it. Whereupon her Majestie sent unto me very royally within one hour after forty angells of gold, from Syon; whether her Majestie was new come by water from Greenewich.

What can better witnes her Majesties most gracious goodwill and desire to further my studies in her service than this parcell of her Majesties speech utterd the same day to another, such a one as you may see in the letter itselfe he rote.

10. Her Majestie by Mr. Christopher Hatton's letters (afterward Lord Chancellour of England) signified to Edmond, Lord Archbyshop of Canterbury, his good grace (A. 1576) that her pleasure was, "That, in any case, I should, during my lyfe natural, be dispensed with to enjoy those two rectories of Upton and Long-Lednam;" which I then had. Thereupon at length (it is to wete A. 1582) the said Archbyshop performed his part and sett his seale thereto: but when I should have followed the getting out of the great seale unto it, I was wholly imployed (at her Majestie's and the right honourable the Privy Counsellours, their commandment) about the Reformation of the Kalender. Which office anciently did appertaine to the byshops, and I would now they had shewed their skill therein then; so would they have made more account now to helpe him up, who fell into the loss of above a thousand poundes synce [The loss of the two Rectories is of more loss in rent due and for tyme of lyfe to come than £1000] for not following his owne buisiness, but was occupied to beare their burthen; indeed at her Majestie's commandment, and not at theirs: as also I had small thanks at their handes any way, nay, great hinderance; seeing her Majestie's absolute intent and caveat to my benifitt was no better regarded among them in due tyme.

The great seale by negligence still wanted; for of course it was to have been putt to within a certaine tyme after.

11. Her Majestie most graciously both for my great credit encreasing and confirming, as well abroad as at home; and also for the better safety of me and myne to come so long and dangerous a journey and voyage in (as from the farthest partes of the Kingdome of Bohemia, hither); sent her most princely and royall letters of safe conduct for me, my companion, and our families to all forraine Princes and Potentates, &c. A. 1588. The coppy whereof I received of your honour, Mr. Secretary Wolley.

12. Since which my last coming home into England, her Majestie a litle before Christmas A. 1590, hearing of my great want of ability to keepe house accordingly, as by all reason might be expected at my handes, did presently declare her most gracious good intent and will to helpe me with one hundred pounds of money out of her Majesties prevy purse: which intent and promise, some once or twice after, as I came in her Majestie's sight, she repeated unto me; and thereupon sent unto me fiftie poundes to keepe my Christmas with that yeare; but what is become of the other fiftie, truly I cannot tell. If her Majestie can, it is sufficient; Satis citò, modò satis bene, must I say.

13. And shortly after her Majestie very graciously sent her will and pleasure in the right honourable Lord Treasurer his letters to this present Lord Archbyshop of Canterbury, his good Grace, that he should "take some order for my present mainteynance:" here is the coppy of the very letters, as I had it by my Lord of Canterburies commandement: but yet no penny of rent, fee, or revenue is bestowed on me, being now almost two years since. [And now it is more than three years and three moneths since, and not yet any farthing of certaine fee or revenue wilbe found or gotten for me.]

14. Againe, seeing no present helpe was yet come A. 1592, in Aprill last, but want and discredit grew more and more upon me: thereupon my friends devised a suit to her Majestie for me, by obteyning whereof chiefely her Majestie might be found my gracious and very favourable soveraigne Lady: and secondly I thereby might win some credit; as with all men generally, who should understand of such her Majesties good and gracious favour towardes me, her ancient servant; and specially with my creditors, who would ween that my present little ability should be much amended thereby. And so it came to pass by her Majesties very bountifull purpose in giving unto the right worshipfull Doctor Awbrey, one of the Masters of Requests, a few advowsons of rectories endowed, with vicarages, in St. David's diocese to my use onely, when any of them shall become vacant; being indeed onely five of her Majestie's gift, and the yearly valuation of them five in one summe amounting to only 74*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.*, and not so much better at this day, than their said valuation, that they may be acounted worth one hundred poundes to any thriftie occupier of them. And yet some did unduely esteem them to be of greate value; whereas indeed [to this hour (A. 1594, Ap. 10)] there never came a penny unto me of them; neither is it certain, whither ever or never they shall; but of the charges sustained about the writings and seales to them belonging, I am too certain.

15. By reason hereof in the last years (1591) progress entring at Greenwich, her Majestie was informed by the honourable and very vertuous Countess of Warwick of my great wants still encreasing: and her Majestie was then by the said Countess in most humble manner requested, to grant unto me, upon the next avoydance, the Mastership of St. Crosse's by Winchester, being an office and living of much like quality as St. Katharine's. Whereunto her Majesties most bountifull and provident answer was,

"that I should have it, if it were a living fitt for me:" with which gracious answer I helde my selfe contented; knowing, that her Majestie had, or after that might have bishopricks enough vacant; unto one of which the worshipfull Mr. Doctor Bennet (the present incumbent of the Mastership of St. Crosse's) might be perswaded to be promoted unto by her Majestie; especially if the bishoprick be of better living farr, than S. Crosse's; or by commendams were holpen to be of better revenue. [It is to be noted, that about twenty years agoe her Majestie had granted me the next roome after Doctor Watson: whereupon I hoped to have had that living long since; but at length I found that Dr. Bennet came to it by an avowson, better speeding, than my former grant at her Majestie's hand; Mistris Blanche à Parry and Mistris Skydamore, now the Lady Skydamore, had obtained her Majesties grant to me so long since.]

16. This year also again (A. 1592, at None-such), the same suite was renewed unto her Majestie by the aforesaid Countess of Warwick: as well in respecte of my incredible want of due maintenance, as for that the most Reverend Father in God, this L. Archbishop of Canterbury, his good Grace, very often times, and to diverse hath affirmed, and still doth affirm, that this Mastership of S. Crosse's is a living most fitt for me, and I fitt for it. And also the right honourable Lord Treasurer, since that time and very lately at Hampton court, is of the same mind herein, as the Lord Archbishop is; as his Honour hath very lately to my selfe declared: and with his hand very earnestly smitten on his breast used these verie words* to me, "By my faith, if her Majestie be moved in it by any other for you, I will do what I can with her Majesty to pleasure you therein, Mr. Dee." And so I thanked his Honour humbly, and have great confidence in his Honour's very favourable promise. And the rather seeing her Majesties last answer at Nonesuch was even as the first, "that I should undoubtedly have it, if it were fitt for me;" and moreover willed, that a caveat should be entered for me thereupon, as a most gracious Queene, for the more assurance of her poor servantes releife and comfort. Of which her Majesties most gracious answer, the foresaid L. Archbyshop his good Grace being then at the Court at Nonsuch, was made privy presently; and to the right honourable Lord Treasurer I have my selfe declared it lately at Hampton Court.

17. Since whych time I hearing of byshopricks, some voyde, and some shortly to become voyd, and hearing of divers nominated to be promoted unto them; but hearing no speech made of Mr. Doctor Benet, a man very worthy and sufficient to be a byshop, I began to doubt, that her Majestie hithertoo hath not been given to understand fully the truth of my present very hard case and incredible distress, through unseemely want of all things necessary for due mainteynance of me and myne, contrary to her Majestie's will.

Hereupon on Wednesday was a sevennight the honourable Countess of Warwick prefered my former supplication (set in the begining of this litle booke) unto her Majestie, who very graciously did read it over herselfe, and granted the petition thereof; and so straight way nominated your Honor, Mr. Secretary Wolley, and you, Sir Thomas Gorge Knight, Gentleman of her Majestie's Wardrobe, as being very worthy and sufficient men, right nobly minded, to be the Commissioners, charitably, advisedly, and exactly to heare and see what I have to say or shew unto you, needefull to be considered of; so as speedy and sufficient redress and help may be had thereupon.

The Queens Majestie with her most honourable Privy Councell, and other her lordes and nobility, came purposely to have visited my library; but finding that my wife was within four houres before buried out of the house, her Majestie refused to come in; but willed me to fetch my glass so famous, and to shew unto her some of the properties of it, which I did; her Majestie being taken downe from her horse (by the Earle of Leicester, Master of the horse, by the Church wall of Mortlack), did see some of the properties of that glass, to her Majestie's great contentment and delight, and so in most gracious manner did thank me, &c. 1575. 10 Martii.

A. 1580. Sept. 17. The Queenes Majestie came from Richmond in her coach the higher way of Mortlack field, and when she came right against the Church, she turned downe toward my house; and when she was against my garden in the fielde, her Majestie staied there a good while, and then came into the street at the great gate of the field, where her Majestie espied me at my dore, making reverent and dutifull obeysance unto her; and with her hand her Majestie beckoned for me to come to her, and I came to her coach side; her Majestie then very speedely pulled off her glove and gave me her hand to kiss; and to be short, her Majestie willed me to resort oftner to her Court, and by some of her Privy Chamber to give her Majestie to weete, when I am there, &c.

1580. Oct. 3. About a 11. of the clock before noone I delivered my two Rolls of the Queenes Majesties title to herselfe in the garden at Richmond; when her Majestie very graciously accepting of my endeavor and labour therein, appointed after dinner to heare further of the matter. Therefore betweene one and two in the afternoon, I was sent for into her Highness Privy Chamber, and whether the Lord Treasurer was also come before. Then, upon her Majesties rehearsing with his Honur my endeavors to satisfie her Majestie's desire to understand somewhat effectually of the title to foreine countryes, and of my paines taken in those great Rolls penning downe, required the Lord Treasurer to consider of the matter, the recordes, testimonies, and argumentes by me there sett downe. But though the Lord Treasurer did seeme at first to doubt of the value of the worke, or pithyness thereof, her Majestie wished his Honor to peruse the whole thinge accordingly, and to make report to her Majestie, what he findeth therein, &c. The comandement I received from her Majestie for me to certifie my knowledge herein, may appear by this letter.

1580. Oct. 10. The Queenes Majestie to my great comfort (horâ quintâ) came with her traine from the Court, and at my dore graciously calling me unto her, on horsback exhorted me briefely to take my mother's death patiently: and with all told me, that the Lord Treasurer had greatly commended my doings for her title royall, which he had to examine. The which title in two rolls of velome parchment his Honour had some houres before brought home, and delivered to Mr. Hudson for me to receive at my coming from my mothers buriall at church. Her Majestie remembred also then, how at my wives buriall it was her fortune likewise to call upon me at my house, as before is noted.

1568. more Astronomico, Jan. 11. The right honourable Earle of Penbroke did present my booke of Propædeumata Aphoristica to her Majestie in my behalfe, as I was so advised to doe by the honourable Mr. Secretary Cecill, now Lord Treasurer, to whome I had humbly given one of them the day before; and likewise one to the said Earle to use or give away at his pleasure, and likewise one to the said earle. Within three dayes after the said Earle told me of her Majesties gracious accepting and well liking of the said book; and he gave me very bountifully in his owne behalfe xx lib. to requite such my reverent regard of his Honour.

1568. (more Astron.) Feb. 16. Her Majestie had very gracious talke with me in her Gallery at Westminster (hora 2. vel circiter) as concerning the great secret for my sake to be disclosed unto her Majestie by Nicolaus Grudius Nicolai, sometyme one of the Secretaries to the Emperour Charles the Fifth, &c. What was the hinderance of the perfecting of that purpose on all sides, God best knoweth.

1564. Junii 14. After my retorne from the Emperor's court, her Majestie very graciously vouchsafed to account herselfe my schollar in my booke, written to the Emperor Maximilian, intituled, Monas Hieroglyphica; and said, whereas I had prefixed in the forefront of the book: Qui non intelligit, aut taceat, aut discat: if I would disclose unto her the secretes of that booke, she would et discere et facere; whereupon her Majestie had a litle perusin of the same with me, and then in most heroicall and princely wise did comfort me and encourage me in my studies philosophicall and mathematicall, &c.

CHAPTER V.

SOME MY DUTIFULL SERVICES DONE UNTO HER MAJESTIE IN THE SPACE OF THIRTY-FOUR YEARES AND MORE.

1. Before her Majesties coming to the crowne, I did shew my dutifull good will in some travailes for her Majesties behalfe, to the comfort of her Majesties favourers then, and some of her principall servantes, at Woodstock, and at Milton by Oxford, with Sir Thomas Bendger (then Auditor unto her Majestie), and at London; as Mr. Richard Strange and Mr. John Asheley, now Master of her Majesties Jewell house, might have testified, and as I could have brought to their remembrance.

Upon suspicion of which my service then, and upon the false information given in by one George Ferrys and Prideaux, that I endeavored by enchantmentes to destroy Queene Mary, I was prisoner at Hampton Court, even in the weeke next before the same Whitsontide, that her Majestie was there prisoner also. I remained long prisoner, and all dores of my lodgings in London sealed up; and with other circumstances of griefe, loss, and discredit for a while endured under the keeping of diverse overseers: as first in Court under Sir John Bourne, Secretary: while by writing I answered first four articles, and thereupon eighteen other, administred unto me by the right honourable the Privy Councell. Then from thence I was sent on Whitesun-even with the guard by water to London to the Lord Broke, Justice of the Common Pleas; from thence at length to the Star Chamber: where I was discharged of the suspicion of treason, and was sent to the examining and custody of Byshop Bonner for religious matters. Where also I was prisoner long, and bedfellow with Barthlet Grene, who was burnt: and at length upon the King and Queenes clemency and justice, I was (A. 1555, Augusti 19) enlarged by the Councell's letters; being notwithstanding first bound in recognizance for ready appearance and the good abearing for about some four moneths after; which letter of the Councells is in print here to be seene: as the forepart of this narration may be seen in the records of the Councell Chamber of that yeare, month, and day, if they be extant.

2. Before her Majesties coronacion I wrote at large, and delivered it for her Majesties use by commandement of the Lord Robert, after Earle of Leicester, what in my judgment the ancient astrologers would determine of the election day of such a tyme, as was appointed for her Majestie to be crowned in. Which writing, if it be extant and to be had, wilbe a testimony of my dutifull and carefull endeavour performed in that, which in her Majesties name was enjoyned me: A. 1558.

3. Her Majestie tooke pleasure to heare my opinion of the comet appearing A. 1577: whereas the judgment of some had unduly bred great feare and doubt in many of the Court; being men of no small account. This was at Windsore, where her Majestie most graciously, for three* divers daies, did use me; and, among other pointes, her most excellent Majestie promised unto me great security against any of her kingedome, that would, by reason of any my rare studies and philosophicall exercises, unduly seeke my overthrow. Whereupon I againe to her Majestie made a very faithfull and inviolable promise of great importance. The first part whereof, God is my witnes, I have truly and sincerely performed; though it be not yet evident, how truly, or of what incredible value: The second part by God his great mercyes and helpes may in due tyme be performed, if my plat for the meanes be not misused or defaced.

* Of these three daies at Windsor Mrs. Skydamor, now Lady Skydamor, hath some remembrance.

4. My carefull and faithfull endeavours was with great speede required (as by divers messages sent unto me one after another in one morning) to prevent the mischiefe, which divers of her Majesties Privy Councell suspected to be intended against her Majesties person, by meanes of a certaine image of wax, with a great pin stuck into it about the brest of it, found in Lincolnes Inn fields, &c., wherein I did satisfie her Majesties desire, and the Lords of the honourable Privy Councell within few houres, in godly and artificiall manner: as the honourable Mr. Secretary Willson, whome, at the least, I required, to have by me a witnes of the proceedings: which his Honor before me declared to her Majestie, then sitting without the Privy Garden by the landing place at Richmond: the honorable Earle of Leicester being also by.

5. My dutifull service was done, in the diligent conference, which, by her Majesties commandment, I had with Mr. Dr. Bayly, her Majesties Physitian, about her Majesties grievous pangs and paines by reason of toothake and the rheume, &c. A. 1578, October.

6. My very painefull and dangerous winter journey, about a thousand five hundred myles by sea and land, was undertaken and performed to consult with the learned physitians and philosophers beyond the seas for her Majesties health-recovering and preserving; having by the right honourable Earle of Leicester, and Mr. Secretary Walsingham but one hundred dayes allowed unto me to goe and come againe in, A. 1578. My pas-port here may somewhat give evidence, and the journall litle book of every dayes journey or abode for those hundred dayes account may suffice.

7. My great, faithfull, and carefull attendance about the Lady Marquess of Northampton (A. 1564) both beyond the seas, on the seas, and here in England, was performed with her Majesties good will and well liking of. Whereupon her Majestie was the more willing, at the suite of the said Lady Marquiss, to give unto me, for some recompence, the deanery of Glocester; but I was disappointed, as I have before specified, of the enjoying of it.

8. My faithfull diligence and earnest labour, with some cost, was bestowed, by her Majesties commandment, to set down in writing, with hydrographicall and geographicall description, what I then had to shew or say, as concerning her Majesties title royall to any forreine countries. Whereof, the two parchment great rolls full writtin, of about xii whole velome-skinns, are good witnes here before you. For coppy whereof I have refused an hundred poundes in money offred by some subjectes of this kingdome: but it was not meete for me to take it.

9. My dutifull labour, commanded by her Majestie, upon the Gregorian publishing of a Reformation of the vulgar Julian yeare, may here appeare unto you in these two written bookes, having ben read and examined by learned mathematitians (therto assigned by the honourable Lords of the Councell) and by their skylls also warranted; and by the Lords of the Councell and by the Barons of the Exchequer well liked off, for the manner of execution of it without any publique cumber or damage, &c. A. 1582.

10. I sent very dutifully, humbly, and faithfully out of Bohemia (A. 1585) letters unto her sacred Majestie, requesting an expert, discreet, and trusty man to be sent unto me into Bohemia, to heare and see, what God had sent unto me and my friendes there at that tyme; at which tyme, and till which tyme, I was chief governour of our philosophicall proceedings; and by both our concentes, there was somewhat prepared and determined upon to have ben sent unto her Majestie, if the required messenger had been sent by her Majestie unto us. But not long after (so soone as it was perceived, that my faithfull letters were not regarded therein) by lithe and lithe I became hindered and crossed to performe my dutifull and chiefe desire; and that, by the fyne and most subtill devises and plotts laid, first by the Bohemians, and somewhat by Italians, and lastly by some of my owne countrymen. God best knoweth how I was very ungodly dealt withall, when I meant all truth, sincerity, fidelity, and piety towardes God, and my Queene and country.

And so to conclude this chapter: if in any other pointes, besides the forerehearsed, I have done my dutifull service any way to her Majesties well liking and gracious accepting, I am greatly bound to thanke Allmighty God, and during my lyfe to frame the best of my little skill to doe my bounden duty to her most excellent Majestie.

Her sacred Majestie best knoweth my sincere, zealous, constant, and dutifull fidelity towardes her.

CHAPTER VI.

MY LABORS AND PAINES BESTOWED AT DIVERS TYMES TO PLEASURE MY NATIVE COUNTRY BY WRITING OF DIVERS BOOKES AND TREATISES; SOME IN LATINE, SOME IN ENGLISH, AND SOME OF THEM WRITTEN AT HER MAJESTIES COMMANDEMENT.

OF which bookes and treatises some are printed, and some unprinted.

The printed Bookes and Treatises are these following:

1. Propædeumata Aphoristica, de præstantioribus quibusdam naturæ virtutibus Aphorismi 120. Impr. Londini anno 1558 et anno 1567.

2. Monas Hieroglyphica, ad Regem Romanorum Maximilianum: Antverpiæ. 1564.

3. Epistola ad eximium Ducis Urbini Mathematicum, Fredericum Commandinum, præfixa libello Machometi Bagdedini de superficierum divisionibus, edito operâ meâ et ejusdem Commandini Urbinatis: Pisauri A°. 1570.

4. The British Monarchi, otherwise named, The petie Navy Royall—A. 1576.

5. The English Euclids Preface Mathematicall; wherein are many arts of me wholly invented (by name, difinition, and propriety, or use) more than either the Græcian or Roman mathematitians have left to our knowledge. A. 1570.

6. My divers and many Annotations and Inventions dispersed and added in and after the tenth booke of the aforesaid English Euclid. A. 1570.

7. Epistola mea præfixa Ephemeridibus Joannis Feldi A. 1557, cui rationem declaraveram Ephemerides conscribendi.

8. Paralacticæ Commentationis praxeosque Nucleus quidam: A. 1573, impress. Londini.

The unprinted bookes and treatises are these, some perfectly finished, and some unfinished yet.

1. The great Volume of famous and rich discoveries; wherein also is the History of King Salomon, every three yeares, his Ophirian voyage, with divers other rarities—written A. 1576.

2. The British Complement of the perfect art of Navigation. A great booke, in which are contained our Queene Elisabeth her tables gubernautick for longitudes and latitudes finding most easily and speedily, yea, if neede be, without sight of sun, moon, or star: with many other new and needefull inventions gubernautik.—A. 1576.

3. Her Majesties title Royall to many forraine countreys, kingdomes, and provinces: in 12 Velam skins of parchment, faire written for her Majesties use, and by her Majesties commandment.—A. 1578.

4. De imperatoris nomine, authoritate, et potentia: dedicated to her Majestie in English.—A. 1579.

5. De triangulorum areis libri demonstrati 3.—A. 1560.

6. De speculis comburentibus libri 6.—A. 1557.

7. De usu Globi Cœlestis: ad Regem Edoardum Sextum A. 1550.

8. Περὶ ἀναβιβασμῶν ϑεολογικῶν, lib. 3. A. 1558.

9. Prolegomena et dictata Parisiensia in Euclidis Elementorum Geometricorum librum primum et secundum in Collegio Rhemensi.—A. 1550.

10. De Trigono, circinoque analogico. Opusculum Mathematicum et Mechanicum lib. 4.—A. 1565.

11. De stella admiranda in Cassiopeiæ Asterismo, cœlitus demissa ad orbem usque Veneris, iterumque in cœli penetralia perpendicularitèr retracta. Lib. 3. A. 1573.

12. Hipparchus redivivus, tractatulus. 1573.

13. De Acribologia Mathematica; opus magnum lib. 16, anno 1555.

14. Hemisphærii Borealis Geographica atque Hydrographica descriptio; longè a vulgatis chartis diversa: Anglis quibusdam versus Atlantidis septentrionalia litora navigationem instituentibus dono data A. 1583.

15. Navigationis ad Cathayum per septentrionalia Scythiæ et Tartariæ litora delineatio Hydrographica: Arthuro Pitt et Carolo Jackmanno versus illas partes navigaturis in manus tradita.—A. 1580.

16. Atlantidis, vulgariter Indiæ Occidentalis nominatæ, emendatior descriptio, quam adhuc est evulgata.—A. 1580.

17. De modo Evangelii Jesu Christi publicandi, propagandi, stabiliendi inter Infideles Atlanticos. Volumen magnum lib. 4, (anno 1581), quorum primus spectat ad Reginam nostram potentissimam; secundus ad sui Privati Concilii Senatores; tertius ad Regem Hispaniæ; Quartus ad Pontificem Romanum.

18. Mercurius cœlestis lib. 24. A. 1550. Lovanii script.

19. De nubium, solis, lunæ, ac reliquorum planetarum, immo ipsius stelliferi cœli, ab infimo terræ centro, distantiis, mutuisque intervallis, et eorundem omnium magnitudine. Liber ἀποδεικτικὸς ad Edoardum VI. Angliæ Regem. A. 1551.

20. Aphorismi Astrologici 300. A. 1553.

21. De itinere subterraneo lib. 2. A. 1560.

22. De perspectivâ illâ, quâ peritissimi utuntur Pictores. A. 1557.

23. De tertiâ et præcipuâ Perspectivæ parte, quæ de radiorum fractione tractat, libri tres demonstrati. A. 1559.

24. Speculum unitatis A. 1557, sive Apologia pro fratre Rogero Bachone.

25. De annuli Astronomici multiplici usu lib. 2.—1557.

26. Inventum mechanicum paradoxum de novâ ratione delineandi circumferentiam circularem; unde valdè rara alia dependent inventa. lib. 1. A. 1556.

27. Trochilica inventa mea lib. 2. A. 1558.

28. De unico Mago, et triplici Herode, eoque Antichristiano lib. 1. A. 1570.

29. Cabbalæ Hebraicæ compendiosa tabella. A. 1562.

30. De hominis corpore, spiritu, et animâ—libellus.—A. 1591.

31. Reipublicæ Britannicæ Synopsis—in English.—A. 1565.

32. My Hieroglyphical and Philosophical blason of the crest or cognisance, lawfully confirmed to my antient armes lib. 1, 1574.

33. An advice and discourse for her Majestie about the Reformation of the vulgar Julian year, by her Majesties and the right honourable Council their commandment, lib. 2.—A. 1582.

34. Certain considerations and conferrings together of these three (anciently accounted) Oracles, Nosce teipsum, Homo homini Deus, Homo homini lupus.

35. The compendious rehearsall of John Dee his dutifull declaration A. 1592.

36. An Appendix of two years time and more, which belongs to this treatise.

With many other bookes, pamphlets, discourses, inventions, and conclusions in divers arts and matters, whose names neede not in this abstract to be notified. The most part of all these here specified lye here before your Honours on the table on your left hand: but by other books and writings of an other sort (if God grant me health and life thereto of some ten or twelve years) I may hereafter make plain and without doubt this sentence to be true, Plura latent, quam patent.

Mark and remember.

And these bookes and treatises here noted are neither noted by order of yeares, or as they were written; or in any method here set downe one after the other; but as (upon this suddaine occasion, to make the truth herein manifest to your Honours eyes) they came next to my hand out of divers chests and baggs, wherein they lay.

CHAPTER VII.

A BRIEFE NOTE AND SOME REMEMBRANCE OF MY LATE SPOYLED MORTLAKE LIBRARY. A. 1583.

The divers bookes of my late library, printed and anciently written, bownd and unbound, were in all neere 4000: the fourth part of which were the written bookes. The vallue of all which bookes, by the estimation of men skillfull in the arts, whereof the bookes did and doe intreat, and that in divers languages, was well £2000. And, to make this valuacion probable unto your Honour, behold yet here these foure written bookes, one in Greeke, this great volume; two in French; and this in High Dutch. They cost me and my friends for me £533, as may appeare by the writings and remembrances here written on them. What is then to be thought of the value of some one hundred of the best of all the other written bookes, of which some were the autographia of excellent and seldome heard-of authors? The furniture of the said library was of my getting together in above forty yeares tyme from divers places beyond the seas, and some by my great search and labour gotten here in England.

To my library were also apperteyning, certaine rare and exquisitely made instruments mathematicall. Among which was one excellent, strong, and faire quadrant (first made by that famous Richard Chancellor), of five foote semidiameter: wherewith he and I made sundry observations meridian of the sun's height; as partly may appeare by our writings in my Ephemerides, A.1554, et A°.1555. And after his tyme many yeares, the same instrument was new trymmed, and the divisions in divers exact manners thereon defigned; and so cost my friend 20 lib. (the right worshipfull Mr. Bromfield, late Lieutenant of the ordinances, at whose handes I had it) but now I finde it most barbarously spoyled and with hammers smitt in peeces.

There was also an excellent radius Astronomicus of ten foot longe, having the staff and cross very curiously divided into parts equall, after Richard Chancellour's Quadrante-manner. The great instrument was in such a frame placed and layd, that it might most easily be weilded of any man to any position for practise in heavenly observations or mensurations on earth.

Two globes of Gerardus Mercators best making; on which were my divers reformations, both geographicall and celestiall: and on the celestiall with my hand were set downe divers comettes, their places, and motions, as of me they had been observed.

There were also divers other instrumentes, as the theorick of the eighth spheare, the nynth and tenth, with an horizon and meridian of copper, of Gerhardus Mercator his owne making for me purposely.

The excellent magnes stone.

There were sea-compasses of divers sorts and for variation. And there was a magnes-stone, commonly called a load stone, of great vertue, which was sold out of the library but for v shill. and for it afterwards (yea peece-meal divided) was more than xx lib. given in money and value.

There was also an excellent watch-clock made by one Dibbley, a noteable workman, long since dead, by which clock the tyme might sensibly be measured in the seconds of an houre, that is, not to faile the 360th part of an houre. The use of this clock was very great, more then vulgar.

To my library likewayes was a very necessary appendix, which was a great case or frame of boxes, wherein some hundreds of very rare evidences of divers Irelandish territories, provinces, and lands were layd up. Which territories, provinces, and lands were therein notified to have been in the hands of some of the ancient Irish Princes. Then, their submissions and tributes agreed upon, with seales appendant to the litle writings thereof in parchment: and after by some of those evidences did it appeare, how some of those lands came to be the Lascies, the Mortuomars, the Burghes, the Clares, &c.

There were also divers evidences antient of some Welsh princes and noblemen, their great giftes of lands to the foundations or enrichings of sundry houses of religious men. Some also were there the like of the Normans donations and gifts about and some yeares after the conquest. The former sundry sort of evidences each had their peculiar titles noted on the fore part of the boxes with chalk only, which on the poore boxes remaineth; better to be seen now, then the evidences, which before had remained to be seene so many hundred yeares; but now by undue meanes imbeziled away every one of them: which is a loss of great value in sundry respects, as antiquaries can testifie for their part; and noble heralds can tell, for their skill: and as her Majesties officers for her interest and titles royall may think in their consideration, &c.

But your honors may also understand, that by this box stood another, far less (as of about 2 foot long, and a foot and a halfe high), wherein were only ancient seales of arms, belonging sometyme to ancient evidences: about some of which the prince, nobleman, or gentleman his name was to be seene, to whome it did appertaine.

Which box is quite carried out of the place unto which it was fitted, and so embeziled from me.

The truth of this part of my declaration to your Honours, before my last going over beyond the seas, was well knowne to divers, who had skyll, and were of office to deale with such monimentes; as were divers of her Majesties heralds, who saw them, and tooke some notes out of them: other of the Clerks of the Records in the Tower satt whole dayes at my house in Mortlake, in gathering rarities to their liking out of them: some antiquaries likewise had view of them.

Unto the Tower I had vowed these my hardly gotten monimentes (as in manner out of a dunghill, in the corner of a church, wherein very many were utterly spoyled by rotting, through the raine continually for many yeares before falling on them, through the decayed roofe of that church, lying desolate and wast at this houre): but truly well deserve they the imprisonment of the Tower, that will now still keepe them, if any publique warning by her Majestie or her right honorable Councell were given for restitution of them to the office in the Tower.

Of other rarities, left in my chiefe and open library, I will not make here any further rehearsall; but whosoever came by one great bladder with about four pound weight, of a very sweetish thing, like a brownish gum in it, artificially prepaired by thirty tymes purifying of it, hath more then I could well affoord him for one hundred crownes; as may be proved by witnesses yet living, &c.

To my foresaid library and studies, may my three laboratories, serving for Pyrotechnia, be justly accounted an appendix practical. The furniture of which and of all the storehouses, chambers, and garrets, belonging and replenished with chemical stuff, was (for above twenty years) of my getting together, farr and neere, with great paines, costs and danger; as partly Mr. Powell, her Majesties servant at this present, can testifie for one journey, wherein he tooke paines with me, into the dukedom of Lorraine: (A. 1571) and we brought from thence one great cart lading of purposely made vessells, &c. Your honors may easily believe me, that partly the building of new, and ordering of former buildings to my purposes herein, with all the foresaid furniture of vessells (some of earth, some of mettall, some of glass, and some of mixt stuff) with materialls to be used or prepared in divers sorts, cost me first and last above £200. All which furniture and provision, and many things already prepared, is unduly made away from me by sundry meanes, and a few spoiled or broken vessells remaine, hardly worth forty shillings.

CHAPTER VIII.

SOME OF MY DAMAGES AND LOSSES UNDUELY SUSTAINED IN ENGLAND WITHIN THE SPACE OF THESE NINE YEARES LAST PAST, AND THAT CONTRARY TO HER MAJESTIES MOST GRACIOUS CAVEAT AND EXPRESSE COMMANDMENT IN THE MOST PART OF IT.

First, the taking of my two rectories from me (I mean both the rents of these nine* years now past, and also the title and right, which I had to enjoy them during my lyfe) they yielding unto me yearely £80, causeth the damage susteyned in rent only to be £720, and in the value of them for my lyfe tyme ensuing, by common estimation rated of five years continuance, maketh the damage to be lawfully and reasonably estimated at £400 more. And so in totall summ, by the one means and the other, the damage to be of - - - - - - - *£1120

* Now ten years and more, and so £800.

* Of £1200 for the said ten years and my lyfe tyme after common opinion.

Some of my other losses may thus be specified; first the loss of all my household stuff here left, and committed to Nicholas Fromonds his safe custody for me, till my retorne or sending to him, intended to be within one yeare and eight moneths; and so writings and covenants thereupon made, sealed and delivered, and here to be shewed yet. But he unduely sold it presently upon my departure, or caused it to be carried away. And the value thereof may appear by these true inventories to have been more worth than one hundred pounds - - - - £100

The loss and spoil of my furniture of Laboratories - £100

For by their own estimation, recorded in Inventorie, they set downe the value thereof fourescore pounds save one.

The loss by bookes of my foresaid library, yet wanting, and not restored according to the order, taken by the four Commissioners assigned by the right honourable privy Councell therein (whereupon there is a thousand marks forfeited unto me of a debtor unsufficient to pay), the bookes being above 500, I meane of such, as may be gotten for money, and so their value known; for some wanting are not to be gotten for money at any mart, or in any stationer's shop, they being very rare and excellent good bookes; the value of this loss is evident to be above £150 - - - £150

The loss of my Mathematicall Instruments; as of the Quadrant of five foot semidiameter, the paire of Gerardus Mercator his best Globes, the Theorick of the eighth spheare, and the Astronomer's staff - - - - - - - £30

The watch clock so truly shewing not only the minutes, but also the seconds of an houre, the excellent Magnes-stone and divers sea compasses and chartes geographicall - - - £10

Of this second sort of losses the totall sum amounteth to £390

Both which totall sums of damages and losses being added together make summam summarum totalem - - £1510

These last nine yeares damages and loses £1510.

CHAPTER IX.

THE CHARGES OF MY LAST RETORNE FROM BEYOND THE SEAS, A. 1589, BEING FAVOURABLY CALLED HOME BY HER MAJESTIE FROM TREBON CASTLE IN BOHEMIA.

My journey of remove homeward from Trebon castle to Staden cost me more than 3000 dollars, which we account at - £600

Besides the cost of fifteen horses, wherewith I travelled all that journey; of which the twelve, which drew my three coaches, were very good and young Hungarian horses, and the other three were Wallachees for the sadle; which fifteen cost one with the another - - - - - - £120

The three new coaches made purposely for my foresaid journey, with the furniture for the twelve coach horses and with the sadles and bridles for the rest, cost more than threescore pounds - £60

The charge of waines to carry my goods from Trebon to Staden, they being sometymes two, and sometymes three (for more easy and light passage in some places), cost above an hundred and ten pounds: which I account (for an hundred of it) under the former som of £600.

Under which £600 also I doe account the charges of the twenty-four soldiers well appointed, which, by vertue of the Emperor's pasport, I tooke up in my way from Diepholt, and againe from Oldenborgh: the charges of the six harquebusiers and musquettiers, which the Earle of Oldenburgh lent me out of his owne garrison there: I gave to one with another a doler a man for the day, and their meat and drinke free. For the first, eighteen enemies horsemen well appointed from Lingen and Wilshusen had laine five dayes attending thereabouts to have set upon me and myne: and at Oldeborch, a Scot (one of the garrison) gave me warning of an ill minded company, lying and hovering for me in the way, which I was to pass, as by his letter may appeare here present. Of the former danger the Lantgrave of Hess his letters unto me may give some evidence.

The charges of the foure Swart-Ruiters, very well mounted and appointed to attend on me to Staden from Breame, being honourably and very carefully sent unto me by the noble consuls and senators of Breme, and that with a friendly farewell (delivered unto me by the speech of one of their secretaries at my lodgings), neede not be specified here what it was. For their going with me in two daies to Staden, their abode there, and as much homeward, being in all five dayes charges - - - 30 dolars.

This was a very dangerous tyme to ride abroad in thereabouts, as the merchants of Staden can well remember. 1589, in November.

The excellent learned theologien, the Superintendent of Breme, Mr. Dr. Christopher Pezelius his verses, printed the night before that my going from Breme, and the morning of my departure openly delivered to me partly, and partly distributed to the company of students and citizens attending about us to see us sett forth, and to bid us farewell, may be a memorial of some of my good credit grown in that city, and of the day of my coming from it.

I will not inlarge mo lines to specifie, what other charges I was at to further some of her Majesties services at my lying at Breme, as 70 dolars given or lent to one Conradus Justus Newbrenner, and about 40 given to gett some letters of great importance brought over to our Soveraigns right honourable Privy Council in due tyme.

The charge of my fraught and passage from Staden to London; for my goods, my selfe, my wife, children and servants - £10

So that the total summe of money spent and layd out in and for my remove from Trebone to London doth amount to - £796

	Whereby the whole summe of the former	£
2510	damages and losses - - - -	1510
796	And the removing charges - - -	796
———		———
2306	doth amount, (with the least,) to - -	2306

Besides the 110 dolars disbursed at Breame for dutifull love of Queene and Country.

CHAPTER X.

THE HARD MAKING OF PROVISION FOR SOME HUNDRED POUNDS, FOR THE NEEDEFUL MAINTEYNANCE OF ME, MY WIFE, OUR CHILDREN, AND FAMILY, FOR THESE THREE LAST YEARES, AND THAT BUT WITH A MEANE DYET AND SIMPLE APPARELL: I HAVING NOT ONE PENY OF CERTAINE FEE, REVENUE, STIPEND, OR PENSION, EITHER LEFT ME, OR RESTORED UNTO ME, OR OF ANY YET BESTOWED ON ME.

Being, by the favour, protection, and helpe of Almighty God, now come home into my native country, just three yeares since, and finding my selfe barred, and, contrary to her Majesties very gracious commandment, cut off from all receipt of rents for my two rectories, Upton and Long-Ledman for ever, and wanting yet the yearely large allowance, promised me, during my lyfe, out of Bohemia, and neither hearing nor perceiving here of any certaine help or releife coming or likely to come to me speedely, and still continuing along (as for these thirty four years, I have already done) in good hope and confidence reposed in the bountifull promises and grants of her sacred Majestie: I found it needefull to use the favour and helpe of God in trying some of my old friends and acquaintance, and to use some other meanes to save us from hunger starving, till her Majesties bountifull blessing might at the length, one tyme or another, be fruitfully assured unto me. And in that assay I found my first helpers and releivers, even two of those, who before my last going over, had used me otherwise then justly or friendly.

After that good beginning, other my friends, one after another, as they understood of my slender ability (or rather great want) for our very needfull mainteynance, they put to their helping hands in divers manners; whereby, within the space of these three years last, I have received of them in money towards some of my charges-bearing the som of £500 and more: and that notwithstanding I have been constrained now and then to send parcells of my little furniture of plate to pawne upon usury; and that did I soe oft, till no more could be sent. After the same manner went my wive's jewells of gold, rings, braceletts, chaines, and other our rarities, under the thraldome of the usurer's gripes: till non plus was written upon the boxes at home. 3. Besides these meanes I was forced to borrow some good somms of money upon bonds with sureties, ita tamen ut nummus nummum pareret to my creditor. 4. I found some few of other friends, of which some upon my owne bill only, others upon my word and promise only, have very charitably lent me some pretty soms of money in this undue distress. And 5. Upon another kinde of credit; as upon remembrances kept by skore, talley, shop-booke, or other note-bookes, I am become debtor of no small sommes. The total somme of all which money, either to me given, or in any manner of the former waies by me borrowed, or upon skore, tally, shop-booke, or other note-booke credited, amounteth to £833. Of which somme whatsoever is more than the £500 given, remaineth at this present day due debt, which is £333.

The particular true accounts of all these gifts, loanes, and debts upon skore, talley, or booke, are here before your Honours; which I beseech you to looke over, and to consider of them especially, how the usury devoureth me, and how the skore, talley, and booke debts doe dayly put me to shame in many places and with many men; some of them having been required of me, or at my house, very often tymes within these four moneths. What can I answer to such without shame or great griefe of minde? But where the fault lyeth, God Almighty he knoweth, and he cheifely can redress it.

Of which former totall summe of £833 your Honour seeth here, how much hath been paid in extraordinary debts and expenses, as one hundred pounds to enjoy my house in quiet (as before tyme) by the order: £40 my debt at Breme: £20 already for usury, &c., and soe in all £267, which being deducted from the £833, leaveth the ordinary charges of house keeping for these three yeares last, to have been £566, and that with great parsimony used. And hereunto must be added the value of many gifts and helps for our house keeping sent to me by good friends; as vessells of wine, whole brawnes, sheepe, wheat, pepper, nutmegg, ginger, sugar, &c., and other things for the apparell of me, my wife, and our children. The value of all which to be rated in mony, may well be judged to have been above £50, which added to the former £566, yeeldeth the total summe of the charges of house keeping to have been £616. Whereof undoubtedly the £600 hath been spent in meate, drinke, and fuell, and the other 16 odd pounds may be allowed for the apparell stuff, bestowed on us by guift.

Thus your honours most briefly do perceive, how mercifully our God hath been unto us, and bountifull in his provision hitherto, by preparing and enclining the charitable hearts and ready hands of some true Christians, her Majesties loving subjects, to cloath the naked, and to feede the hungry, &c. Of which charitable points and some more I and myne have tasted in these three last yeares: wherein the Almighty hath tryed our faith and trust in him and in his word. And even he hath now opened the eyes and eares of her most gracious Majestie, and inclined her most mercifull heart to see, heare, and grant the most humble supplication of her true, faithfull, dutifull, and obedient servant: to whose most bountifull and most gracious speedy succour and reliefe, both the almighty God for his part, and I for myne, doe committ the whole cause at this present, upon your honours convenient report made therein unto her most excellent Majestie.

CHAPTER XI.

MY LAMENTABLE AND FINALL COMPLAINT, AND MOST FERVENT PETITION.

SEEING therefore by God his most secret providence and purpose, with his helping hand, I have (very patiently and with good hope) used and enjoyed the five former honest and lawfull means of provision makeing to preserve my selfe, my wife, our children, and family from hunger-sterving and nakednes the space of these whole and just three* yeares last past; and that notwithstanding have in the meane space very often made declaration to our superiours of the great distress and incredible want, unto which I was unduely brought; and partly by reason, that her most gracious Majesties favour towards me and her express commandment royall for my sufficient mainteynance and reliefe-enjoying, hath not hitherto byn so regarded, as any fruit, or one penny yearely revenue is thereby assured unto me yet:

* and now 4 yeares and 5 moneths last past.

And seeing noe one way of all the five former manners of remedies (which I have been forced to use for these three yeares, for the most needefull mainteynance of me, my wife, children, and family); seeing no one, no one (I say the third tyme) of those five waies doth now remain any longer to be enjoyed by any seemely order to our knowledge, and that my onely house is left to be sold outright, and that for halfe the money it cost me, wherewith to pay some of my debts and not all: what, I beseech your Honors, may I doe or shall I doe lawfully henceforward; whereby I may prevent, that I and myne shall not be registered in chronicles or annalls to the posterity of true studients for a warning not to follow my steps; and thereby to be soe unjustly, unchristianly, and unnaturally so long forced and driven to such very disgracefull shifts and full of indignities (as they may full well be termed, if my former declaration be duly considered); yea, at length to be left remediless of such inconvenient shifts also, and to be brought even to the very next instant of stepping out of dores (my house being sold) I and myne, with botles and wallets furnished to become wanderers as homish vagabonds; or, as banished men to forsake the kingdome?

And even now am constrained to mortgage my house for £400 onely, to pay presently my debts, grown on me forcibly within these 4 last yeares only.

But if a number, accounted studients in this kingdome, who can spend yearely by ecclesiasticall livings four hundred pounds in value or revenue, as for reward of their well doing, or for maintenance of their studies, should be constrain'd to leese those their four hundred pound revenues to me; unless they could with six daies warning ballance downe the pith of this dayes my declaration, with a better of theirs in all respects, undoubtedly then should I not be long destitute of sufficient ability and mainteynance for me and myne.

Therefore seeing the blinded lady, Fortune, doth not governe in this commonwealth, but justitia and prudentia, and that in better order, then in Tullie's Republica or bookes of Offices they are laied forth to be followed and performed, most reverently and earnestly (yea, in manner with bloody teares of heart), I and my wife, our seaven children, and our servants (seaventeene of us in all), do this day make our petition unto your Honors, that upon all godly, charitable, and just respects had of all that, which this day you have scene, heard, and perceived, you will make such report unto her most excellent Majestie (with humble request for speedy reliefe), that we be not constrained to do or suffer otherwise, then becometh Christians, and true, faithfull, and obedient subjects to doe or suffer; and all for want of due mainteynance.

Mark I pray you.

CHAPTER XII.

THE RESOLUTION FOR GENERALL, VERY EASY, AND SPEEDY REMEDY, IN THIS RARE AND LAMENTABLE CASE.

Undoubtedly, her most excellent Majesties gracious grant by word of mouth, yea four times within these three last yeares already pronounced in my behalfe of the Mastership of St. Crosses, or of the Wardenship of Winchester, or Provostship of Eaton, or Mastership of Sherborn, or such like, being speedily performed and assured unto me, and of me enjoyed, may be a sufficient remedy against all inconveniences, otherwise most likely to ensue: the extreame pinch of all manner of want for meat, drinke, fewell, cloth, &c., incredibly tormenting me and myne at this present, after three yeares continuall my very hard getting and making of provision for our most needeful mainteynance, even to the uttermost and last meanes used therein: alwaies notwithstanding with great good hope (from moneth to moneth) that, in respect of her most excellent Majesties very great favour towards me; and in respect of her most gracious and expresse commandement divers tymes by word of mouth and letter declared therein; I should ere this have been otherwise and more charitably regarded: and so some sufficient and certaine reliefe and mainteynance should have been bestowed on me ere this.

CHAPTER XIII.

SUNDRY GOOD REASONS, WHY I RATHER DESIRE SAINCT CROSSE'S, THAN ANY OTHER LIVING, FEE, OR DIGNITY OF LIKE VALUE TO BE HAD IN ANY OTHER PLACE.

1. Because I would faine retyre my selfe for some yeares ensuing from the multitude and haunt of my common friends, and other, who visit me. Which thing without offense, and loss, or breach of some folkes friendship, cannot be conveniently performed, while

I continually am at my house at Mortlake; the passage and way to my house there is so easy, neere, and of light cost from London or court.

2. The glasshouses of Sussex and other (which may be found, or made very serviceable to some needefull my exercises in perspective and other works philosophicall) are farr neerer there, than they are to Mortlacke. By reason whereof I can myselfe soe oversee the workemen and workemanship, for better matter and shape of glass works and instruments-making, and that with more speede, and also with better order taking for secreting some rarities therein from vulgar sophisters eyes or tongues, then I can so easily and conveniently doe, while I remain in Mortlake.

3. Fuell, coales, brick, and certaine other necessary furniture for my purposes, I may have thereabouts better cheape, and more conveniently as I hope, then where I now remaine.

4. The store of roomes and lodgings, which St. Crosses house may yeeld, are most necessary for divers my purposes of my dutifull service performing in due tyme to her Majestie and thes my native country. As 1. For our learned men to be entertained and lodged in, in far better manner, than I could doe in Mortlacensi Hospitali Philosophorum peregrinantium in tymes past; and so for me to have conference with them and their helpe. 2. For lodging conveniently several mechanicall servants in. 3. For a printing house to be set up in for divers good, rare, and antient bookes in Greeke and Latine, and some of my owne to be printed with my owne ordering and oversight, &c.

5. I desire that living, in respect of the sufficiency of victuals, which that living may yeeld for such a company, as I desire, and shall have neede of, if I may have my will. And the easy manner of coming by those victualls there is very needefull for true and earnest studients.

6. The respect I have of the good order of divine service there to be mainteyned, doth very greatly move me to desire to enjoy such an oppertunity within my own house to traine up and inure my owne children and family with that most Christian exercise of prayer.

7. By the meanes of that living in my use, I shall become of better ability and credit, and so be better able to allure and win unto me rare and excellent men from all parts of Christendome (and perhaps some out of farder regions); especially when they shall by me understand, that with me now and in such a solitary and commodious place, they may dwell in freedome, security, and quietnes, under her Majesties unviolable protection by her sacred vow and promise to God warranted, and under her Majesties great seal, to me and my assistants and servantes, during my life, and a year and a day after, to all and every one of them authentically and royally confirmed.

8. I desire that living and in that place, chiefly in respect of the south sea-coast of England, not farr of; and thereby to enjoy the commodious sending over into divers places beyond the seas for things and men very necessary; and for to have the more commodious place for the secret arrival of special men to come unto me there at St. Crosses: some of which men would be loath to be seene or heard of publickly in court or city.

And to conclude, though more might be said (as in respect of Winchester schoole at hand for my four sons to become grammariens in, and for my some helpe-having among the good Greek and Latin grammarians, and faire writers in that schoole, for some bookes copying out for her Majestie, &c.) yet these former eight generall reasons, being sincerely, truly, and advisedly alleadged, may suffice; especially when the favour, good-will, and grant thereto of her most excellent Majestie are already herein very graciously declared; and the well liking of the Lord Archbyshop of Canterbury his good Grace, and of the right honourable the Lord Treasurer also are to me by their Honours words and promises to myselfe herein assured.

CHAPTER XIV.

SOME GOOD FRUITE LIKELY TO ENSUE OF THE FORESAID SPEEDY AND SUFFICIENT MY RELIEFE AND MAINTEYNANCE.

1. By this meanes her Majestie shall highly please the eternall and almighty God, in executing for him and in him the verity of his mercifull promises, generally made to all his sincere worshippers. Quis enim speravit in Domino, et confusus est? And so I may hereby yeeld unto God very duly these thankes; Ostendisti mihi tribulationes multas et malas: sed tandem de profundis abyssis eduxisti me, by the most dearly beloved, our most gracious Queene Elizabeth.

2. By this meanes, officiosus, fidelis et sincerus operarius for many yeares past, shall receive not only mercedem honorificam, but donum Regium also of his most gracious soveraigne Lady, et licet longo post tempore venit (candidior postquam tondenti barba cadebat) respexit tamen.

3. And the justice of this word, Nemo militat propriis stipendiis, wilbe divinely mainteyned by such her Majesties most excellent bountifulness.

4. And moreover, where some her most excellent Majesties subjects have wronged or wrung me greately heretofore; by these her most gracious Majesties bountifull and charitable guift, all wil be superabundantly recompenced.

5 By this reliefe (sufficient for mainteynance for some yeares next ensuing) divers antient, rare, and excellent good monumentes, historicall and philosophicall, and also late invented and written bookes, of no vulgar argument, may come to be either faire written for her Majesties use, and her libraries, or else to be published by print with diligent oversight and due correction.

6. By this her most excellent Majesties very divine helping me in this sort, and I being in the lamentable case before specified, her Majesties most renowned and incomparable monarchicall diadem of fame shall throughout all Christendome and further receive, if it be possible, some new reverence, and have many new devout vowes and hearty good wishes unto it yeilded, among the nobly and vertuously disposed of all degrees; as partly may be made probable by the contents and intents of the 2. and 3. chapters before, &c.

7. And to conclude, by this her most gracious Majesties actuall favour towardes me (after her very many other); and by this her blessed (as it were) putting forth of her sacred hand (in the very opportunity of tyme) to helpe me upon foote againe, who have had so great a fall, and have so longe been kept downe, by some men's first tripping of my feete, and by others afterwardes overlying me by worldly policy, subtile practise, and rigorous advantages sought for and used. Truly in respect, I say, hereof, as well for the generall duty of a servant and subject, as for that my heart is inflamed with wonderfull zeale of thankfullness for these helpes and comforts; sundry not only my dutifull, but also unlooked for services of importance to her most excellent Majestie may the better, with most hearty and ready good will, and with diligent endeavour and at all best opportunities, be brought to pass; and some of them to be such, as may be to the great honor of our Almighty God also, and for noe small benefit to the whole kingdome: the same God granting me continuance (with his grace and helpe) for some few yeares yet to come, of my earthly race.

THE GENERALE END.

Thus dutifully, humbly, and reverently I have said and shewed unto your Honours this day such matter, as my very lamentable case requireth to be speedely knowne unto her most excellent Majestie. To whome I most heartily beseech the almighty and most bountifull King of Kings to grant in peace all prosperity and felicity; and in wars most victorious triumph against her enimies in the service of God: and in the defence and recovery of her most gracious Majesties Royall right.

Amen. Amen. Amen.

At my poore house at Mortlake Novr. 22. A. 1592.

Your Honours devoutedly to be commanded

JOHN DEE.

THE SEQUEL OF THE PREMISSES.

Be it remembred,

THAT upon the premisses made manifest and declared abundantly by me to the two forenamed honourable Commissioners, the same two made such due report thereof, that her Majestie greately pittied my case, and presently sent for the Lord Admirall and his Lady (whome my wife Jane Fromondz had some tymes served in court), and told them the report made unto her Highness, and willed the Lady Howard to write some letter of comfort unto my wife, and send some friendly token besides; and her Majestie commanded, that an hundred markes should be sent unto me by Sir Thomas Gorge, and said, that St. Crosses I should have, when the incumbent Doctor Benet might be conveniently placed in some byshoprick; and notwithstanding by consultation with the two foresaid Commissioners, it was thought good, that the pension of £200 yearely were to be assured unto me out of the revenues of the Byshoprick of Oxford or otherwise, till St. Crosses were voyd, or as good as that; and so the end was of that her Majesties most gracious consideration at that tyme.

Be it also remembred, that on the 2nd day of December next ensuing, the forenamed Sir Thomas Gorge brought me from her Majestie one hundred markes, part in gold, and part in silver, and delivered it unto me on the same table in my study, where they had set a few daies before in commission.

He brought also at the same tyme the Lady Howard her letter to my wife, full of courtesie and kindnes, and in it a token of six old angells of gold.

I retorned by the same Sir Thomas Gorge my most humble and dutifull thankes to her Majestie, till oppertunity might serve me to yeild them my selfe, and soe to the very vertuous Lady, the right honourable L. Admirall his bedfellow, I and my wife retornd our dutifull thankes.

On Thursday the 15 of Febr. A. 1593 (more Astronomico) I delivered unto the Countess of Warwick in writing the here annexed sentence, which above forty dayes I had waited for oppertunity, wherein to have spoken and pronounced it my selfe to her Majestie. I asked the honourable Sir John Wolley his advice therein also, who liked well of the sending in of it to her Majestie. Afternoone about 2 of the clock it was delivered to her Majestie, and my faithfull thankfullness was very graciously accepted of her Majestie, which promise also againe renued to grant me any sute meete for me; and willed the same to be preferred unto her by the two forenamed Commissioners, now both Knightes. God preserve her Majestie.

The sentence I sent unto her Majestie by the Countess of Warwick. Feb. 15, A. 1593.

Serenissima, ô potentissimaque Regina,

Ut vitam mihi olim Omnipotens dedit Deus noster, ejusque vigorem (prope jam exhaustum) beneficentissima vestra redintegravit manus: ita eundem de cætero (totum ad quæcunqne mea summa devinctissimum intentissimumque vestræ Majestati Regiæ præstanda servitia) opportunè ac solidè mihi confirmari per constantissimam vestram augustissimamque clementiam humillimè peto.

A SUPPLICATION TO Q. MARY, BY JOHN DEE, FOR THE RECOVERY AND PRESERVATION OF ANCIENT WRITERS AND MONUMENTS.

To the Queenes most excellent Majestie.

In most humble wise complaining, beseecheth your Highnes, your faithfull and loving subject, John Dee gentleman, to have in remembrance, how that, among the exceeding many most lamentable displeasures, that have of late happened unto this realm, through the subverting of religious houses, and the dissolution of other assemblies of godly and learned men, it hath been, and for ever, among all learned students, shall be judged, not for the least calamity, the spoile and destruction of so many and so notable libraries, wherein lay the treasure of all Antiquity, and the everlasting seeds of continual excellency within this your Grace's realm. But, albeit that in those dayes many a pretious jewel and ancient monument did utterly perish (as at Canterbury did that wonderful work of the sage and eloquent Cicero de Republica, and in many other places the like) yet, if, in time, great and speedy diligence be shewed, the remanents of such incredible store, as well of writers theologicall, as in all other liberal sciences, might be saved and recovered: which now in your Grace's realm being dispersed and scattered, yea and many of them in the unlearned men's hands, do still yet (in this time of reconciliation) dayly perish; and perchance of purpose by some envious person enclosed in walls, or buried in the ground, to the great injurie of the famous and worthy authors, and the pitifull hindrance of the learned in this your Highnes realm: whose travailes, watchings, and pains might greatly be relieved and eased; for that such doubts and points of learning, as much cumber and vex their heads, are most pithyly in such old monuments debated and discussed. Therefore your said suppliant maketh most humble petition unto your Majestie, that it might stand with your good will and pleasure, such order and meanes to take place, as your said suppliant hath devised for the recovery and continuall preservation of all such worthy monuments, as yet are extant, either in this your Graces realm of England, or else where in the most part of all Christendome. Whereby your Highness shall have a most notable library, learning wonderfully be advanced, the passing excellent works of our forefathers from rot and worms preserved, and also hereafter continually the whole realm may (through your Graces goodnes) use and enjoy the whole incomparable treasure so preserved: where now no one student, no nor any one college, hath half a dozen of those excellent jewells, but the whole stock and store thereof drawing nigh to utter destruction and extinguishing, while here and there by private mens negligence (and sometimes malice) many a famous and excellent author's book is rent, burnt, or suffered to rott and decay. And your said suppliant is so much the more willing to move this suit unto your Highnes, for that by his said device your Graces said library might in very few yeares most plentifully be furnisht, and that without any one penny charge unto your Majestie, or doing injurie to any creature. Finally, in the erecting of this your Library Royall, your Grace shall follow the footsteps of all the famous and godly princes of old time, and also do like the worthy Governors of Christendome at these dayes: but far surmounting them all both in the store of rare monuments, and likewise in the incredible fruit, which of this your Highnes act will follow ere it be long. The merit whereof shall redound to your Majesties honorable and everlasting fame here on earth, and undoubtedly in heaven highly be rewarded; as knoweth God, Whom your said suppliant most heartily beseecheth long to preserve your grace in all prosperity. Amen.

Articles concerning the recovery and preservation of the ancient monuments and old excellent Writers: and also concerning the erecting of a Library without any charges to the Queens Majestie, or doing injury to any of the Queens Highnes subjects, according to the tenor and intent of a supplication to the Queens grace in this behalf exhibited by John Dee, Gentleman. A. 1556, the xv day of January.

1. Imprimis, the Queen's Majesties commission to be granted for the seeing and perusing of all places within this her Graces realm, where any notable or excellent monument may be found, or is known to be. And the said monument or monuments so found and had by the said Commissioner then, of the former possessor in the Queens Majesties name to be borrowed, and so nevertheless to be restorable to the said former possessor after such convenient time, wherein of every such monument one fair copy may be written, if the said former possessor be disposed to have the said monument or monuments again; and thereupon either he or his assignes do at the said Library (the place whereof is by the Queen's grace to be appointed) demand the said monument or monuments by bill assigned with the hand of the said Commissioner, wherein both the name or names of the said monument or monuments is or are particularly expressed, and also the convenient time for the said restitution prescribed.

2. That it may be referred to my Lord Cardinal's Grace and the next Synod to conclude an order for the allowance of all necessary charges, as well toward the riding and journeying for the recovery of the said worthy monuments, as also for the copying out of the same, and framing of necessary stalls, desks, and presses, meet for the preservation and use of the said monuments in the Queens Majesties Library aforesaid.

3. That the said Commission be with speed dispatched for three causes especially: first, lest, after this motion made, the spreading of it abroad might cause many to hide and convey their good and ancient writers (which nevertheless were very ungodly done, and a certain token, that such are not sincere lovers of good learning). Secondly, that by the travail of these three months, February, March, and April next going before the Synod, in May next appointed, the said Synod may have good proof, whereby to conjecture, how this matter will take success. And thirdly, upon the said trial of three months, the proportion of the charges in riding and writing may the better be weighed, what they will in manner amount unto.

4. A meet place to be forthwith appointed for the said monuments to be sent unto, untill the said Library may be made apt in all points necessary; and that in this said place, before or at the Synod-time, the said monuments may be viewed and perused, according to the pleasure of my Lord Cardinals Grace and the said next Synod.

5. Finally, that by furder device of your said suppliant, John Dee (God granting him his life and health), all the famous and worthy monuments, that are in the notablest Librarys beyond the sea (as in Vaticana at Rome, S. Marci at Venice, and the like at Bononia, Florence, Vienna, &c.) shall be procured unto the said Library of our soveraign Lady and Queen, the charges thereof (beside the journeying) to stand in the copying of them out, and the carryage into this realm only. And as concerning all other excellent authors printed, that they likewise shall be gotten in wonderfull abundance, their carriage only into this realme to be chargeable.

A NECESSARY ADUERTISEMENT, BY AN VNKNOWN FREEND, GIUEN TO THE MODEST, AND GODLY READERS: WHO ALSO CAREFULLY DESIRE THE PROSPEROUS STATE OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF THIS BRYTISH KINGDOM, AND THE POLITICALL SECVRITIE THEREOF.

1. Lamentable and irksome[*] are these our drery dayes: (my welbeloued cuntriman) seeing the conditions of to to many, are become such, as, to be to to curious of other[†] mens dooings: as though they themselues were superhabundantly perfect, or dwelt in security, of not beyng at any tyme hereafter, either surueyed, or controlled for their own.

2. Nay, seeing the subtilty and impudency of[‡] some, is such, that they can, and dare, cunningly and craftily, conuey to themselues (or, to whom they list) the title and interest of the thanks and commendation, due to other men: who are not of so brasen visages, as to practise such ambitious fatches for themselues, or to procure such malitious disgraces, to other: but are of that myldenes of spirite, as PATIENTLY TO ATTEND THE END, which shall reueale the VERITY: when, iust gwerdon shall to euery man be distributed accordingly.

3. And thirdly, seeing some are so doggedly violent and vayngloriously doting, that they can not like, consent, or well suffer any od Man, beside them selues: or otherwise, then by them selues, to receiue due salary, either of credit, commendation, or liberall consideration: where their word or working (directly or indirectly) may hinder the same.

4. Fourthly, how pitifull is the case, that diuers, of sundry states* haue (of late) become so shameles lyers, and to some priuate mens liues, (thereby) so dangerous, that, if credit had bin giuen to them (by other than the light hedded sort) of such murders and treasons, as (most diuell like) they haue imagined and reported to be: and withall, (wholy, of their own hellish myndes without any spark or drop of veritie) haue fathered the same vpon the very innocent (yea, so much an innocent, as for any such thought, in his hart, at any tyme, embracing or fostering): It had bin greatly to haue bin douted that the mighty wrath of God, would not so long haue forborn the iust revenge (of so haynous abhominacions) taking, vpon, as well such wicked and principall forgers, as on other the fickle fauourers, or careles sufferers of the same, any whit to preuaile.

5. Seeing the Prince of darknes hath sundry such his factors: And yet one† other kinde more wicked and abhominable than the rehearsed: which are such, as not onely, they themselues, commit diuelish horrible facts, but also practise other very fraudulent feats; And all to their priuate lucre onely: chiefly ayding and furnishing vp their own shamefull credit herein, with the † cownterfeting of other honest and learned men their letters: as, written vnto them, in such their vngodly and vnlawfull affrayes: or, as falsly, reporting their conferences had with them, to the behoof (say they) of such, as are become their miserable and cosened clients.

6. And sixthly, how, (almost, without remedy,) hath the most wily tyrant, and insatiable bludsucker, layd the plat, for a wofull tragedy contriuing: yf, the power and justice diuine, did not bridle his malitious rage, and infernall fury? How, hath he, (I pray you) insinuated his credit with some, so far, and so long since: that diuers vntrue and infamous reports, by their sinister information, haue bin giuen vp to such, as haue gathered records, of those mens acts, who dyed in the cause of veritie? And so, the same hurtfull vntruthes, beyng (yet) the rather credited, by reason of the dignity of the place; wherein they were enstalled, haue seemed, both to the foresayd diuelish cosener, and also, to the credelous cosen (yea, and to very many others,) to haue bin a certain kynde of warrant: To the one, without feare, to counterfet letters, or discourses, answerable to the foresayd fowle vntruthes, vnaduisedly recorded. And to the other, without suspition, lightly to credit any such matter, reported. And so, hath the feend infernall, most craftily, and vnduly gotten the honest* name and fame, of one extraordinary studious Ientleman, of this land, within his clawes; that, diuers his mere malitious, and wilfull enemies, do verily hope, that it is impossible, that this Ientleman shall, with this English or Brytish state, either (during his life) be counted a good subiect, or a commendable, (nay scarce a tolerable) †Christian; or, any his acts or trauailes, all ready past; or, other his intended exploits, of great importance, shall be, in this land, acceptable; or, of the people, of this kingdome, receyued: as, by the fauour, light, and ayde of the Blessed Trinitie vndertaken, inuented, compassed, and atchieued: but, rather, by wicked and vngodly arte, to be framed: and, by the help of Sathan, or Beelzebub, to be finished: vnleast, the wise, or the peculiarly chief authorized, will vse due, carefull, and charitable discretion, from henceforth, to repres, or abolish, and vtterly extinguish this very iniurious report, (for these xx. yeres last past, and somewhat longer,) spred and credited, all this realm ouer: it is to wete, that the forsaid Ientleman, is, or was, not onely, a *[1] Coniurer, or caller of diuels: but*, [2] a great doer therein: yea, the great coniurer: and so, (as some would say) [3] * the arche coniurer, of this whole kingdom.

Before, that the (mentioned) diuelish cosening was vsed: this sklanderous vntruthe was recorded, published, and credited: but, by these new deuised cosening forgeries, the same, may (with some) seeme to be vndoubtedly confirmed. Oh Lord, with how tickle and strong snares, and with how wily laberinthes, hath the most enuious traytor, to the honor of our God and Christ, bewrapped and daunted many a thousand of simple and honest mens fantazies: inducing them, to credit this infamous report? To credit it, (I say) in respect to the honorable seat, wherein, it was (very vnaduisedly) set downe. In dede, euen he: who, at the beginning, †sayd, Ascendam in cælum, et similis ero altissimo: euen he, hath settled this intolerable sklander of the vertuous, among the glorious renown of the righteous: to so great hurt, and dammage of the Ientleman (who, to all other men, is harmles) as, neuer to him, by any one mortall man, the iust amends, can duly be made. I would to God, this foresaid sklander, and other disgracing reports, to to rashly, and euen then recorded, when this courteous Ientleman was also a prisoner himself: (and bedfellow, with one maister Barthelet Greene) had bin, in due tyme espyed: and vtterly cancelled, or razed out of all records, wherein they were vnduly, and vnadvisedly (first) admitted.

† Esaiæ 14.

Neuer to pres this matter in particular, it is nedeles. But, by this, and such like foule ouersight of man, and cruell despite of the hellish enemy, it is come to pas (among many other great inconueniences) that, whereas the said studious Ientleman, hath at God his most mercifull handes: recyued a great talent of knowledge and sciences: (after his long, painfull, and costly trauails, susteyned for the same:) and both by God, being warned, and, of his owne disposition, desirous, not only to enlarge and multiply the same, but also to communicate to other: he findeth himself, (now at length), partly forced, somewhat to yelde to the wickednes of these tymes, (being not possible to sayl against the windes eye): and partly demeth himself (in Gods judgment,) excusable, not to bestow any more of his talent and * carefull trauailes, vpon the ingratefull and thankles: nay, vpon the skorners and disdainers of such his faythfull enterprises: vndertaken chiefly, for the aduancement of the wonderfull veritie philosophicall: and also, for the state publik of this BRYTISH MONARCHIE, to become flourishing, in HONOR, WEALTH, and STRENGTH: as much, as any thing in him, mought haue bin thereto, (by any means,) found seruisable.

But, who would haue * thought, that they, who are (in dede) of the honester sort, and more charitable: yea, of the wiser, and (by office) mightier (and some of them, taken for his especial great freends) would, so many yeres, haue bin so * careles: or slack, to ayde, and procure the innocent, to be * deliuered, from the greuous, and most jniurious spoyles of his good name and fame: and all the inconueniences, depending thereon? or, who would haue thought, that so great and so vncharitable vntruthes, should so vndiscreetly haue bin published: by those men especially, who, otherwise, in woord and life, were very modest, and circumspect.

I thought it good, therefore (my honest freend and cuntriman)

* Solomon in Ecclesiastes, cap. 4. So I turned me, and considered all the violent wrong, that is done vnder the sunne: and behold, the tears of such as were opressed, and there was no man to comfort them: or, that would deliuer or defend them from the violence of their oppressions.

to aduertise * thee, of some parte of the cause, of the strange maner, of this treatise comming to thy sight, or reading: as, without the name, of any certain author thereof: and without the name, of the zealous artificer, who first did sollicite, and collect such matter (by dictata, as it were) from this Ientleman. And thirdly: without my own name: into whose hands, the sayd artificer, hath deliuered all the matter, that he could get of this Brytish Ientleman, to the title of this booke answerable; yea, and other rare instructions, also.

For (undowtedly) this BRYTISH PHILOSOPHER, is not only discouraged to labor, or * pen any more treatises or bookes himself in ARTIFICIALL METHOD, for his vnkinde, vnthankful, disdainfull and sklanderous cuntrymen, to vse (nay abuse:) but also is loth (and hath great reason so to be) to haue his name any more prefixed, or subscribed, to any treatises, passing from him, either by writing or by speech.

And both these inconueniencies are purposely committed to auoyd, or somewhat to preuent hensforward, the farther grief and offence that might grow to him and his true freends; to perceiue the former sundry sorts of caterpillers, and great hinderers of the prosperous estate of any commonwealth, to knaw vpon the leaf or flower of his commendable fame; who would take very quickly an occasion (by the forefronts of bookes garnished with his BRYTISH NAME,) to fall to a fresh pang of enuious busiosity, impudent arrogancy, and dogged malicious speeches vsing and vttring against the Ientleman, who (vndoubtedly) wisheth euill to none. And (perhaps) though it were very good matter, that should by him be contriued and written, and vnder his name be published: yet they would (in perusing it) either peruert their own judgements of it, through their vnquieted and mere malicious fantazie, wilfully bent against him; or, rather in dede, through their own great ignorance would verify the prouerb, Scientia non habet Inimicum, nisi Ignorantem: as they did by his Monas Hieroglyphica†, dedicated to the late Emperor Maximilian, wherein the Queene her most excellent Maiestie can be a sacred witness (as I haue heard) of the strange and vndue speeches deuised of that hieroglyphicall writing.

* The chief occasion of this aduertisement giuing. † A° 1564.

Or, if they liked the matter, they would say, that such a Treatise (vnder his name published) is not, or was not of his owne compiling and ordring, as Author thereof, but that some other man, now liuing, or long since dead, was the only and first Author of such a good Treatise. And that maner of malicious iniury hath bin very notably done vnto him for these many yeres past, about his booke intituled Propædeumata Aphoristica; and is yet scarse ceased in all corners (for it is backbiting worke, and seeketh corners.) For some men, (and they such, who ought to haue bin honest and discreet, as they are, or were accounted learned) haue very enviously fathered it upon the excellent Gerardus Mercator Rupelmundanus, (yet liuing at Duysburgh) as to be the only and true Author of those Aphorismes. But afterward, when that was found a peuish fable; then vpon one Vrso (who liued many hundred yeres since) was all the commendation bestowed for that Aphoristicall worke contriuing. And then agayne, after that, vpon one Alkabitius: And at length, with shame enough (but more will follow) being driuen from these mere enuious and spitefull false deuises; yet (most obstinately and impudently) they still auouch to diuers Ientlemen, and certaine Noble Men, that some other, or (in effect) any man els, was the author thereof; rather than they would honestly acknowledge the truthes of only this Ientleman his peculiar industry, and no small skill vsed in the contriuing and framing of that * booke; containing the chief Crop and Roote, of ten yeres his first Outlandish and Homish studies and exercises philosophicall; as partly in the Preface thereof, to the reader is specified; but more habundantly and purposely hath that point bin † proued and testified to some, who were (before) fowly infected with the sklanderous opinion, that one Vrso was the author of it, and not this honest Brytish Ientleman; as at another tyme, will be made more euident: when a ful declaration, in more conuenient place, may be made, of the mere malicious, very rash, and Brutish Censure of a certain Doctor (yet liuing) who lately endeuored himself, to perswade some right worshipful Ientlemen, that it were good and behoofull for this Common Wealth, if the sayd Philosopher, were banished this land for euer; bicause, said "this Doctor, (but most vntruly, as is now very euident to thousands of men of this kingdom, and other) that to no man of this "realm, he did at any tyme, or yet doth, or will communicate any "part of his learned talent, by word or writing; but is wholy "addicted to his priuate commodity, only auancing by his own "studies and practises very secret." Yet I must note unto you, euen here, that one of those iniuries was aboue all the rest, so notorious, and withall, so notably well * known to be an iniury, that the last yere, a certain mechanicien (being busied about matter of nauigation) calling to his remembrance the same iniury, being a fowle and impudent † brag, that an English mariner (now aboue 20 yeres sins) had made to diuers honest men, (of the new sea instrument, newly also, called the Paradoxall Cumpas, as to haue bin of his inuention) was so inflamed with indignation against this arrogant mariner, his abhominable impudency, (so long tyme, by this Ientleman, very patiently suffred,) that he made very earnest request to this Ientleman (the true inuentor of this instrument Paradoxal,) that, although all the Iniuries receiued at their hands, who were deemed learned, he would not very sharply reproue: and but at leysure; yet, that it should be an act, mete and needfull for him to do, (being also behoofall for the common wealth) speedily to detect such shameless braggers and crakers; onely sophistically furnished to outward shew: and that, with other mens rare inuentions; but of themselues, vtterly vnhable to inuent any worthy conclusion, to be profitably practised on sea or land.

Memorials* (concerning the perfect Arte of Nauigation) so comming in record, after a mechanicall and vulgar artificer his blunt maner of penning and collecting the same. Who, about the entrance into the matter of nauigation, finding good † opportunity to speake first of a PETY NAVY ROYALL, continually to be mannteyned, for manifold great commodities procuring to this BRYTISH MONARCHIE; (which no other way can be brought to pas) and among them all, the PERPETVALL POLITIK‡ SECVRITIE and better preseruation of this famous kingdom from all forrein danger, or homish disorders, to be the chiefest and most needfull publick benefit; (and vndowtedly, likely to ensue therof) he was dutifully willing, rather to follow some brief discussing of that very waighty matter, (and especially in these dangerous dayes, and incredible peeuish practises, ful often deuised against the GOOD PEACE AND PROSPEROVS TRANQUILLITIE of this INCOMPARABLE ILANDISH MONARCHIE;) then to fall to the foresayd Generall and Rare Memorials, recording of THE PERFECT ARTE OF NAUIGATION; which he, (therupon) set aside awhile, and wherof, now only the second volume entreateth, vnder this proper title: THE BRYTISH COMPLEMENT, OR THE PERFECT ARTE OF NAUIGATION‖. (For no vulgar doctrine or practise is therin conteyned; but rather the GENERALL COMPLEMENT, and almost (in particular,) all that which hitherto was wanting; or, which mought be most needfull to so excellent an arte, and (to this kingdome) most beneficiall of all other mechanicall exercises.

And such is the foresayd Brytish complement, (as I do right well know) that the contents therof, are aboue the most part of the best learned mens expectations (yea, or hope) of being brought to pas; and all that in rare, general, and excellent conclusions of Gubernautik, chiefly. And so great is the volume therof, that, to haue it fairely and distinctly printed, with all the appertenances, it would be (in bulk) greater than the English Bible, of the greatest volume; and yet the plat of inuention, disposition, and recording therof was finished in les than 4 monthes space; it is to wete of September, October, Nouember, and December last. ‖ The title and brief argument of the second volume.

The third booke*, I neither will, or may (as yet) say any thing of. The Ientleman his desire was, that it should be vtterly suppressed, or delivered to Vulcan his custody.

But the fourth volume †, I may judge it to be as an earthly paradise; a booke, of as great godly pleasure, as worldly profit and delight; a booke for the BRYTISH HONOR and WEALTH, (and that in diuers maner) such an one as neuer King Ptolomæus, or Prince Abilfada Ismaël, or any geographicall or hydrographicall discouerer did write or collect, as I (for my simple capacity) do verily judge of it. The title wherof, is OF FAMOUS and RICH DISCOVERIES; the discourse thereof, not only conteineth the generall suruey hydrographicall of all the whole world, (and chiefly the rare euidences for all the partes therof, most septentrionall) but also a particular and ample examination of King Solomon his Ophirian three yeres voyage; and also the lawfull and very honorable entitling of our most gratious and soueraigne Lady, QUEENE ELIZABETH, (and so this BRYTISH SCEPTRE ROYALL) to very large forrein dominions: such as in and by the same, duly recouered and vsed. The course of the Diuine Prouidence generall, in this present age will bring to light and life, matter of great importance and consequency, both to the glory of God and the benefit of all Christendom and Heatheness. The greatness of this volume is not much les than of the second. And one way it far passeth the second: for, in the secret centre therof is more bestowed and stored vp, than I may, or (in this place) will express.

* The third booke suppressed. † The fourth volume.

The same volume, was chiefly of the Ientleman his own very speedily collecting; and (by his wil and order) hath this inscription or dedication, To THE MOST WORTHY; and the same inscription to be written or printed in letters of gold.

And had not the incredible and manifold iniuries, and vndue disturbances bin, which haue happened to him (by sundry parcels of tyme) for the space of three monthes and more, (in totall summe) within the tyme of all these collections, most speedily and carefully heaping vp togither, since August last; I am right well assured, that neuer, in so small tyme, so much matter of so great importance, with such syncere and dutifull zeale to pleasure his natiue cuntry, had by any subject (BRYTISH OR ENGLISH) bin deliuered from him by inuention of his own, or by circumspect collection, or discrete application, out of former or present writers and authours.

What is than (I pray you) in all his life tyme, to be thought likely or possible, and in tymes more commodious, to haue bin inuented, or conuerted to better method of knowledge or vse of practice, or notably reformed, by the said Ientleman? especially for the space of these thirty* yeres last past? In which long tyme of his Tyrocinie he hath incessantly, to the uttermost of his power and hability, followed an extraordinary, and most painfull, and very costly course of Philosophical enquiries making after the best verities, which may yeld † (by due considerations of the creatures, their vertues and properties) to their Creator, and ours, glory, praise & honor vnspeakable: for his infinit goodnes, wisdom and power; the euident print & demonstrable proof wherof the same

It will appeare, hereafter, in due tyme, that greater, furder, and of longer continuance hath bin his doings, and very well liked of, aduertisements and instructions in sundry affayrers, philosophicall, and cosmopoliticall, FOR VERITIE, JVSTICE AND PEACE FVRDERING, than hath of any three of his neerest freends, and most familiarly acquainted cuntrymen, bin (as yet) perceiued.

And this also I may say of the same Ientleman (without seeming to flatter him, or any whit to abuse thee, my honest freend and cuntryman) or, he, himself, with great modesty, and no arrogancy, might (to God his high glory) say that, yf in the foresaid whole cours of his tyme, he had found a constant and assistant CHRISTIAN ALEXANDER, BRYTAN should not haue bin now destitute of a CHRISTIAN ARISTOTLE.*

In the mean space (my louing freend and vnpartiall reader) I am to aduertise thee, as concerning the publishing of the other two great volumes; though the inuentions and collections be such as I sayd, and of great value; both for the HONOR AND WEALTH OF ENGLAND, and no little furderance of the GLORY OF GOD, yet (by order taken by him who hath the chief interest therein) the same are not to be printed VNTIL THE PROOF BE PAST. How this Mechanicien, his zealous, dutifull, and humble aduertisement politicall, (for the perpetuall garde, and furder seruice of a PETY NAVY ROYALL*, to be mainteined, without any cost or charge to the Queene her most excellent Maiestie, or any vnpleasant burden to the Commons and faithfull Subiects of this BRYTISH MONARCHIE) shall be liked of and accepted; (for the zeale and matter, I mean, rather than for any rhetoricall polishing bestowed on it.) Seeing the same conteineth in it such fragments of instructions receiued from the forsaid philosopher, being hitherto (almost) a † freendles freend. Why say I freendles? Seeing a Ientleman of great experience in this world, sayd vnto him, in my hering, within these few dayes:

* Alexander, Aristotle.

† The wordes of a sklanderer, are very wounds, and go through vnto the innermost partes of the body. Prouerb. 13.

Tu certè infœlix, at multos inter amicos.

Wherby it might seme that he hath many freends. But for all that betwene a cold freend and a faint harted enemy, is small diuersity. And vndowtedly a fayned hollow harted or hypocriticall freend is worse, ten tymes, than an open enemy; and, in very dede, is not to be counted a freend. And so may the outward repugnancy of these two sayings aptly be reconciled.

But, proceding in my former purpose, you may vnderstand this, moreouer, that the second booke or volume (to this Preface aperteyning) will be of more hundred pounds charges, to be prepared for the print (in respect of the tables and figures therto requisite) than you would easily beleue. Therfore, though there were no warning of attendance to be giuen to vnderstand the issue of liking or misliking the foresaid, (zealously collected, and as humbly presented) politicall aduertisement. Yet, this matter of charges so far passeth my slender hability: and, withall, is so dreadfull to the Printers, for feare of great los therby susteining (so rare, and few mens studies are in such matters employed) that delay, on my part, is rather that way coustrained. And, therfore, no order is to be thought vpon by me, for the printing therof*, TYLL A COMFORTABLE AND SVFFICIENT OPPORTVNITY OF SVPPLY DOTH VERY WELL SERVE THERTO.

* A PETY NAVY ROYALL continually to be mainteyned without the Queenes Maiesties charges, or any vnpleasant burden to the Commons.

And before I bid thee farewell (my cuntryman) I may yet aduertise thee of one point more (whither the sayd second volume be euer printed or no) that therin is one parcell † conteined; so contriued and dedicated vnto the æternall, royall, and heroicall honor and renowm of our incomparable gracious QUEENE ELIZABETH; that all the whole world ouer, yea, among the Heathen as well as Christen; what language so euer they speake, that have to deale with hydrography, or dangerous and long voyages by sea; euen they, will most thankfully and for euer sing and extoll her marueilous princely benefit herin, as to them, chiefly for her Maiesties sake and merits, imparted, who hath bin so constantly fauorable, and so gracious a sovereign Lady vnto the inuentor therof, her most faythfull and obedient subiect. The richest Pyramis at Memphis, did neuer so far and so durably spred the fame and commendation of the builders therof, as these TABLES GUBERNAUTIKE will win, and procure the large loue and good liking of our Elizabeth, all the world endureth to florish. The English title therof is, THE BRYTISH QUEENE ELIZABETH, HER TABLES GVBERNAVTIK‡. And the same is of many quires of paper conteining.

Now haue I sufficiently (for this place and tyme) giuen vnto you (my courteous cuntryman) aduertisements; which (I trust) you will take in good part and thankfully, yf in your own conscience you plainly perceiue that all my zealous speech herein bestowed, tendeth to the aduancement of vertue, and to the great benefit and commodity publik. At an other tyme I hope to haue comfort and conuenient opportunitie to impart vnto you other matter, for your exceeding good contentation and great delight also.

* Till than.

† A strange monument, dedicated to the æternall and heroicall renowne of our Queene, her most excellent Majestie.

‡ A treasor incomparable for the Arte Gubernautik: and for very many other experiences.

And in the mean space, I trust, that this my syncere, blunt, and simple aduise, shall be some occasion, that hensforward, this honest Ientleman shal be fully restored to the integrity of his duly deserued honest* name and fame; and also receyue great publick thanks, comfort, and ayde of the whole Brytish state, to the honor, welfare, and preseruation wherof (next vnto his duty doing vnto God) he hath directed all the course of his manifold studies, great trauailes, and incredible costes. As both by these his Hexameron Lessons (first here for security of the same) speedily dictated, and also by very many other his wordes, workes, and writings els, both in England and other where spoken, done, communicated, and published, will or may abundantly be testified. And so fare you well in Christ, my courteous and vnpartiall cuntryman; and for a remembrance at this our most freendly farewel, take this heauenly counsail with thee: Omnia quecunque volueritis vt faciant vobis homines, sic & vos facite illis; hæc enim est Lex & Prophetæ.

Which kinde of skantlin and measure diuine, being before hand, and in due tyme layd vnto all our thoughts, wordes and dedes, may be as a good and familiar angell vnto vs; to help vs to shonne and flie from all sklandrous-speeches vsing, all malicious or seditious libels skattring, and all other vniust and vncharitable dealings, yea, and from consenting to or suffering the same, where we can or ought to redres the cause.

And then the glory and peace of God will florish in this BRYTAN MONARCHIE. Ouer which (so reformed) that our most Gracious and Soueraign QUEENE ELIZABETH may, very many yeres, most prosperously and triumphantly raigne, it is (vndowtedly) our bounden duty, feruently and full oft, by prayer, to request at his hands, who is the King of kings, Almighty. To whose protection and furderance also, most hartily and dutifully, I commende the very waighty case of this Common Wealth; not vtterly vnduly, or (yet) out of season (I hope) in this first booke ensuing, somewhat considered of; as in a * Preface very needefull to the BRYTISH COMPLEMENT, OF THE PERFECT ARTE OF NAVIGATION.

A LETTER
Containing a most briefe Discourse Apologeticall, with a plaine Demonstration, and feruent Protestation, for the lawfull, sincere, very faithfull and Christian course, of the Philosophicall studies and exercises, of a certaine studious Gentleman: An ancient Seruant to her most excellent Maiesty Royall.

Falsus Testis non erit impunitus: & qui loquitur mendacia, peribit. Proverb. Cap. 19. Versu 9.

To the most Reverend father in God, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate and Metropolitaine of all England, one of her Majesties most honorable privy Counsaile: my singular good Lord.

Most humbly and hartily I crave your Graces pardon, if I offende any thing, to send, or present unto your Graces hand, so simple a discourse as this is: although, by some sage and discreet my friends their opinion, it is thought not to be impertinent, to my most needfull suites, presently in hand (before her most excellent Majesty Royall, your Lordships good Grace, and other the Right honorable Lordes of her Majesties privy Counsaile), to make some part of my former studies, and studious exercises (within and for these 46 yeeres last past, used and continued) to be first knowne and discovered unto your Grace, and other the Right honorable my good Lordes, of her Majesties privy Counsaile: and, secondly, afterwardes, the same to be permitted to come to publique view: not so much, to stop the mouthes, and, at length to stay the impudent attemptes, of the rash, and malicious devisers, and contrivers of most untrue, foolish, and wicked reports, and fables, of, and concerning my foresaid studious exercises, passed over, with my great (yea incredible), paines, travels, cares, and costs, in the search, and learning of true philosophie; as, therein, so, to certifie, and satisfie the godly and unpartiall Christian hearer, or reader hereof: that, by his own judgement (upon his due consideration, and examination of this, no little parcell, of the particulars of my foresaid studies, and exercises philosophicall annexed), he will, or may, be sufficiently informed, and perswaded; that I have wonderfully labored, to finde, follow, use, and haunt the true, straight, and most narrow path, leading all true, devout, zealous, faithfull, and constant Christian students, ex valle hac miseriæ, et miseria istius vallis: et tenebrarum Regno; et tenebris istius Regni, ad montem sanctum Syon, et ad cœlestia tabernacula. All thankes, are most due, therefore, unto the Almighty: Seeing, it so pleased him (even from my youth, by his divine favor, grace, and helpe), to insinuate into my hart, an insatiable zeale, and desire, to knowe his truth: and in him, and by him, incessantly to seeke, and listen after the same; by the true philosophicall method and harmony: proceeding and ascending (as it were), gradatim, from things visible, to consider of thinges invisible: from thinges bodily, to conceive of thinges spirituall: from things transitorie, and momentanie, to meditate of things permanent: by thinges mortall (visible and invisible) to have some perceiverance of immortality, and to conclude, most briefely; by the most mervailous frame of the whole World, philosophically viewed, and circumspectly wayed, numbred, and measured (according to the talent, and gift of God, from above alotted, for his divine purposes effecting) most faithfully to love, honor, and glorifie alwaies, the Framer, and Creator thereof. In whose workmanship, his infinite goodnesse, unsearchable wisdome, and Almighty power, yea, his everlasting* power, and divinity, may (by innumerable meanes) be manifested, and demonstrated. The truth of which my zealous, carefull, and constant intent, and endevour specified; may (I hope) easilie appeare by the whole, full and due survey, and consideration of all the Bookes, Treatises, and discourses, whose Titles onely, are, at this time, here annexed, and expressed: as they are set down in the sixt chapter, of an other little Rhapsodicall Treatise, intitled, The Compendious Rehearsall, &c. written above two yeares since: for those her Majesties two honorable Commissioners; which her most excellent Majesty had most graciouslie sent to my poore Cottage, in Mortlake: to understand the matters, and causes at full; through which, I was so extreamely urged to procure at her Majesties handes such honorable surveiors and witnesses to be assigned, for the due proofe of the contents, of my most humble and pitifull supplication, exhibited unto her most excellent Majesty, at Hampton Court, An. 1592, Novemb. 9. Thus therefore (as followeth) is the said 6 chapter there, recorded.

* Paul to the Rom. cap. 1, verse 19, 20.

My labors and paines bestowed at divers times, to pleasure my native Countrey: by writing of sundry Bookes, and Treatises: some in Latine, some in English, and some of them, written, at her Majesties commandement.

Of which Bookes, and Treatises, some are printed, and some unprinted. The printed Bookes, and Treatises are these following:

45. The Originals, and chiefe points, of our auncient Brytish Histories, discoursed upon, and examined. - . - Anno 1583.
46. An advice and discourse about the Reformation of the vulgar Julian yeere, written by her Majesties commandement, and the Lords of the privy Counsaile - - . - Anno 1582.
47. Certaine considerations, and conferrings together, of these three sentences, (auncientl accounted as Oracles) Nosce te ipsum: Homo Homini Deus: Homo Homini Lupus - Anno 1592.

48. De hominis Corpore, Spiritu, et Anima: sive Microcosmicum totius Philosophiæ Naturalis Compendium, lib. 1. - - Anno 1591.

With many other bookes, pamphlets, discourses, inventions, and conclusions, in divers Artes and matters: whose names, need not in this Abstract to be notified: the most part of all which, here specified, lie here before your Honours upon the table, on your left hand. But by other bookes and writinges, of an other sort, (if it so please God, and that he wil grant me life, health, and due maintenance thereto, for some ten or twelve yeares next ensuing) I may, hereafter make plaine, and without doubt, this sentence to be true, Plura latent, quàm patent.

Thus far (my good Lord) have I set downe this Catalogus, out of the foresaid sixt Chapter, of the booke, whose title is this:

49. The Compendious rehearsal of John Dee, his dutifull declaration and proofe of the course and race of his studious life, for the space of halfe an hundred yeeres, now (by Gods favor and helpe) fully spent, &c.

To which compendious rehearsall, doth now belong an Appendix, of these two last yeeres: in which I have had many just occasions, to confesse, that Homo Homini Deus, and Homo Homini Lupus, was and is an Argument, worthy of the decyphering, and large discussing: as may, one day, hereafter (by Gods helpe) be published, in some maner very strange. And besides all the rehearsed books, and treatises of my writing, or handling hitherto, I have just cause, lately given me to write and publish a Treatise, with Title, 50. De Horizonte Æternitatis: to make evident, that one Andreas Libaivus, in a booke of his, printed the last yeere, hath unduly considered a phrase of my Monas Hieroglyphica: to his misliking: by his own unskilfulnes in such matter: and not understanding my apt application thereof, in one of the very principal places, of the whole book. And this booke of mine (by Gods help and favour) shall be dedicated unto her most excellent majesty Roiall: and this Treatise doth containe three bookes, The first intitled, De Horizonte: liber Mathematicus et Physicus. The Second, De Æternitate: liber Theologicus, Metaphysicus et Mathematicus. The Third, De Horizonte Æternitatis: liber Theologicus, Mathematicus, et Hierotechnicus.

It may now be here also remembred, that almost three yeeres after the writing of this letter, I did somewhat satisfie the request of an honorable friend in Court, by speedilie penning some matter concerning her majesties sea-soveraigntie: under this title

Thalattocratia Brytannica.
Sive,
De Brytanico Maris Imperio,
Collectanea Extemporanea: 4. dierum Spacio, celeri conscripta calamo, Anno. 1597. Septemb. 20, Mancestriæ.

¶ Truly I have great cause to praise and thanke God, for your graces verie charitable using of me: both in sundry points else, and also in your favorable yelding to, yea and notifying the due meanes for the performance of her Sacred Majesties most gracious and bountifull disposition, resolution, and very royall beginning, to restore and give unto me (her ancient faithfull servant) some due maintenance: to leade the rest of my old daies, in some quiet and comfort: with habilitie, to retaine some speedy, faire, and orthographicall writers, about me; and the same skilfull in Latine and Greeke (at the least): as well for mine owne bookes, and workes, faire and correctly to be written (such I meane, as either her most excellent Majesty, out of the premisses, will make choice of, or command to be finished or published: or such of them, as your grace shall thinke meete or worthy for my farther labor to be bestowed on): as else for the speedy, faire, and true writing out of other ancient authors their good and rare workes, in Greeke or Latine: which by Gods providence, have been preserved from the spoile made of my Librarie, and of all my moveable goods here: &c. Anno 1583.* In which Librarie, were about 4000 bookes: whereof, 700 were anciently written by hande: some in Greeke, some in Latine, some in Hebrue: and some in other languages (as may by the whole Catalogus thereof appeare). But the great losses and dammages which in sundry sorts I have sustained, do not so much grieve my hart, as the rash, lewde, fond, and most untrue fables and reports of me, and my studies philosophicall, have done, and yet do: which commonly, after their first hatching, and divelish devising, immediately with great speede, are generally all the Realme overspread; and to some, seeme true; to other, they are doubtful: and to only the wise, modest, discreet, godly, and charitable (and chiefelie to such as have some acquaintance with me) they appeare, and are knowne to be fables, untruths, and utterly false reports, and sclaunders. Well, this shall be my last charitable giving of warning, and fervent protestation to my Countrimen and all other in this case:

* Although that my last voyage beyond the Seas, was duly undertaken (by her Majesties good favour and licence) as by the same words may appeare in the Letter, written by the right honourable Lord Threasorer, unto your grace in my behalfe, and her most excellent majestie willing his honor so to do Anno 1590, the 20 of Januarie.

A fervent protestation.

Before the Almighty our God, and your Lordships good grace, this day, on the perill of my soules damnation (if I lie, or take his name in vaine herein) I take the same God, to be my witnesse; that, with all my hart, with all my soule, with all my strength, power, and understanding (according to the measure thereof, which the Almighty hath given me) for the most part of the time, from my youth hitherto, I have used, and still use, good, lawfull, honest, christian, and divinely prescribed meanes, to attain to the knowledge of those truthes, which are meet, and necessary for me to know; and wherewith to do his divine Majesty such service, as hee hath, doth, and will call me unto, during this my life: for his honor and glory advancing, and for the benefit, and commoditie publique of this kingdome; so much, as by the will, and purpose of God, shall lie in my skill, and hability to performe: as a true, faithfull, and most sincerely dutifull servant, to our most gratious and incomparable Queene Elizabeth, and as a very comfortable fellow-member of the body politique, governed under the scepter Royal of our earthly Supreme head (Queene Elizabeth) and as a lively sympathicall, and true symetricall fellow-member, of that holy and mysticall body, Catholicklie extended and placed (wheresoever) on the earth: in the view, knowledge, direction, protection, illumination, and consolation of the Almighty, most blessed, most holy, most glorious, comajesticall, coeternall, and coessentiall Trinity: the head of that body, being only our Redeemer, Christ

Jesus, perfect God and perfect man: whose returne in glory, we faithfully awaite, and daily, do very earnestly cry unto him, to hasten his second comming, for his electes sake: iniquity doth so on this earth, abound, and prevaile, and true faith with charity, and evangelicall simplicity, have but colde, slender, and uncertaine intertainement, among the worldly-wise men of this worlde.

Therefore (herein concluding) I beseech the Almighty God, most aboundantly to increase and confirme your graces heavenly wisdome, and endue you with all the rest of his heavenly gifts, for the relieving, refreshing, and comforting, both bodily and spiritually, his little flocke of the faithfull, yet militant here on earth. Amen.

An Epilogue.

Good my Lord, I beseech your grace, to allow of my plaine and comfortable Epilogus, for this matter at this time. 1. Seeing, my studious exercises, and conversation civile, may be aboundantly testified, to my good credit, in the most partes of all Christendome: and that, by all degrees of nobility, by al degrees of the learned, and by very many other, of godly and Christian disposition, for the space of 46 yeeres triall (as appeareth by the recordes lately viewed by two honourable witnesses, by commission from her Majesty), 2. And seeing, for these 36 yeeres, last past, I have beene her most excellent Majesties very true, faithfull, and dutifull servaunt; at whose royall mouth, I never received any one word of reproch; but all of favor, and grace: in whose princely countenance, I never perceived frowne toward me, or discontented regard, or view on me: but at all times favorable, and gracious: to the great joy and comfort of my true, faithfull, and loyall hart. And thirdly, Seeing, the workes of my handes, and wordes of my mouth (heere before notified, in the schedule of my bookes, and writings) may beare lively witnesse of the thoughts of my hart, and inclination of my minde, generally (as all wise men do know, and Christ himselfe doth avouch), it might, in manner, seeme needlesse, thus carefully (though most briefely and speedily) to have warned or confounded the scornefull, the malicious, the proud, and the rash in their untrue reports, opinions, and fables of my studies, or exercises philosophicall: but that, it is of more importance, that the godly, the honest, the modest, the discreet, grave, and charitable Christians (English or other), lovers of justice, truth, and good learning, may, hereby, receive certaine comfort in themselves (to perceive, that Veritas tandem prævalebit) and sufficiently be weaponed and armed with sound truth, to defende me against such kinde of my adversaries: if hereafter they will begin afresh, or hould on, obstinately, in their former errors, vaine imaginations, false reportes, and most ungodly sclanders of me and my studies. ¶ Therefore, (to make all this cause, for ever, before God and man, out of all doubt): Seeing, your Lordships good grace, are, as it were, our high Priest, and chiefe Ecclesiasticall minister (under our most dread and Soveraigne Ladie, Queene Elizabeth), to whose censure and judgement, I submit all my studies and exercises: yea, all my bookes, past, present and hereafter to be written, by me (of my own skill, judgement, or opinion), I do, at this present time, most humbly, sincerelie, and unfainedly, and in the name of Almighty God, (yea for his honor and glory) request, and beseech your Grace, (when, and as conveniently you may) to be well and throughlie certified of me, what I am Intus et in cute: Reverendissime in Christo Pater, et Dignissime Archipræsul, cognosce et agnosce vultum tàm internum, quàm externum pecoris tui: and wherein I have used, doe or shall use, pen, speech, or conversation, otherwise then as it appertaineth to a faithfull, carefull, sincere, and humble servant of Christ Jesu, that your grace would vouchsafe to advertise me. So, I trust, Ultima respondebunt primis: in such sort, as this Authenticke Recorde in latine annexed (ad perpetuam rei memoriam,) doth testifie: having never, hitherto, had occasion to shewe that, in any place of Christendome: to testifie better of me, then they had proofe of me, themselves, by my conversation among them. (The Almighty, therefore, be highly thanked, praised, honored, and glorified, for ever and ever, Amen.)

But nowe, in respect of the generall intent of this briefe discourse, I most humbly, and reverently, exhibit to your graces view, and perusing, the originall monument, and Authenticke Record, before mentioned, faire written in parchment, with the seale whole, and perfect, duly appendant: as I have 46 yeeres, and somewhat longer, preserved it. The true copy whereof, your grace doth see, to be verbatim, as followeth.

Universis Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filiis, ad quos præsentes literæ perventuræ sunt, Vicecancellarius Cœtusq; omnis Regentium et non Regentium, Universitatis Cantabrigiæ, Salutem in Domino sempiternam. Conditiones et merita hominum in nostra Universitate studentium. affectu sincero perpendentes, eos solos testimonio nostro ornandos esse arbitramur, quos scimus ob eruditionem, et morum probitatem promeritos esse, ut istud beneficium à nobis consequantur: Quamobrem, cùm hoc tempore, ipsa veritas testimonium nostrum sibi postulat, vestræ pietati, per has literas significamus, Quòd dilectus nobis in Christo, Joannes Dee, Artium Magister, in dicta nostra universitate, fœlicitur versatus, plurimam sibi et doctrinæ et honestatis laudem comparavit: De cujus gradu, et conversatione (quæ honestissima semper fuit), ne qua uspiam ambiguitas, aut quæstio oriri possit, apud eos, quibus hujus viri virtutes haud satis innotuerint, visum est nobis, in dicti Joannis gratiam, has literas nostras Testimoniales conscribere; et conscriptas, publico Academiæ nostræ sigillo, obsignare: quò, majorem apud vos authoritatem, et pondus literæ nostræ habeant, Bene valete. Datum Cantabrigiæ, in plena Convocatione Magistrorum Regentium, et non Regentium, Academiæ prædictæ: 14 Calend. Aprilis, Anno à Christo nato, 1548.

RI SIGILLI LOCUS VE.

For certaine due respects the very image of the foresaid seale, is not heere in portraiture published.

Peroratio.

The Almightie and most mercifull God, the Father; for his only Sonne (our Redeemer) Jesus Christ his sake: by his holy spirit, so direct, blesse, and prosper all my studies, and exercises philosophicall (yea, all my thoughts, words, and deedes) henceforward, even to the very moment of my departing from this world, that I may evidently and aboundantly be found, and undoubtedly acknowledged of the wise and just, to have beene a zealous and faithfull student in the Schoole of Verity, and an Ancient Graduate in the Schoole of Charity: to the honor and glory of the same God Almighty, and to the sound comfort and confirming of such as faithfully love and feare his divine Majestie, and unfeinedly continue in labor to do good on earth: when, while, to whome, and as they may, Amen.

Very speedily written, this twelfth even, and twelfth day, in my poore Cottage, at Mortlake: Anno 1595, currente à nativitate Christi: ast, An. 1594. Completo, à Conceptione ejusdem, cum novem præterea mensibus, Completis.

Allwaies, and very dutifully,

A BRIEF NOTE SCHOLASTICAL, FOR THE better vnderſtanding of the Decorum obſerued, (or, at the leaſt, regarded) in this preſent Two-fold Treatiſe, written vnder the Names of Three diuers Proprieties, States, or Conditions of MAN: Wherby yt may appere, that they are not Scopa diſſoluta: or, Du Coq à l' Aſne: But, by the will, and Grace of the Higheſt, thus Recorded.

This Scholasticall Note;

First, yt was needfull, for the Vnknown Freend, to declare his Senſible grief, conceaued, to ſee, and perceiue an honeſt Ientleman, and Philoſopher, by the malice and ignorance of ſundry his Cuntrymen, to be almoſt oppreſſed, vtterly defaced, and by dangerous reports, greeuouſly and dammageably diſcredited. And ſecondly, to make a mournfull, and dolefull Supplication generall, to all his Cuntrymen, to help the ſayd Ientleman to haue Iuſtice, and due amends, now at the end of his dayes. And all this, is the rather thus endited, that God his great Graces beſtowed on him, ſhould (to God his great glory) be acknowledged thankfully, and not be ſuffered any longer to be ſo craftily, wilfully, and violently trodden vnder foot, or barbarouſly deſpiſed. And it is likely, that, vnleaſt this Vnknown Freend, haue fauourable audience, and Credit, (in thoſe things, which in this Aduertiſment he declareth: being Senſible, both paſt, & preſent: pertayning to the forſayd Ientleman,) that the Mechanicien his induſtry, and great zeale, (vſed in collecting, and penning, from the ſayd Philoſopher his mouth, the Hexameron Plat Politicall, of the Brytiſh Monarchie,) ſhalbe but ſlenderly, and ſlightly regarded or wayed: and therby, the ſame to be found, finally, to les Commodity Publik, auailable. But, yf the ſame Aduertiſement, be earneſtly, ſpeedily, vnpartially, & charitably examined, and conſidered, good hope may ariſe, that Omnia cooperabuntur ad Vtilitatem Salutemq;

This shd haue followed ye aduertisment

The Epiſtle in Meter, (annexed in the end of this Book,) was by the Mechanicien ſent, after that the vnknown Freend had (at his own charges, and with his careful Trauail concurrent,) put the foreſayd two Treatiſes, in Print: & deliuered again into the hands of the ſayd Mechanicien, the whole Impreſsion therof. The diuers Intents and purpoſes of which Epiſtle, are eaſily to be perceiued. Therfore, yf to haue ſayd thus much, was neceſſary, the ſame alſo may ſuffice.

A neceſſary Aduertiſement,

But, who would haue * thought, that they, who are (in dede) of the honeſter ſort, and more charitable: yea, of the wiſer, and (by Office) mightier (& ſome of them, taken for his eſpecial great freends) would, ſo many yeres, haue bin ſo * Careles, or ſlack, to Ayde, and procure the Innocent, to be * deliuered, from the greuous, and moſt Iniurious ſpoyle of his good Name and Fame: and all the inconueniences, depending theron? Or, who would haue thought, that ſo great, & ſo vncharitable Vntruthes, ſhould ſo vndiſcretely haue bin publiſhed: by thoſe Men eſpecially, who, otherwiſe, in woord and life, were very modeſt, and Circumſpect?

The chief occaſion of this Aduertiſement giuing.

I thought it good, Therfore (my honeſt freend and Cuntryman) to aduertiſe thee, of ſome parte of the Cauſe, of the ſtrange maner, of this Treatiſe comming to thy ſight, or reading: As, without the Name, of any certain Author therof: And, without the Name, of the zealous Artificer, who firſt did ſollicite, and collect ſuch matter (by Dictata, as it were) from this Ientleman. And Thirdly, without my own Name: into whoſe hands, the ſayd Artificer, hath deliuered all the matter, that he could get of this Brytiſh Ientleman: to the Title of this booke, anſwerable: yea, and other rare Inſtructions, alſo.

For (vndowtedly) this BRYTISH PHILOSOPHER, is not only diſcouraged to labor, or pen any more Treatiſes, or bookes, him‸ſelf, in ARTIFICIALL METHOD, for his vnkinde, vnthankful, diſdainfull, and sklanderous Cuntrymen, to vſe (nay abuſe:) but, alſo, is loth (and hath great reaſon, ſo to be) to haue his Name, any more, prefixed, or ſubſcribed, to any Treatiſes, ‸ paſsing from him, either by writing, or by ſpeech.

And, both theſe Inconueniences, are purpoſely committed: to auoyd, or, ſomwhat to preuent henſforward, the farther grief and offence, that might grow to him, and his true freends: to perceiue the former ſundry ſorts of Caterpillers, and great hinderers of the proſperous Eſtate, of any Common-Wealth, to knaw vpon the leaf, or flower, of his Commendable Fame: who, would take very quickly an Occaſion (by the forefronts of bookes, garniſhed with his BRYTISH NAME,) to fall to a freſh pang of enuious buſioſity, impudent arrogancy, and dogged malicious ſpeeches vſing and vttring againſt the Ientleman: who (vndoutedly) wiſheth euill to none. And (perhaps) though it were very good matter, that ſhould, by him, be contriued and written, and vnder his Name, be publiſhed: yet, they would (in peruſing it), either peruert their own Iudgements of it, through their vnquieted, and mere malicious fantazie, wilfully bent againſt him: or, rather, in dede, through their own great Ignorance, would verify the Prouerb: Scientia non habet

the Paradoxall Cumpas: As, to haue bin of his Inuention.) was ſo inflamed with Indignation againſt this arrogant Mariner, his abhominable Impudency, (ſo long tyme, by this Ientleman, very patiently ſuffred,) that he made very earneſt requeſt to this Ientleman (the true Inuentor, of this Inſtrument Paradoxal) that, although, all the Iniuries receiued at their hands; who were deemed learned, he would not very ſharply reproue: and, but at leyſure: yet, that it ſhould be an Act, mete and needfull for him to do, (being alſo behoofull for the Common Wealth) ſpeedily to detect, ſuch ſhameles Braggers and Crakers: onely ſophiſtically furniſhed, to outward ſhew: and that, with other Mens rare Inuentions: but, of them ſelues, vtterly vnhable to Inuent any worthy Concluſion, to be profitably practiſed, on Sea or Land.

Which Mechanicien his erneſt requeſt, (by the foreſayd Ientleman) being graunted, was the very chief & firſt occaſion, of theſe Rare Memorials (concerning The perfect Arte of Nauigation) ſo comming in Record: after a Mechanicall and vulgar Artificer his blunt maner of penning, and collecting the ſame. (and vndowtedly, likely, to enſue therof:) he was dutifully willing, rather to follow ſome brief diſcuſſing of that very waighty matter, (and eſpecially in theſe dangerous dayes, and Incredible peeuiſh practiſes, ful often deuiſed againſt the GOOD PEACE, AND PROSPEROVS TRANQVILLITIE of this INCOMPARABLE ILANDISH MONARCHIE:) then, to fall to the foreſayd Generall and Rare Memorials recording, of THE PERFECT ARTE OF NAVIGATION: which, he, (therupon) ſet aſide, a while. And wherof, now, only the Second Volume entreateth: vnder this proper Title: THE BRYTISH COMPLEMENT, OF THE PERFECT ARTE OF NAVIGATION. For, no vulgar doctrine, or practiſe, is therin conteyned: But rather the GENERALL COMPLEMENT, and (almoſt in particular,) all that, which hitherto, was wanting: or, which mought be moſt needfull to ſo excellent an Arte, and (to this kingdome) moſt beneficiall of all other Mechanicall exerciſes:

The Title and brief Argument of the Second Volume.

And ſuch is the foreſayd Brytiſh Complement, (as I do right well know) that the Contents therof, are aboue the moſt part of the beſt learned mens expectations, (yea, or hope) of being brought to pas: and all that, in rare, general, and excellent Concluſions of Gubernautik, chiefly. And ſo great, is the Volume therof, that, to haue it fairely and diſtinctly printed, with all the Appertenances, it would be, (in bulk) greater than the Engliſh Bible, of the greateſt volume: And yet, the plat of Inuention, Diſpoſition, and recording therof, was finiſhed in les, than 4. monthes ſpace: it is to wete, of September, October, Nouember, and December laſt. Due Laud and Glory, be, therfore, aſcribed to the free geuer of all good and perfect Gifts.

The Third Booke, ſuppreſſed.

The third Booke, I neither will, or may (as yet) ſay any thing of. The Ientleman his deſire was, that it ſhould be vtterly ſuppreſſed, or deliuered to Vulcan his Cuſtody.

The Fourth Volume.

But, the fourth Volume, I may Iudge it, to be as an Earthly Paradiſe: A Booke, of as great godly pleaſure, as worldly profit and delight: A Booke, for the BRYTISH HONOR and WEALTH (And that, in diuers maner) ſuch an one, as neuer, King Ptolomæus, or Prince Abilfada Iſmaël, or any Geographicall or Hydographicall Diſcouerer did write, or Collect: as I (for my ſimple Capacity) do verily Iudge of it. The Title wherof, is, OF FAMOVS, and RICH DISCOVERIES: The Diſcourſe therof, not only conteineth the Generall Suruey Hydrographicall, of all the whole world, (and chiefly the rare Euidences for all the partes therof, moſt Septentrionall) but alſo, a particular and ample examination, of King Solomon his Ophirian three yeres voyage: And alſo, the lawfull and very honorable Entitling of our moſt gratious and Soueraigne Lady, QVEENE ELIZABETH, (and ſo, this BRYTISH SCEPTRE ROYALL) to very large Forrein Dominions: ſuch, as in, and by the ſame, duly recouered and vſed, the Courſe of the Diuine prouidence ☞ generall, in this preſent Age, will bring to light and life, matter of great Importance and Conſequency, both to the Glory of God, and the benefit of all Chriſtendom, and Heathenes. The greatnes of this Volume, Volume, is not much les, than of the Second. And one way, it far paſſeth the Second: For, in the Secret Center therof, is more beſtowed, and ſtored vp, than I may, or (in this place) will expres.

The ſame Volume, was, chiefly, of the Ientleman his own very ſpeedy collecting: And (by his wil, and order) hath this Inſcription, or Dedication, TO THE MOST VVORTHY: And the ſame Inſcription, to be written, or printed in letters of Gold.

And had not the Incredible, and manifold Iniuries, and vndue Diſturbances bin, which haue happened to him (by ſundry parcels of tyme) for the ſpace of three Monthes, and more, (in Totall ſumme), within the tyme of all theſe Collections, moſt ſpeedily and Carefully heaping vp togither, ſince Auguſt laſt: I am right well aſſured, that, neuer, in ſo ſmall tyme, ſo much matter, of ſo great Importance, with ſuch ſyncere and dutifull zeale to pleaſure his Natiue Cuntry: had by any Subiect (BRYTISH or ENGLISH) bin deliuered from him, by Inuention of his own, or by Circumſpect Collection, or diſcrete Application, out of former or preſent writers, and Authors.

In the mean ſpace (my louing freend, and vnpartiall Reader) I am, to aduertiſe thee, that, as concerning the publiſhing of the other two great Volumes: though, the Inuentions, and Collections be ſuch, as I ſayd, and of great Value: both for the HONOR AND WEALTH OF ENGLAND, and no little furderance of the GLORY OF GOD: yet, (by Order, taken by him, who hath the chief Intereſt therin:) the ſame, are not to be printed, VNTIL THE PROOF BE PAST, How, this Mechanicien, his zealous, dutyfull, and humble Aduertiſement Politicall, (for the Perpetuall Garde, and furder Seruice, of a PETY-NAVY-ROYALL, to be mainteined, without any Coſt or Charge to the Queene her moſt excellent Maieſtie, or any vnpleaſant burden to the Commons, and faithfull Subiects, of this BRYTISH MONARCHIE) ſhall be liked of, and accepted: (for the zeale, and matter, I mean, rather, than for any Rhetoricall poliſhing beſtowed on it.) Seeing, the ſame, conteineth in it, ſuch Fragments of Inſtructions, receiued from the foreſaid Philoſopher: being, hitherto (almoſt) a *Freendles freend. Why ſay I, *freendles? Seeing, a Ientleman, of great Experience in this world, ſayd vnto him, in my hearing, within theſe few dayes:

Wherby, it might ſeme, that he hath many freends. But, for all that, betwene a cold freend, and a faint harted Enemy, is ſmall diuerſity. And vndowtedly, a ſayned, hollow harted or Hypocriticall freend, is worſe, ten tymes, than an open Enemy: And, in very dede, is not to be counted a freend. And, ſo, may the outward repugnancy of theſe two ſayings, aptly be reconciled.

But, proceding in my former purpoſe, you may vnderſtand this, moreouer: that the Second Booke or Volume, (to this Preface apperteyning) will be of more hundred pounds, Charges, to be prepared for the print (in reſpect of the Tables, and Figures therto requiſite): than you would eaſily beleue. Therfore, though there were no warning, of Attendance to be giuen, to vnderſtand the iſſue of liking or miſliking the foreſaid, (zealouſly collected, and as humbly preſented) Politicall Aduertiſement: yet, this matter of Charges, ſo far paſſeth my ſlender hability: and, withall, is ſo dreadfull to the Printers, for feare of great los therby ſuſteining (So rare, and few mens Studies, are in ſuch matters employed) that, delay, on my part, is rather, that way, Conſtrained: ☞ And, therfore, no Order is to be thought vpon, by me, for the printing therof: *TYLL, A COMFORTABLE AND SVFFICIENT OPPORTVNITY OF SVPPLY, DOTH VERY VVELL SERVE THERTO.

TO THE RIGHT WORſhipfull, diſcrete, and ſinguler fauorer, of all good Artes, and Sciences, M. Chriſtopher Hatton Eſquier: Capitain of her Maieſties Garde, and Ientleman of her priuy Chamber.

Augusti primo } first begun.

NOt onely my dutifull good will toward your Worſhip, and my great deſire, to doo ſome thing beneficiall to this my Natiue Cuntry: But allſo, a certain ſtinging Indignation, agaynſt the Impudent Attempt of ſuch, as vſe, wrongfully to challendge to them ſelues, other mens Trauailes, (and not hable to yeld any Ingenious Inuention of their own) haue, at this * preſent, forced me, to doo my Indeuor, for the publiſhing of this ſtrange Inſtrument, with the name of the true Inuentor therof, annexed: And humbly to dedicate my ſimple Induſtry herein, to your worſhips protection. Truſtyng you will the rather accept the ſame, beyng (as it were) a Crum, to my great Contentation, faln from his plentifull Table, whom (I am aſſured) you doo derely and ſincerely, both loue and eſteme: as well, of your own moſt curteous diſpoſition toward all men, with whom your worſhip hath to doo: as alſo, for ſundry his vertues, and excellent Skill, in many Arts, and Sciences, Wherewith the higheſt hath very graciouſly bleſſed him. For which his habilitie, and Talent, he is allwayes moſt humbly thankfull, to the onely Author, and giuer, of all goodnes and wiſedome. Verely, for theſe 24. yeres (at the leaſt) I haue had the Ientleman in great admiration: As well for his foreſayd excellencie in good learning (ſo iudged of, long ſins, by the learned, in ſundry Nations) As, for his moſt ready Curteſie in Communicating or conferring to and with ſuch, as duly require his Aduiſe, Opinion, or Iudgement, in any Science, Arte or Practiſe, wherein he hath had any ſpeculation or exerciſe. Such Commendations, as theſe, allthough they be great, (and rare, in any Studious Ientleman of this Kingdom, els:) Yet, neither the ſame, nor ten tymes as great (ſownding lowd about his eares, for theſe many yeres paſt) haue at any tyme, or yet doo, any one pyns point, puf vp his hart, vayngloriouſly: but haue, and doo make him more Ioyfully thankfull, to the kingly and free giuer, of ſuch his great Talent: So great, as, Quibus Res nota ſunt, & qui illi benè volunt, exiſtimant orationem non eſſe parem Magnitudini Rerum geſtarum, (As that prudent Athenienſien Gouernor, Pericles, ſayd, In oratione Funebri: Commending them, that manfully had ſpent their liues, in the late warres, then:) Alij, ignari, iudicant laudes eſſe immodicas: quia inuident excellenti virtuti. Laudes enim eò vſq; tolerabiles ſunt, donec ea dicuntur, quæ Auditores ſe quoq; facere poſſe arbitrantur: Si Maiora dicuntur, Inuident, non credunt.

Thucididen, Lib. 2.

Therfore, pardon me (I beſeech yout worſhip) Yf in rehearſing here, and there (glaunſingly) ſome points of his due Commendation, [illegible]

I ſpeak far ſhort of that, which (farder) your worſhip and other, doo, or may know, and more aptly can expres, to Gods glory: for his graces, on that Ientleman, ſo abundantly beſtowed: Who (I know right well) doth make no les account of your Worſhip, then the Iuſtice of dutifull and perfect Amitie requireth. Which is a thing, very rare (now a dayes) any where to be found. And for better proof of the Premiſſes, (by your leaue, and with your patience) I will, here, truly and briefly Note ſuch matter vnto you, as neither (Withall) is impertinent to this Paradoxall Inſtrument, now, firſt publiſhed: nor mete to be let pas (in a manner) vnknown, and vtterly vnrecorded.

M.M. Lok.

For, whereas, about, 3. or 4. monthes laſt paſt, a vertuous * Ientleman and Marchant, with zealous Intent, for the Auauncement of God his glory, and the great Commoditie, and honor of this kingdom, procured vnto him, Worſhipfull, yea and Honorable Ayde alſo: to ſet furth Ships, for a Northweſt Diſcouery: And ſhortly after, there came abrode, in Print, a little Engliſh book, containing ſome probable reaſons, tending to the perſwaſion of the ſame Cours and voyage: In the Epiſtle of which little book, no ſmall pece of Credit (for the Attempt to be liked of) was aſcribed to M. Dee his Iudgement, (as, there, is to be ſene) ſet down, in his Mathematicall Præface, with the Engliſh Euclide, publiſhed: So it came to pas, that it was his wurſhipfull freend (M. Edward Dyer) his fortune, Firſt, to Aduertiſe him (as he told me) both of the ſayd book, by the Title therof: and of his Name, in the foreſayd Epiſtle (to good purpoſe) vſed. Whereupon, he, calling to Remembrance his old Atlanticall Diſcourſes, to the ſelf ſame purpoſe (at the ſayd M. Dyer his requeſt) almoſt ten yeres ſins, ſet down in writyng: And peruſing throughly all reaſons and allegations (both Pro and Contra) now, in the ſayd Pamphlet expreſſed: did, furthwith, by euery Article therof, in the Margent, Note their value, or imperfection. And, ſtraight way, after that, made a new Collection, for the ſame voyage, very probable. And thirdly (the ſame day) writ, 18. new Conſiderations of his own: very pleaſant, in probabilitie, for an other voyage of Diſcouery: (in reſpect of Safetie, Nerenes, and Commoditie) nothing inferior to that, which they, * now, haue vndertaken, God ſend them good ſpede.

* They did ſet furth the 12. of Iune laſt.

And, M. Dee, being thus furniſhed, aſwell to maintein probably his former Iudgement (by M. Gaſcoyn recited, in the foreſayd Epiſtle) and intending to geue thoſe his, 18. new and very ſtraunge Articles of Conſideration, to him or them, whom he ſhould deme apt and deſirous to furder the ſayd Diſcouery (no les, then this was by a diſcrete, carefull, diligent, and conſtant Procurer, follower and furderer, brought to the preſent execution): And alſo, purpoſing freendly to examin, and faithfully to Inſtruct M. Capitain Frobiſher, and M. Chriſtopher Hall, and other, that ſhould haue the chardge about the ſayd Northweſt Diſcouery (As he was, partly by the right worſhipfull Sir Leonell Ducket Knight, and partly by M. Frobiſher him ſelf, before that, requeſted to doo) made, then, no delay, to repayr to the Moſchouy houſe: Where,

Where, he found him ſelf courteouſly and very worſhipfully entertained. And at that tyme of his abode there, and after that, at ſundry other tymes, of his Reſort, thither, and to their Ships, he proceded ſo with them, according to his Intent: and pleaſured them, ſo much according to their deſire: That he finding them, quick of apprehenſion, and likely to remaine * Thankfull, for his pithy inſtructing of them: And they, finding him (aboue their expectation) ſkilfull: And (more then could be wiſhed for) Carefull, for their well doing, in this their commendable and honorable Attempt: both the one and the other, became very ſorry of their ſo late acquaintance and conference, for theſe their waighty affaires furdering: And greatly miſliked their want of tyme, ſufficient for the Complemēt and principall pointes of the Perfect Art of Nauigation learning at his hands. Such pointes, (I meane), as needed either great knowledge in the Sciences Mathematicall, and Arts Mechanicall: or expert Skill, of many Cauſes and effects Naturall: Such points (I ſay) to their affaires, and the Perfect Art of Nauigation, incident: he very aptly could, & right willingly wold haue dealt with them in: Yf that pinch of tyme, wold haue ſo permitted. For, it is very euident, by his deſcription of the Perfect Art of Nauigation (in his foreſayd Mathematicall Præface, declared) and alſo, common reaſon, and dayly experience, will confirme the ſame: that, not onely, ſuch ſkill and furniture, as both here is rehearſed, and in that Præface is ſpecified: But, other alſo, is moſt nedefull for him to be fraught withall, that ſhall be allowed for an exact Hydrographer, Pylot-Maior, Arche-Pylot, or Grand-Pylot-Generall of ſuch an Incomparable Ilandiſh Monarchy, as, this BRYTISH IMPIRE hath bene: Yea, as it, yet, is: or, rather, as it may, & (of right) ought to be: As I haue bene informed by him, who can reaſonably declare how:

 As (beſides many other thinges) this letter, may ſeeme to be a ſufficient witnes.*

To the worſhipfull and our approoued good freend M. Dee, giue theſe with ſpeed.

This 26. of Iune. 1576. I arriued in Shotland in the Bay of Saint Tronions in the Latitude of 59 degrees, 46 Minutes.

I with M. Hall make our dutifull Commendations to you with as many thankes as we can wiſh, till we be better furniſhed of farder matters to ſatiſfy our duties for your frendly Inſtructions: which when we vſe we doo remember you and hold our ſelues bound to you as your poore diſciples, not able to be Scholers but in good will for want of lerning, and that we will furniſh with good will and diligence to the vttermoſt of our powers. The cauſe of our ſtay here, was, to ſtop a leake which I had in the Michael, and withall filled certayne freſh water and by Gods grace this night according to my Commiſſion I wil depart. This preſent night I haue a fayr winde, God be prayſed. I haue had ſharp weather and Fogs: But all my company continue with a good courage as they began at the firſt. Newes I haue none, but my Barkes ſayle very well all: But the Gabriell hath no fellow, ſhe ſparde halfe her Sayles to all men. Thus I commit you to God. In haſt this preſent after noone ready to ſet Saile.

Diodor. Sic. Lib. 6. Cap. 15. Græcorum primus eſt maris Imperio potitus.

Minos, king of Crete, did Raigne, about 2860, yeres agoe.

The wiſedom and purpoſe of that moſt politik Lawmaker, King Minos, may, herein, to vs, be a ſufficient Aduertiſement. For, * Minos, antiquiſsimus eorum, de quibus audiuimus, Claſſem habuit. Et dominatus eſt in maxima parte eius Maris, quod nunc Hellenicum (.i. Græcum) vocatur: Et Regnauit in Cycladibus, & primus Conditor multarum vrbium in illis locis fuit, Cùm inde eieciſſet Cares: & filios ſuos Gubernatores conſtituiſſet: Ac Prædandi conſuetudinem (ſicut conſentaneum eſt) quantùm potuit, è mari ſuſtulit: Idque ob eam cauſam fecit, vt vectigalia & Redditus magis ad ſe peruenirent.

What Abundance of Mony, now, loſt by Aſſurance, giuen, or taken, would by this meanes, alſo, be greatly out of danger? B

3. ¶ And Thirdly, how many men (before time of vrgent nede) wold, A thus, be made very skilfull, in all the foreſayd Seas, and Sea Coaſts: in their Channels knowing, in Soundings all ouer, in good marks taking, for auoyding dangers, in good Harboroughs trying out, in good Landings aſſaying, In the order of Ebs and Fluds obſeruing, and all other points aduiſedly learning, which to the Perfect Art of Nauigation, are very neceſſary: Wherby, they may be the better hable to be diuided and diſtributed, in a greater Nauy, with charge of Maiſterſhip or Pylotage, in tyme of great nede?

Gubernautik.

Thucid. Lib. 1. in Oratione Periclis.

For, this Art of Nauigation, requireth a great skill and induſtry. And, Yf, 2000 yeres ſince, it was found true, among the Græcians, that, Ars eſt enim Res Nautica, ſi quid aliud: Nec diſcitur obiter: Sed ita exercenda eſt, vt in eam ſolam, cura intendatur, ne obiter ſimul alia agantur: How much more, now, in our dayes, may it be truly affirmed: When, it is, ten tymes more, (in particular skill, and ingenious feats) augmented, then it was, in thoſe dayes? They of this Nauy, ſhould oftentymes B eſpy or meete the Priuy Sownders and Serchers of our Channells, flats , banks , Pyts , &c . And ſo , very diligently , deciphring our Sea-Coaſts : Yea and in the Ryuer of Thames alſo : otherwhile, vp to the Station of the Grand-Nauy-Royall . And likewiſe , very often , mete with the abhominable Theues , that ſteale our Corne, and vittailes , from ſundry our Coaſts : to the great hinderance of the Publik plenty of England . And theſe Theues , are, both Subiects and forreyners : and very often , and to to euidently ſene : and generally murmured at : but , as yet , the caſe is not redreſſed : for all the good & wiſe Order , by the moſt honorable Senat of the Priuy Counſayll , taken therein. C. D.

Flats,

¶Fourthly , how many Thouſands , of Soldyers , (of all Degrees , and apt ages of men) wold be , by this meanes , not only hardned , well to broke all rage and diſturbance of Sea , and endure healthfully all hardnes of lodging and dyet there , but alſo wold be well practiſed, and eaſily trayned vp , to great perfection of vnderſtanding all maner of fight and Seruice at Sea ? So that , in time of great nede , that expert and hardy Crue of ſome Thouſands of Sea-ſoldiers , wold be to this Realme a Treaſor incomparable . And, who knoweth not , what daunger it is, in time of great nede , either to vſe all freſh-water-Soldyers : Or, to be a fortnight in prouiding a little Company of Omnigatharums : taken vp, on the ſudden, to ſerue at Sea ? For, our ordinary Land-muſters, are generally intended , or, now may be ſpared , to be employed otherwiſe , if nede be . I think ,, I haue ſo hard , out of ſome book, written De Republica . 4.

¶How many Hundreds of luſty and handſome Men , wold be (this way) well occupied : and haue needfull maintenance : Which , now , are either Idle , or, want ſuſtenance : or, both : In to to many places , of this renowmed Monarchy ? 5.

¶Moreover , what a Cumfort and Sauegard , will it , or may it be , to the whole Realme, To haue the great Aduantage of ſo many warlike Ships , ſo well manned and appointed (for all aſſayes) at all houres , ready to affront ſtraight way , ſet on , and ouerthrow , any ſudden or priuy forreyn Trechery : by Sea (directly , or indirectly) attempted agaynſt this Impire : in any Coaſt or parte therof ? For, ſudden forrein Attempts (that is to ſay , vnknowen or vnhard of to vs , before their Readynes) can not be done , with great power : For, great Nauies , moſt commonly , are eſpyed , or hard ſomwhat of, and that very certainly , while they are in preparing : though in the meanewhile (politikly) in diuers places , they diſtribute their Ships , and their preparations appertaining. 6.

¶And , by reaſon of the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall , Yt ſhall, at all tymes , not onely lye in our hands , greatly to diſpleaſe and pinch the Pety forrein Offender , at Sea : but alſo (yf iuſt occaſion be geuen) 7.

on land, to doo very valiant Seruice: and that, ſpeedily: as well, againſt any of the foreſayd forreyn poſſible Offenders: As, alſo, againſt
a. ſuch of Ireland, Scotland, or England, who ſhall, or will trayterouſly, rebelliouſly, or ſeditiouſly aſſemble in Troups, or Bands, within the Territories of Ireland, or England: while, greater Armyes (on our behalf) ſhall be in preparing, againſt them: Yf, farder nede, be. For, ſkilfull Sea-Soldiers, are, alſo, on land, far more m traynable to all Martiall exployts executing: and therein to be more quick eyed and nymble, at handſtrokes, or ſkaling: better to endure all hardnes, of Lodging, or dyet: and les to feare all daunger, nere or far: Than the Land-Soldyer, can be brought to the perfection of a Sea-Soldyer. As (to the ſame Intent) the Incomparable, and moſt expert Gręke Capitain Pericles, in his Oration (had to the Parlement Senators of Athens) auowched: Comparing their State, to the State of the Lacedemonians. Saying: Cumq; Præſidium alicubi aduerſus nos collocabunt, nocebunt illi quidem: quia excurſionibus vaſtabunt Agros, & recipient Tranſfugas: Sed non poterunt ſimul & obſidere nos, & prohibere noſtras Nauigationes in ipſorum terram: Vbi eos Claſſe vexabimus. At nos quidem plus habemus Induſtriæ, ad prælia in terra, ex vſu rei Nauticæ: quàm ipſi habere poſſunt ad Rem Nauticam, ex vſu Militiæ Terreſtris. Nec facile erunt periti Rei Naualis. Nam, nec vos (quanquam à bello Perſico, Claſſe vtimur, & nos exercemus) ſatis Idonei eſtis.

to read before their eyes, the moſt ioyfull and pleaſant Brytiſh Hiſtories, (by that Alphabet onely, decyphred, and ſo brought to their vnderſtanding and knowledge) that euer, to this, or any kingdom in the whole world els, was known or perceiued.

11. ¶Furdermore, How acceptable a thing, may this be, to the Raguſyes, Hulks, Caruailes, and all other forrein rich Laden Ships, paſſing within, or by any the Sea Limits, of her Maieſties Royallty, euen there, to be, now, in moſt Security, where, onely, heretofore, they haue bene in moſt Ieopardy: as well, by the Rauin of the Pyrat, as the Rage of the Sea, diſtreſſing them: for lack of Succour, or good and ready Pilotage? What great frendſhip in hart, of forrein Prince and Subiect: And what liberall Preſents, and forrein Contributions, in hand, will duly follow therof, who can not imagin?

12. ¶Moreouer, ſuch a Pety-Nauy-Royall, (ſayd he) wold be in ſuch ſtead: As though, [1] One were appointed, to Conſider and liſten, to the dooings of Ireland: [2] And, an other, to haue as good an eye, and ready hand, for Scotiſh dealings: [3] An other, to Intercept or vnderſtand, all priuy Conſpiracies (by Sea to be communicated) and priuy Aydes of Men, Munition, or Mony, (by Sea to be tranſported,) & to the endamaging of this kingdom, any way, intended: [4] An other, againſt all ſudden forrein Attempts: [5] An other, to ouerſee the forrein Fiſhermen: [6] An other, againſt all Pyrats haunting our Seas: And therewith, as well to waſt and garde our own Marchants Fletes, as they ſhall pas, and repas, betwene this Realm, and whereſoeuer els they may beſt be planted, for their ordinary Marts keping (yf England may not beſt ſerue that turne) And alſo, to defend, help, and direct many our forrein freends, who muſt needes pas by, or frequent any of thoſe Seas, whoſe principall Royallty, (vndoutedly) is to the Imperiall Crown of theſe Brytiſh Ilandes, appropriate.

One ſuch Nauy, (ſayd he) by Royall direction, excellently well manned, and to all purpoſes, aptly and plentifully furniſhed, and appointed: and *Now, in tyme of our *Peace, and quiet euery where (Yet,) before-hand, ſet forth, to the foreſayd Seas: with their Chardges and Commiſſions, (moſt ſecretly to be kept from all foes and forreiners) wold ſtand this Common wealth, in as great ſtead, as fowr tymes, ſo many Ships, wold, or could do, yf, vpon the ſudden, and all at once, we ſhould be forced, to deale, (for remouing the foreſayd ſundry principall manners of Annoyance:) we beyng, then, vtterly vnready thereto: And the Enemyes Attempt, requiring ſpeedy (and admitting no ſucceſſiue) defeating.

13. ¶To Conclude herein: This Pety-Nauy-Royall, vndowtedly, will ſtand the Realm in better ſtead, then the enioying of fowr ſuch Forts or Townes, as Callys and Bulleyn onely, could do. For, this, will be as great ſtrength, and to as good purpoſe, in any Coaſt of England, Ireland, or Scotland, betwene vs and the Forrein foe, as euer Callys was, for that onely one place, that it is ſituated in: And will help to enioy The Royallty and Souerainty of the Narrow Seas, throughout and of other our Seas alſo, more ſeruiſably, then Callys or Bulleyn euer did: or could doo: yf all the Prouiſoes hereto appertayning, be duly obſerued: foraſmuch as, we entend, now, Peace onely preſeruing: and no Inuaſion of France, or any Enemy, on that Mayn, inhabiting: toward whom, (by Callys, or Bulleyn,) we need to let-in our Land forces. &c. Much (I know,) may be here ſayd, Pro, & Contra, in this Caſe. But, God hath ſuffred ſuch matters to fall ſo out: and all to vs, for the beſt, yf it be ſo (thankfully) conſtrued, and duly conſidered.

* Note.

For, *when all forrein Princes, our Neighbors: dowtfull freends, or vndutifull People: (Subiects, or vaſſals) to our Soueraign, ſhall perceiue ☞ ſuch a Pety-Nauy-Royall, houering purpoſly, here and there, euer ready and hable to ouerthrow any their malitious and ſubtile ſecret Attempts, intended againſt the weale Publike of this moſt Noble kingdom, in any parte or Coaſt thereof: Then, euery one of them, will, or may think, that, (of purpoſe) that Nauy was made out, onely to preuent them, and none other: And for their deſtruction, being bewrayed: as they wold deme. So, that, no one, ſuch forrein Enemy, wold aduenture, firſt, to breake out into any notable diſorder, againſt vs: Nor homiſh Subiect, or wauering vaſſall (for like Reſpects) durſt, then, priuily muſter, to Rebellion: Or make harmfull Rodes, or dangerous Ryots, in any Engliſh, or Iriſh Marches.

* Note: A ſecret Policie herein.

But, ſuch matter as this, I iudge you haue, or mought haue hard of, ere now, (by the worſhipfull M. Dyer,) and that, abundantly: Seeing, Synopſis Reipub. Brytanicæ, was, at his Requeſt (ſix yeres paſt) contriued: As, by the Methodicall Author thereof, I vnderſtand. Whoſe Policy (here) *for the Partings, Meetings, Followings, Circuits, &c. of the Ships (to the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall belonging) with the Alterations both of Tymes, Places, and Number, &c. is very ſtrange to here. So that, in Totall Somme, of all the foreſayd Conſiderations, vnited in one: Yt ſeemeth to be (almoſt) a Mathematicall demonſtration, next vnder the Mercifull and Mighty Protection of God, for a fæſable Policy, to bring or præſerue this Victorious Brytiſh Monarchy, in a marueilous Security: Whereupon, the Reuenue of the Crown of England, and ☞ Wealth-Publik, will wonderfully encreaſe and floriſh: And then, therupon, Sea forces (a new) to be encreaſed, proportionally: &c. And ſo, the Fame, Renowm, Eſtimation, and Loue, or Feare, of this Brytiſh Microcoſmus, all the whole and Great world ouer, will ſpeedily be ſpred, and ſurely be ſettled. &c.

Security

Truly, I was carryed (almoſt, ere I was aware) and that, very pleaſantly, into the Conſideration of the manifold and Incredible great Commodities, that may ariſe to this Kingdom, by A Nauy, ſuch, as I haue (by good Inſtruction) ſpoken of: whereas, my chief purpoſe was, and is, to entreat of matters, touching this Paradoxall-Cumpas, and the perfect Arte of Nauigation. But, ſeeing the word of a Nauy, was ſo nere, in Sownd, to Nauigation: And ſeeing, no Nauy (in dede) can be dealt withall, at Seas, accordingly, without good ſkill of Nauigation: (though Nauigation, may be without a Nauy) verily, for ſo good a purpoſe, and ſo nere to my matter, I fauored my fantazy, while it ſomwhat ſtrayed from my principall Intent. And not ſo, neither. For, my principall Intent and his chiefly, (whoſe brief Aduertiſements herein I wold gladly make ſome Remembrance of) Is, (as it ought to be, of duty) to be fownd faithfull, ſeruiſable, Comfortable, and profitable to the Politicall Body of this Brytiſh Common-wealth: Wherof, we all, be Members, by God his mercifull Ordinance. That is to ſay: All true Subiects, their Chief Intent, and principall purpoſe, (in all worldly their af- » fayres, Artes, Sciences, and Studyes, &c.) ought to be, the procuring, » ſurdering, mainteyning and encreaſing of the weal and Commodity » Publik, ſo much as in them lyeth, and as, they decently and dutifully » may. And, So, the End of Ends, and vttermoſt ſcope of the ſayd Arte » of Nauigation, is ſuch Publik Commodity, of this whole kingdom » intended, and meant: that, from that Publik fowntain, very eaſily and » certainly, may be deriued to euery priuat man, his proportionall parte of delitious Refreſhing, and vitall preſeruation, in very godly ſort, and politik order.

Euery Subiect his Duety.

But, Contrarywiſe, Where priuate wealth and commodity is ſought 1.

is euidently hindred, or, indammaged: There, by great wiſdom, any ſuch Common-Wealth, wold ſpeedily be Cured from the Ruinous and Lamentable daunger, to the Strength and life of the Weale-Publik enſuying, of thoſe three kindes of ſo greuous and venemous wounds, if they be, ouerlong, neglected.

And, as Concerning the former Pety-Nauy-Royall: that I may, aſwell Reporte ſome parte of his Plat, and Conſiderations, for the Charges thereof bearing and mainteyning, as I haue expreſſed his erneſt wiſh for ſuch a Nauy to be ſet forth, for the Cauſes alledged: After this manner, was his entrance into that parte of his diſcourſe. What wold that Noble, Valiant, and Victorious Athenienſien PERICLES, ſay, yf, now, he were lyuing, and a Subiect of Authority, in this Brytiſh Kingdom? What Common Contribution, wold his pithy Eloquence perſwade, for the mayntenance of this Pety-Nauy-Royall? Who, taught by word, and proued in effect, Vnam Pecuniæ parandæ rationem putandam, Naues quamplurimas habere: Alias verò extra eam rationes, nullius momenti exiſtimandas. And ſo, effectually perſwaded the Athenienſiens, Quòd, NAVES, Diuitias: Diuitias verò, ægeſtatem ducerent. Which AEnigma of Prudent Pericles, is thus (in Latin) expounded out of the Greke Suidas. Opes igitur in Terra, Inopiam arbitrari: In MARI autem ſitas eſſe Opes, exiſtimare: Nihil aliud eſt, niſi vnas putare Opes, Naues quam-plurimas: Reliqua, Inopiam iudicare: Cuiuſmodi eſt Pecu- nia Spectaculorum, & Iudiciorum. Suadet itaq;, Omnes in hæc factos ſumptus, Nauibus eſſe aſsignandos. And, ſyns this matter of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, hath ſomwhat occupyed myne Imagination, I haue fownd (Sayd myne Inſtructor) by that worthy and excellent Plutarch his Greke hiſtories, of Notable mens liues, that this Peerles Pericles (about two thouſand yeres ſins) faithfully and erneſtly intending, to aduance the Atheniensien State and Common-Wealth: And to make it, after the beſt manner, to excell all other, with whom it had, or might haue to doo: perceiued, the only means, to be Such, as, by manifold, and more forcible Arguments, the like, muſt to this Brytiſh Ilandiſh Monarchy be much more auailable, To procure vnto it, Triumphant proſperity: And how? By Sea Security: And how, that? By this Pety-Nauy-Royall, in due * tyme prouided, and diſcretely, at Sea mainteyned. For, Pericles wiſely vnderſtanding, that no other means was ſo eaſy, ſo ready, and ſo ſure, for Athens to atteyn to their wiſhed for Souerainty, among their freends and foes, dwelling about them: But if, they were Lords and Maiſters of the Seas, nere and far about them: he wold not loſe any opportunity of fardering his purpoſe therein, both by Ships preparing, and apt men trayning vp to Sea diſcipline. And therupon wold not, Imperitis voluptatibus Ciuitatem delinire: But with ſuch exerciſes delight them, as, beſides other their priuate Commodities growing thereby, The Principall and finall Publik purpoſe, might alſo therewith, be brought to greater nerenes. As: *Sexaginta autem Triremes quotannis emittere, in quibus multi ex Ciuibus nauigabant: ſtipendiumq; ſingulis octo * Minæ erat: qui eas pro meditatione, & exercitatione ad Nauticam & Marinam Diſciplinam, perciperet.* This Pericles, alſo, by many his victories, was found and tryed, abrode (on Sea and land) Vir bello fortis & ſtrenuus: as well, as, a moſt prouident and Circumſpect Cownſailor, at home. Nulla enim incidit (eo Duce) ne fortuita quidem Belli offenſio. And, Quàm diù in Pace vrbi præfuit, moderatè vſus eſt Imperio, & tuta Ciuitas erat: Opibuſq; ac Potentia (ipſo Rempub: gubernante) præcipuè florebat: As Thucidides witneſſeth, and other. And now behold, what followeth (in Plutarch) noted, of ſome parte of that moſt comfortable frute enioying, which, of the former Ships prepared, And the Citizens to Sea diſcipline before hand trayned vp, was reaſonably expected: Deindè, Magna Claſſe, optiméq; ornata, & inſtructa, Græcas quidem Ciuitates, quarum ope & ſubſidio iuuabantur, benignè humanéq; tractauit: Vicinis autem Barbaris Nationibus, Regibus & Tyrannis, oſtendit Potentiæ molem, licentiamq; & audaciam, quacunq; libitum foret Nauigantium: Maréq; totum, ſub ſuam ditionem & Imperium redigentium. O, a Sownd Cownſailor and Couragious Capitain, moſt mete for the Brytiſh Sea Royalty recouering. O Pericles, thy life (certainly) may be a pattern and Rule to the higher Magiſtrates (in very many points) moſt diligently, of them, to be imitated. But, albeit, that ſuch a Græke Pericles, can not, readily, for our purpoſe, be found out: Yet, it is (Sayd myne Inſtructor) of ſome graue and expert men, thought probable, that this Politik Deuiſe, and humble Aduertiſement, can not ſo ſone take effect, as all the States and the whole Commons of this Brytiſh Impire, may, (for the manifold and waighty Reſpects declared), both very faithfully deſire, and alſo very quickly be induced, to be, after a moſt eaſy manner, Contributary thereunto: vnder the name of A perpetuall Beneuolence, for Sea Security. To

☞ To be playn, and very brief: Who is there, in this whole Kingdom, ſo Temperate and Thrifty in his expenſes: that diſpendeth not, yerely, in very vayn, and vtterly vnprofitable Charges, (I will not name ſome, worſe,) the Hundredth part of his yerely Reuenues: and the Fiue hundredth part of the value of his Goods? Let euery man, vnparcially, examin him ſelf, and his own Caſe, therein. But, yf we, now, wold leaue of, ſuch vanity, and (in dede) folly, and turn that vayn folly to Ripe wiſdom: And that ſuperfluous charge, priuate, to wealth publik: We may be iudged to haue geuen an attentiſe eare, to the Kingly Prophet: and to haue bin obedient, to his Counſayle: Where he ſayeth: Declina à malo, & fac Bonum: Inquire PACEM, & perſequere eam. Syr, pardon me I pray you: for, though I meddle not with the Myſticall and ſpirituall ſenſe, hereof: (for, I am neither Doctor, nor Bacheler of Diuinity: no, nor, of any calling Leuiticall) Yet, truly, this expoſition, or application, is not vtterly vnapt for this our purpoſe, of ſeeking wayes to preſerue the Peace publik, with all forreyn Princes: And to eſtabliſh the Security therof, perpetually: So far, as humain policy, may make reaſonable account, ☞ of ſo likely and circumſpect meanes, duly executed.

It is an olde Prouerb. A Sword, keepeth peace: So, this Nauy, by his preſent readynes, and the Secret of his Circuits, and viſitations of ſundry forreyn and homiſh Coaſts, obſerued: will make the malitious murmurers, and priuy malefactors, of all ſortes, to kepe in, and to forbeare their wicked deuiſes and policies: which, otherwiſe, againſt vs, they wold aduenture to execute.

Herein conſiſt ſundry Secrets.

Moreouer, wheras, ſome are of Opinion, that prety Speede, were nedefull, in the Premiſſes (as the tickle and perillous State of Chriſtendome, is, at this preſent:) Truly, in Reſpect therof, we haue great cauſe to thank God, for the honeſt and prudent diſpoſition of ſome Subiects of this Realm: at whoſe hands (till Ships enough for the purpoſe, might aduiſedly be built) we may, partly buy, and partly hyre, both in number and goodnes, Ships, ſufficient, to ſerue, in this Caſe, with all Opportunity.

Spede.

☞ But, as Concerning any of her Maieſties Principall Nauy, to be among them, now, at the firſt, for Cowntenancing of their Credit, or furniſhing of their Strength, he wold not preſume, to ſpeake therof: referring (very dutifully) ſuch points, to the great wiſdomes of the higheſt Magiſtrats, to conſider of.

And, Certaynly, if any thing, may (reaſonably) be alledged, as a Hinderance, whereby this Incomparable Ilandiſh Impire, ſhall be barred (yet longer) from taſting of this moſt delitious, Comfortable, Cordiall, and preſeruatiue frute of * Peace and Tranquillity (politikly 1. aſſured:) of * Wealth and Riches, comming in, abundantly, to Queene 2.

which may ariſe among the graue Cownſaylers, and circumſpect Gardi-
1. ans of this Common-wealth: Whether the Threaſor, by the former rate, generally in England leuyed and collected into their hands and order, will be ſufficient to counteruaile all Charges, ordinary and extraordinary, to ſuch a Pety-Nauy-Royall, appertayning, or no:

2. Alſo, they will, or may dout, whether vittailes will hereby wax ſcarſe, and dere, the whole Realm throughout, or no:

3. And Thirdly, the Poore and faithfull Commons, will on their part, only dout, of the true, due, and iuſt vſing and Beſtowing of the foreſayd yerely Beneuolence: and that, perpetually: according to the very godly and politik Intent of the perpetuall Contribution therof. Theſe three douts, chiefly, being reaſonably diſſolued, I will return to the Paradoxall-Inſtrument, and other Nauigation matters, thus, a while, ſet aſide.

The Toucheſtone of all Subiects wiſdom.

This Nauy to be nothing chargeable to the Queenes Maieſtie.

As for the firſt: Yf the Toucheſtone of all Subiects wiſdom, that is, the Queene her moſt excellent Maieſtie, and her right honorable and faithfull priuy Counſaill, do like, this Pety-Nauy (for the purpoſes before reherſed) to be ſet furth and mainteyned: So that, the ſame, become not chargeable to her highnes: but be ſufficiently prouided for, by the moſt eaſy and voluntary Contribution of her louing and faithfull Subiects, and other, (in maner, aboue ſpecified:) Then, it is to be ſayd to the Dout of want of Mony neceſſary: That, yf the foreſayd ordinary and vniuerſall Beneuolence of England, will not ſuffice (Though it will amount,
1. Yerely, to aboue an Hundred Thouſand pounds) And eſpecially, ſeeing the greateſt Charges will be at the firſt preparations: yf all things be made and bought new: Yt is (vndoutedly) to be ſuppoſed, that many a Thouſand of Men and Women: Yea (in dede) the moſt parte of all the former Contributers, ſeeing or vnderſtanding the firſt yeres Contribution (before hand, deliuered) ſo well and duly beſtowed, toward their Intent performing, wold, preſently (vpon a Second Publik warning, of want,) of their own honeſt diſcretion, become (agayn) as Liberall and Beneficiall, 2. (and, but for this once) Extraordinarily, as onely the Six hundredth peny of their Goods and Reuenues, ioyntly, ſhould be of value. That is, for him that may diſpend, by Rents, of Lands, or otherwayes, a Hundred pounds, yerely: and be alſo, in Goods, worth 500. pounds, to yeld now, in extraordinary Contribution, xx. s.
onely: and neuer, after that, any more extraordinary Ayde, to be, in this behalf, or otherwiſe, required.

Moreouer, in this Caſe of want, for ſuch a Publik Benefit furdering (as neuer was the like thereof, to this Brytiſh Monarchy ſo pro-
3. bably, aſſured) we wold craue, the Charitable and Brotherly Beneuolence (and that onely for this ones, As for the firſt ſetting vp, of the ſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall: And, but, according to this moſt eaſy, and Second

Rate,

* Rate to be leuyed) of the Inhabitants of Ireland, Ierſey, Garnſey, the Counties of Northumberlād, Cumberlād, Weſtmerland, the Town of New-Caſtle vpon Tyne, the Biſhoprik of Durham: and of all thoſe Cities, Boroughs, and Townes (onely the Town of Barwick to be excepted herein) which by any Letters Patents, of the Queenes Maieſtie, or of her moſt Noble Progenitors, (otherwiſe) haue Exemption, Priuilege, & Immunities, from paying any Tax, or Subſidy. &c. And likewiſe, of the Inhabitants of the Fiue Ports, and euery of their Members: And alſo of the preſent Inhabitants within the Liberties, of Romney Marſh. And therupon, good and ſufficient Prouiſo, to be made, and eſtabliſhed, to all and euery of the foreſayd extraordinary Ayders, that this their diſcrete and voluntary Contribution, ſhall in no caſe (hereafter) be vnto them any thing præiudiciall, or dammageable to their Charter or Priuilege of Immunitie.

* Only the Six Hundredth Peny of Reuenues and Goods ioyntly.

A Prouiſo.

¶ And this Requeſt, with no little Reaſon, may be offred to their Courteſies, to Conſider of: Seeing, not onely, it is for the better and more aſſured Peace and Tranquillitie enioying, ouer all theſe Kingdomes of England, and Ireland: and for a marueilous and Incredible wealth, and no les Strength, procuring to the ſame: But alſo, foraſmuch as, all the former, ordinarily exempted of all Taxes, and Subſidies, &c. ſhall, or may, by the continuall Seruice of this Nauy, and alſo by the Threaſory therof (hereafter) be greatly ayded: and that (peculiarly) to the leſſening both of their * Charges, and alſo of their * Danger, many wayes: In ☞ reſpect wherof, ſuch Priuileges, Immunities and Exemptions, were firſt granted vnto them: and continually haue bin, and are confirmed. So that, ſuch their extraordinary Beneuolence, ſhall not ſeeme merely giuen: no, nor ſo chargeable vnto them, as lent Good: But, to be Mony moſt commodiouſly (for their peculiar Cauſes, and behoof) ſomwhat before hand, diſburſed.

The Reaſon, why, of thoſe Exempted and Priuileged Places, an Extraordinary Ayde, is to be requeſted only this once.

¶ Alſo, yf it were preſently known, that this Pety-Nauy-Royall, (vndoutedly) ſhould, for the foreſayd exceeding waighty Reſpects, very ſhortly, be conſydered of: And with conueniency and Opportunity, furdered to the ſetting furth, and vſe therof: vpon that True and ſufficiently warrented Aſſertion, and declaration: How many godly Aldermen, and other well diſpoſed Marchants, of the City of London: How many a Marchant Venturer, & owner: Yea, how many great Wooll-Maiſters, Staplers, and Clothyers, throughout the whole Realm: Yea, and how many other, of all States and Profeſſions, wold very charitably, in their Legacies, Remember: or, be contented to be put in mynde, of deuout Contribution, or Legacy, toward the Threaſory augmenting, for due mayntenance of the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall? 4. Legacies.

¶ How many a Biſhop, Dean, and Archdeacon, &c. With their own hands, wold (Extraordinarily) be example to the Layity, of turning, Liberally, the Mammon of Iniquitie, to the preſeruation of Publik Tranquillity: and the mayntenance of the Politik Security therof, 5.

againſt Forreyn fraude and force: and all Homiſh poſſible Rebellions?

6. ¶But, and if the Incredible great, and manifold Commodities enſuing therof, were but had, a yere, two, or three, in proof: (O Lord) What lode wold be layd on, then, among the Godly, wiſe, and hable Subiects, to the better mayntenance of a bigger Nauy: And of new deuiſed, more warlik Ships? How many wold contend with other, vertuouſly, to excell herein: as zealous Benefactors, to the Weale-Publik? And ſo, for euer, to remayn recorded: not in boke onely, with pen and Ink marked: but in the harts of all Brytiſh, and Engliſh Poſterity: and in their thankfull memories, deeply Imprinted.

Could the deuout zeale, and Intent of our forefathers, be ſo Beneficiall to Thouſands: And, without any Commaundement, or Requeſt Publik, (they being then, in darknes, and beclogged with Superſtition) moſt gladly, be ſo liberall, to the building of ſo many fayr Monaſteries, &c. Their decking, and Threaſory within: and enduing with Landes, abrode (far and nere) to their charge, of ſo many Hundred Thouſand pownds, as, now, (in manner) are ineſtimable: And ſhall we, now, in the clere Sunne ſhyne of the pure Truthe and Goſpell: in the tyme of ☞ true Religion, known, and obſerued (As we will be cownted of,) Shall we, (I ſay), be either ſo ignorant, how to vſe our Liberality: Or, ſo colde in Charity: or ſo blynde in foreſight: Or, ſo priuatly ſcraping, and miſerably hoording vp: or, ſo thankles and vnfreendly to the Common State of this kingdom: Where, both, our Anceſtors haue receyued their life, mayntenance and wealth: And we our ſelues, no les: and are moſt deſyrous, that our Childern, Wiues, freends, and Poſterity, ſhould enioy as great Commodities, by means of the Publik Society, and the Ciuill Communalty, being preſerued in Secure Tranquillity: Shall we (I pray you) in vertuous zeale, and Liberality, and chiefly, in theſe our Reſpects, of very needfull and certayn, very Godly and great Commodities enioying, be far Inferior to them, in their Reſpects, ſuch as they were? We, being in wealth, and Reuenues alſo, far Richer, now: than they; then were? God forbyd: that ſo great diſorder, and lack of diſcretion, ſhould be to be ſuſpected now, or to be douted of, in the people and Subiects, of this Godly, wiſe, and rich Kingdom.

¶And How, can any Man, reaſonably doubt of the Hability of ſo mighty a kingdom, to ſet furth, and maynteyn moſt eaſily, only Three or Fowrſcore Tall and Warlik Ships: Where, ſo many Thowſand Thouſands, of folks, are Contrybuters to the Charges requiſite? Seeing, only Forty or Fifty worthy Subiects, of their own pryuate Hability, doo very eaſily, and (in manner) contynually, Maynteyn in trade, at Sea, ſo many (and more,) ſuch tall Ships: And the ſame, well Appoynted, well vittayled, well Manned: and they, Duly payd:

The Pety-Nauy-Royall.

And chiefly, Seeing Such a Pety-Nauy-Royall, of Threeſcore Tall Ships, and eche of them, betwene eightſcore and two hundred, Tun of Burden: And Twenty other ſmaller Barks, (betwene 20, and 50, Tun,) may be new made, very ſtrong and Warlike: and all, well vittayled, for Six Thowſand, Six hundred, and Sixty Men: and thoſe Men, Liberally waged: And both Ships, and Men, to all needfull purpoſes, ſufficiently appoynted: and ſo maynteyned continually, and that, very Royally, FOR EVER: for les, then Two Hundred Thowſand Pownds Charges, YERELY, ſuſtayned.

The yeerely Charges of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, Will be les than 200000. Pownds Yeerely.

¶Moreouer, In Reſpect of farder by-help, toward the Charges maintayning: Yt is not to be forgotten or neglected, that for a while, at the firſt (and perchance, now and then, afterward) this Nauy, is likely to mete with, and to Seaſe vpon, Diuers Pyrats and Rouers: who, either at broader Seas (you may ges, where) or els, nerer hand, haue made Rauening hauock: And now, they, and their Goods, Threaſor, Ships, and all, will fall into the hands, of Our Pety-Nauy-Royall, or ſome parte therof.

Pyrats Goods.

Mary, herein, my Inſtructor, wiſheth ſome Iuſt and needfull Order to be prouided, and kept inuiolably. That ſuch Ships, Goods, Threaſor: &c, ſhould not raſhly, greedily, or diſorderly be dealt withall. As though, we our ſelues, alſo, would be come Parteners with Theeues: where, now, we are BY GOD AND OVR GOOD QVEENE, conſtituted, as Diſcrete Iuſticers & faithfull Reformers of manifold Wrongs, at Sea, ſuſteyned: And therin, to execute our Charge, aſmuch, and as conueniently, as we may:

Therfore, after that ſuch a Pyrat, Ship, and goods, are vnder our ſafe Cuſtody beſtowed: Proclamation: is, ſo immediatly to be made, that within a Monthe after, (or ſix weekes ſpace, at the fardeſt,) yt may be publiſhed in ſundry chief and moſt frequented Portes, of this kingdom: lying, (as may vpon ſundry Circumſtances be gathered) moſt apt, and toward the places, either from whence thoſe goods came: or toward which, they were to be caryed: with all ſuch neceſſary Notice and Aduertiſement publiſhed, by the Proclamation aforeſayd, as may be auaylable to help the true Owners to their goods agayne.

Vnicuiq;, quod Suum eſt, tribuatur.

Thoſe taken Pyrats, alwayes, can (herein) beſt Inſtruct, where, of whom, when, and how, they came by that Booty. The wares them ſelues, the Marchants Marks, Letters, Bills, Reconings in that Ship or Ships, with thoſe Pyrats fownd, will alſo geue ſome light to ſuch Marchants here, as are beſt acquainted, with men of thoſe quarters and Cuntryes, from whence, ſuch goods came: Or whither they were to be brought. And, ſo, after the firſt Proclamation made, euery ſix weekes after, the Like to be made, in place conuenient, as before: Till a whole Yere and a Day ſpace, be fully expyred, after the Day of the ſayd Pyrats taking.

made : That, then only, and not before, of All ſuch goods, (not yet Claymed), Sale be made, by Auction Publik. Prouided allways, that of wares, which wold, by ſuch length of tyme, take great hurt, or Periſh: in good order of Auction, Mony be made in due tyme. And then, owt of all manner of that Auction Mony, all Charges, vntill that tyme, ſuſtayned, to be firſt Diſcharged : And ſo, the whole Some therof, remayning : And the Threaſor alſo of Gold, Syluer, and ready Mony, (Yf there be any,) is to be diſtributed, after this manner, (* Yf it ſhall by the Higher Powers, be ſo liked of:)

*Yf, is here vſed, for that the whole doth belong to the Prince, by prerogatiue: and therfore it is here half Petitionally, and ſo, Conditionally reckened vpon: As, by the Queenes Royall bountyfullnes, which is alwayes to be hoped vpon, in Rebus Reip Brytanicæ neceſſarijs: And the rather herein, Seing none of her Maieſties Ordinary, ſtanding, or certayn reuenue is hereby diminiſhed : nor her highnes at any charges about the getting of theſe Pyrats: and ſeing her Graces Cuſtomes are the more encreaſed, when her Seas are free and ſafe from Pyrats.

Diuide the Some, and Value of all, into Ten equall Partes. Wherof 4. are to be allotted to the Threaſory of the Exchecquer Royall of our Souerayn : 3. to the Threaſory of the Pety-Nauy-Royall : 2. to be ſhared among the Capitaynes, Souldyers, and Mariners : That is to ſay, among all the Men of thoſe Ships, which did preſent an actuall ſeruice, in the taking and Maiſtering of the foreſayd Pyrat, or Pyrats : and one parte of thoſe Ten, to be Due to the Lord Admirall of England, for the tyme being.

And as concerning the Shares, which are to be parted among the ſayd Seruitors of the Pety-Nauy-Royall : This, is Iuſtice : That (generally) it be diſtributed, according to the proportions of their Monthes wages : one compared to the other. And (particularly,) Od * Rewarde, owt of the Nauies Threaſor, is to be cheerfully and thankfully geuen, to whoſoeuer (at that tyme,) did moſt valiant and manfull ſeruice. And ſo, for a Second, Third, and Fowrth. &c. Yf it ſo fall owt.

¶ And of all Goods, Threaſor, Mony, and Iuells &c. By meanes of the foreſayd Proclamations (or otherwiſe.) Duly challenged : After all former charges, for the preſeruing therof hitherto, ſhall be accordingly payd, by the Lawfull Challendger: And vpon his paying alſo, only * the Tenth of the cleare value, of the ſo challenged Goods (the ſayd charges Deducted) Reſtitution, preſently, is to be made to the ſayd Challenger: And then, that Tenth, is to be diſtributed, in manner before expreſſed: by 4. 3. 2. 1. Yf the ſame be ſo liked of, By our Souerayn.

A Supplication to the Queene her moſt excellent Maieſtie.

¶ To Conclude then : One other Chapter (yet more) hereunto, annexed, will make it moſt Certayn, that Threaſor will not faill vs, for the Royall and Triumphant maintenance, of this our Pety-Nauy-Royall, And, that is : Yf yt wold pleaſe the Queene her moſt gracious goodnes, to be ſo bountifull to the Commons, as to Geue, Graunt, and Aſſure FOR EVER, to the Threaſory of the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall, all that her Right, Title, and Intereſt to the TENTH of all Forreyn Fiſhings, within the Royall Limits and Iuriſdiction of her BRYTISH SEAS of England and Ireland : where, now, No man, in her highnes behalf, or to her vſe, receiueth of any Forreyn Fiſherman, any one Peny, in token of their dutifull acknowleging her Royallty, within her due Limits of the foreſayd Seas.

There is a dubble Title, and a Third Reaſon, of this Lawfull demaund: The Titles, are theſe: Aſwell for occupying thoſe Our peculier Seas, and Sea-Coaſts, (to their great Gayn) otherwiſe, then as a * Common Sea Paſſage: And alſo, for that they ſhall not be, nor ought to be exempt of all Tything, there, toward God his parte: where, with les coſt, they receiue greater Benefit, then any Huſbandman, of Tylth of the Earth. In Reſpect (therfore) of Gods Glory: the Royall Authority, in our own Coaſts, will Induce them, By Right and Might, to Remember both God, and Queene, by whoſe fauours, they are ſo greatly benefited, within our forſayd Sea Limits.

Which Limits (According to the Iudgement of myne Inſtructor,) Are, in all places, to be accounted, directly to the Myddle Seas ouer, Betwene the Sea-Shores, of her own Kingdom (and of all Pety Iles, to the ſayd Kingdom appertayning) and the Oppoſite Sea-Shoares, of all Forrein Princes: And in all Seas, lying immediatly betwene any two of her own Coaſts or Sea-Shoares, the whole breadth of the Seas ouer (in ſuch places) is, by all Reaſon and Iuſtice, appropriat to her peculiar Iuriſdiction and SEA ROYALLTY.

The Proportion of the Equity of this Iudgement, dependeth ſomwhat vpon the Ciuill Law, concerning Partition or Propriety of Iles growing vp in freſh water Riuers. And it is not vnreaſonable, to deme Seas betwene diuers next Kingdoms, to be in like and Analogicall Condicion, in reſpect of King and King: As freſh water Riuers, are, in Reſpect of Priuate Subiects, of one Kingdom, whoſe Grownds are lying on both ſydes of the ſayd Riuers: Though the Stream and waters therof (after a ſort) be accownted Common.

Diuers priuate Groundes, haue, through them (by Præſcription ſo wonne, or otherwiſe purchaſed:) Some, Iter: Some, Actum: Some, Viam: Yet, no man, that, so may there lawfully pas, may alſo lawfully dig, to his gayn (or otherwiſe) In Itinere, Actu, or Via, of that ſort, without furder and due licence obteyned. So, all high Wayes, are cownted Common and Publik, to pas in: But, for any Priuat Man, (though he be a Subiect,) in any parte therof, to dig for a Quarry of Stone, or myne for Owre, or Stonecoles &c. Yt is not lawfull: though he wold fill it vp again, as well as he found it firſt. So, here, the Brytiſh Seas, are Common, and free for all Ships of all Nations to pas in, and vpon: But, as cõcerning the Fiſh, vnder the water of thoſe Seas: (Which Fiſh, God & Nature, bringeth fauourably within the peculier Bownds & Iuriſdictiõ of Our Royall Precinct:) No Forrein Subiect, ought, cuſtomably, or otherwiſe (preſumptuouſly) therin, to caſt Net for the ſame: or, (vſually or preſumptuouſly) to ſerch, or drag, to his priuate gayn, therin, without the eſpeciall good leaue, of the Maieſty of our Souerayn

The vſe of the Sea, is Common, but not the Iuriſdiction of the Sea. And yet, the ſame, may be Præſcribed: And the Proprietie therof fall to the Title Royall. Vide Cepolam Tractat, de Seru. Ruſt. Cap. 26. Fol. 95. columna. 2. This is Bartolus opinion, recorded by Cepola. Habentes Iuriſdictionem in Territorio Coherente Mari, dicuntur habere Iuriſdictionem etiam in Mari & in Insulis quae sunt in Mari *Vicino, vſq; ad Centum milliaria: & poſſunt ita Capere & punire Delinquentes in Mari, vſq; ad Centum milliaria, Sicut in Terra, in ſuo territorio. And herein, we deale, neither Iniuriouſly or diſhonorably. For, we will, to all our Oppoſite Neighbors, alſo attribute, allow, graunt and yeld as good Right and Intereſt, for the other Moyty of the Seas, to their Shore and Coaſts appropriat, as we do now challendge, for our peculyar half. So, that, this is moſt Iuſt, Conſcionable, and Godly: Herein, To do, as we wold be done vnto. Which poynt, tendeth greatly to the Aſſurance of all good Amity, and peaceable Traffique contynuing, with our faithfull, or louing Neighbors.

Iuſtice, and good Conſcience.

And, Seeing Iuſtice, and God, is on our ſide, what Shame and diſcredit ys yt, or may it be, to vs, with all Chriſten Nations, (that ſhall truly vnderſtand the Caſe:) yf we, like faynt harted and degenerated Meacocks, ſhould, now, make dainty, ſhrink, or be afrayd, valyantly to ſeaſon on, and prudently to enioy, this ſo manifeſt Right and poſſeſſion of our Sea Limits: and that, euery way? being, in dede (where they are greateſt) in reſpect of other Princes late Attempts, and Succes, of enlarging and ſettling their new deuiſed Sea Limits: not ſo great a parte, as a drop of water, is, in reſpect of a pottle.

Can that Pety Marchantlyke king of Portingall, haue any reaſonable Pretence: either, by Law of God, or Man, to inuade and poſſes: not, Quod nullius in Bonis erat, aut eſt: But, many other mens Ancient and lawfull Poſſeſſions, and Kingdoms: though they were, (and ſome yet be) Infidels? And that, in a courſe much longer, from his own, little, rightfull, and originall Kingdom, than half the world is about, in the greateſt Circle: yea, after the ſhorteſt Cut or Cours, which any way, they can be brought, to the bounds of their late forced Royallty? And ſhall not we, haue the Courage and ſkill, rightſully to enioy the very ☞ Precinct of our own Naturall Ilandiſh walls, and Royallty of our Sea Limits, here, at home, and before our doores?

Can the Portugale King (by the Popes Authority) cauſe the King of Spayn, to make his Nauies and Armados, to forbeare comming within any portion of the Eaſt half of the whole world? (as, to enioy, or be maiſter of any Sea, Mayn, or Iland therein:) And alſo, will the King of Spayn, be contented, ſo, to condeſcend and allow vnto the Portugale, vpon condition, that the other half of all the world (Weſtward) mought be at the like his choys and Iuriſdiction? (And though, in dede, betwene them two, and before God, this Couenaunt Negatiue, is firm, and inuiolably to be kept: Yet, neither of them, by any law, of God or Man, can farder ſeaſon on, as their New poſſeſsions, but, as we, and other, lawfully, may: That is, where they finde, Quod Nullius in Bonis eſt,) Can they, honorably (Quoth he) thus preſume, and with a Chriſtien, Conſcience, Deale, Diuide and Share the whole world, betwene them two only (quo Iure, quáue Iniuria) as much as they can: And will not ☞ they, or muſt not they, and all our oppoſite Neighbours, be ſo reaſonable, ſonable, yea and honorable with all, as to alow, like, and commend our wiſdoms and Induſtry, to enioy the ſkyrts and Purlewes (as it were) of our Brytiſh, naturall, and appropriat Sea Limits? And that, in the moſt decent, peaceable, and freendly manner, that Princely Counſaylors harts can deuiſe, and moſt diſcrete Capitaynes, vnder them, can execute?

Well, (Sayd he) my Hope is, that vnder our good Souerayn Elizabeth (ere long, if it be her pleaſure) the Æquity of this Caſe, will, or may, be maryed, with the Security of the whole State of this Impire: And that they two, will bring furth COMMON-WEALTH, INVINCIBLE-STRENGTH, AND IMMORTALL TRIVMPHANT-FAME: Three moſt lawfull Brytiſh Childern, and long wiſhed for, of the true, Brytiſh, and Chriſtian Druides, they being alſo, Politicall Philoſophers, and not Sophiſticate.

A Godly and Politicall Mariage, And the bleſſed Ofſprings thereof.

Note, here, (I pray you,) a fowrfolde wiſe purpoſe, vnder One golden Saying: to the Brytiſh Monarchy (at this Inſtant) moſt aptly, applyable: SI INSVLANI ESSEMVS.

Thucid: Lib. 1. Pag. 93.

SI INSVLANI ESSEMVS, INEXPVGNABILES ESSEMVS.

Beſides all this: Yt is moſt ernestly and carefully to be conſidered, that our Herring Fiſhings, againſt Yarmouth chiefly, haue not (ſo Notably to our great Iniury and los, and the great and Incredible gayn of the Low Cuntries) bin traded, but from xxxvj. yeres agoe, hitherward. In which tyme, as they haue in wealth, and number of Boats, and Men, by little and little, increaſed: and are now become very rich, ſtrong, proud, and violent: So, in the Race of the ſelf ſame tyme running, the Coaſts of Norfolk, and Suffolk, next to thoſe Fiſhing places adiacent, are decayed in their Nauy: to the Number, of 140. Sayle, And they, from Threeſcore, to a hundred Tun, and vpward: beſides Crayers, and other. Wherupon, (Beſides many other dammages, thereby, ſusteyned publikly:) Theſe Coaſts, are not * hable to trade Iſeland, as in tymes paſt, they haue done: to no little los, yerely, to the wealth-Publik of this Kingdom.

NOTE.

* Though of Late in the Vliſhing & Low Country Trubleſome diſorders, Some Few (by Stealing ouer of vittayles, and other things, from this Common-Wealth) haue made them ſelues priuatly rich, and ſo, Hable to ſet furth, to Iſland, and to other places, a Ship or two: who (before,) were far vnhable therto, by their own Wealth, and Lawfull trade of Dealing.

But, the Herring Buſſes, hither, yerely reſorting, out of the Low Cuntries (vnder King Phillip his dominion) are, aboue. 500.

Beſides, an Hundred, or ſuch a thing, of Frenche-men.

The North Seas Fiſhing, (within the Engliſh Limits,) are yerely poſſeſſed of 300. or 400. Sayle of Flemyngs, ſo accownted.

The Weſtern Fiſhings, of Hake, and Pylchard, are yerely poſſeſſed by a great Nauy of Frenchmen: who, yerely, do great Iniuries, to our poore Cuntrymen, her Maieſties faithfull Subiects.

Strangers alſo, enioy at their pleaſure, the Herring Fiſhing of Alamby, Wyrkington, and White Hauen, vpon the Coaſt of Lancaſhire.

And in Wales, about Dyſi, and Aberyſthwith, the plentifull

Herring Fiſhing, is enioyed by . 300 . Sayle of Strangers.

But (In Ireland) Baltemore, is poſſeſſed yeerly, (from Iuly to Michelmas) moſt commonly, with 300 . Sayle of Spanyards: entring there, into the Fiſhing, at a Streict, not ſo broad, as half the breadth of the Thames, againſt White-Hall. Where, our late good King Edward (the Sixth,) his moſt honorable Priuy Counſaill, was of the mynde (once) to haue planted a ſtrong Bulwark:: for other waighty Reſpects, as well, as for his Maieſty to be Souerayn Lord of the Fiſhing of Myllwyn and Codd, there.

Blackrock, ys yerely fiſhed by 300, or, ſomtimes 400, Sayle of Spanyards, and Frenchemen. But, to Recken all, I ſhould be to tedious to you, and make my hart to Ake, for ſorrow. &c.

Yet, Surely, I think it neceſſary, to leaue to our Poſterity, ſome Remembrance of the places, where, our rich Fiſhings els, are, about Ireland: As at Kilſale, Cork, Carlingford, Salteſſes, Dungarwen: Yowghall, Waterford, La foy, The Band, Calibeg. &c. And all, chiefly enioyed, as ſecurely and freely, from vs, by Strangers, as yf they were within their own Kings peculiar Sea Limits: Nay, rather, as yf thoſe Coaſts, Seas, and Bayes, (&c) were of their priuate and ſeuerall purchaſes: To our vnſpeakable los, diſcredit, and diſcomfort: And to no ſmall danger (farder) in theſe perillous tymes, of moſt ſubtle Trecheries, and fickle fidelity. Dictum, Sapienti ſat eſto.

And, as for Ireland Fiſhings, ſome Towardnes of good Pollicy, and ſomwhat like reaſon of prouidence, was in the heds of the honorable Counſailors and Parlement Senators to King Edward the fowrth: When, in the fifth yere of his Raigne, this Act, (among ſundry other,) was eſtabliſhed: That no Ship, or other veſſell, of any forreyn Cuntry, ſhall go to Fiſhing in the Iriſh Cuntryes: And, for Cuſtome to be payd, of the veſſell that commeth from forreyn Landes to Fiſhing. Farder to vrge, or more particularly to ſpecify the Concluſions, and reaſonable Sequeles, as well of the words of the Act, as the Intent of the Act making, is needles, in this place.

Onely the TENTH, of Fiſh taken by Forreyn Fiſhermen, within the Brytiſh Sea Limits, is to be Leuied, Diſcreatly.

Now, then, who can dout, (to begin withall) but that it is a moſt reaſonable and freendly Requeſt.; of all theſe forreyn Fiſhermen, to require, (with all circumſtances of Humanity, Courteſy, and Freendſhip, therin, and thereto vſed,) The Tenth onely, of all their yeerly Fiſhings: by ſuch means, as, moſt conueniently for them, and to our behoof, beſt, we may receiue the ſame: In Token, of their reaſonable Acknowledging the ROYALTY of this Brytiſh Monarchy, in the ſelfſame Brytiſh Seas, and Coaſts, to be, by God and Nature eſtabliſhed: where, they receiue ſo great Commodity: and where, from hence forth, no Iniury by any Man of ours, ſhall be to them done, or offred: But, their thankfulnes to God, (in reſpect of Tithe) and their Freendly duty to the Royall Maieſty, and Imperiall Dignity of our

Souerayn Lady Elizabeth, (within her own Sea Limits) is, thus, in rightfull, decent, and freendly manner, required.

¶And here, alſo, the Third Reaſon of Demaunding the forſayd Tenth (* before ſpoken of,) is to be playnly ſpecifyed: Which is this. Wheras, the Herring Buſſes, and other Forreyn Fiſhermen, haue, heretofore, vſed to be at great Charges, with hyring Waſters and certayn Ships (of their own Cuntry) appointed Warlike: for their Garde and Defence, in the tyme of their Fiſhings, within our Brytiſh Sea Limits: Now (by the Politik order, and valiant Induſtrie of her Maieſties Pety-Nauy-Royall, executed) No Pyrat, Rouer, or Pilfrer, nor any Warryour, in Ship of War: No, nor Executioner of any Letter of Mark, ſhalbe permitted to vſe, or haunt any of our Brytiſh Seas: and therfore, None of theſe ſorts, ſhall brede vnto the Forreyn Fiſhermen, any Diſturbance, Los, or hyndrance, in the tyme of their ſayd Fiſhings: And, beſides this, by the means of the ſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall, (contynually maynteyned at the forſayd Seas,) all manner of their Merchantlike Ships, at all tymes, may freely and ſafely pas, and frequent, not only the Brytiſh Narrow Seas, but alſo Diuers other Seas: being within, or any thing nere the Walk and Circuits, of the ſame Pety-Nauy-Royall. Wherfore, In regard of their ſayd great Charges * Sparing: And for ſuch Securitie * enioying in the tyme of their Fiſhings, (Which two points, are by our Pety-Nauy-Royall, ſupplyed, and to them procured): And in regard of the ineſtimable Los, and Dammage, aſſuredly preuenting, (againſt all Pyrats, Warriers, and all other violence of Man,) Which, els, might happen to their * Merchantlike, very rich Laden Ships, Hulks, or other, paſſing within, or nere the Circuits, which are (ordinarily and extraordinarily) of our Pety-Nauy-Royall, to be vſed and frequented: (Whereby, alſo, among their own Nation, great Sommes of Mony, oftentymes, loſt by * Aſſurance taking, may, now, be ſaued.) In Regard (I ſay) of theſe fowr, their great Benefits, by this Pety-Nauy-Royall, receyued: And in regard of the * Fyfth ineſtimable Benefit, and Riches, yeerly receyued, of the Fiſh taken within our appropriat Sea Limits. And Sixthly, in reſpect of the Honor, Reuerence, Priuilege, and * Præeminence, which (By Law) is Due vnto her Royall Maieſty, enioying the Lawfull Poſſeſſion of the Brytiſh Sea Royalty (Though, for a few yeres, laſt paſſed, yt hath byn by Pyrats, and other, ſomwhat abuſed:) And * Seuenthly, In reſpect of Gods parte, and their Forrein Tythe, Duly and thankfully paying, of our peculiar Commodities, by them receiued: And that, the rather: Bycauſe her Maieſtie doth geue the ſame, For the preſeruation of So many, of ſundry Nations, from the Rauyn of the Pyrat, and mayntenance of Godly Peace, and good Order, in her Royall Sea Circuits. And * Eighthly, in Token of their Freendly, Honeſt, and Iuſt meaning toward vs: And in token of their ſyncere and vnfayned making great Account of our ſound Amitie, and good Peace with them to be continued: In reſpect, of all the Premiſſes, The forſayd TENTH of Forrein Fiſhing (as before) demaunded, and agreed vpon, FOR EVER: may ſeme, both, on our behalf, and alſo, on the behalf of all the honeſt and well aduiſed Forreiners (whom it doth, or ſhall concern,) to be very reaſonably, iuſtly, and freendly demaunded, decreed, and accorded vpon, FOR EVER: That is to ſay, ſo long tyme, as the ſayd PETY-NAVY-ROYALL, ſhall enioy, the ROYALL SOVERAINTY of the BRYTISH SEAS: according to this firſt Plat, or, ſome better Inſtitution, thereof.

A Couenant very Iuſt, Freendly, and Commodious, for both Parts.

Note.

Yt is alſo to be known and Noted, for our Comfort herein, toward the Charges of the ſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall: That the Tenth, yeerly, of all Forteyn Fiſhings, within the Sea Limits, to her Maieſties Royalty appropriat, is aboue an Hundred Thouſand pownds, de Claro.

Good Cumfort of great Importance.

Gwicciardine, in his Deſcription of the Low Cuntry, geueth good Euidence of one portion therof. As, of our Herring Fiſhing alone: (what ſay I, Ours? Nay, the Flemiſh Herring Fiſhings, in our Engliſh or Brytiſh Sea-Coaſts.) For, he recordeth, that the Low Cuntries, make yeerly 490 Thouſand pounds ſterling, of thoſe Herring, Salted and Barelled: Rebating the Charge of the Salt. By this, you may haue a gros geſſe, of farder Reconing.

this great & dishonorable reproach

But, how soundeth this Latin Record, in a true & diſcrete Brytiſh Subiects eares: either, in reſpect of the los ſuſteyned, in Reuenue: or, in Reſpect of ſome Diſgrace, redounding to them, that can Redres the ſame: yf, it be amyſſe? Eſt etiam eodem tempore, Copioſiſsima Halecis Piſcatura, in Littoribus Angliæ & Scotiæ: quæ, per Piſcatores Flandriæ inſtituitur: á quibus poſteà, ſortitur Nomen: vt, Romam ille Piſcis delatus, Halec Flandrorum appelletur*. The ſame Sea, is called *MARE * BRYTANICVM*: And the Sea-Coaſts, be called of all Nations likewiſe LITTORA BRYTANIAE, Littora Angliæ: And yet, the Herring, therin taken, are called HALEC FLANDRORVM: Nay, we our ſelues, call them, Flemyſh Herring: Yea, we our ſelues, being beaten from our own Fiſhings, and Fiſhing places, are glad to buy our own Commodity, of Strangers: Againſt all Reaſon, Conſcience, Law, and good Ciuill Policy.

• Yt were a ſhame, to allege, that they are woorthy to enioy our Fiſhings, as Lords therof: bycauſe, they can ſkill to handle and order the Herring, better, than Engliſh-men. We muſt take hede of that Reaſon, betimes: For, ſo, they can do our Wooll, and vndreſſed Cloth: the more wicked or vnſkilfull, are our workmen at home, the whiles: And the les of our wooll, and vndreſſed Cloth, wold haue bin put into their hands, to try ſuch Maiſtries therewith: &c. But, to our preſent purpoſe returning.

The Anſwer to the Firſt Dowbt.

Then, By Gods grace, we may (comfortably) thus Anſwer e to this firſt Dowt, In the name of the whole Body Politicall. Seeing, Our Reuenues, now, and wealth, are greater, then was our forefathers: And Seeing, we are ſufficiently perſwaded of the manifold Publik Benefits, ſuch, as neuer hapned to our forefathers (for all their Incredible foreſayd great Charges) And which, by all humayn coniecture, are like to enſue: not only to our ſelues, but alſo to our Wiues, Children, Kindred, Freends: And ſo, to this whole Brytiſh Kingdom, vniuerſally: both now, and euer, after our dayes: We will (ſay we) be found, through Gods help, ſo well aduiſed, ſo diſcrete, ſo liberall herein, and bountifull, as, aboue all things, this hoped-for Publik Peace, and Generall Security, chiefly requireth, that we ſhould be:

And the Hundred Thowſand pounds, all manner of wayes, to theſe vſes, collected, will amount to be ſo many, as we throughly are perſwaded: (Theſe laſt diſcourſes, well conſidered: and two more, which we, of our ſelues, with great reaſon and probability, will annex hereunto) That, contrary to the firſt dout, we confidently, now, may truſt, that, not onely, for this Pety-Nauy-Royall, a ſufficient maſſe of Threaſor, will eaſily and ſpedily be contributed: But, great * Ouerplus alſo, will thereof grow (ere long.)

The Poltik beſtowing of Some of the Ouerplus, of the Pety Nauies Threaſor.

And then, it is intended, That 1. a Parte therof, ſhall be employed toward the Relief of ſuch poore Men, as either by Sicknes, maym, or vnweldynes of age, are to be diſmiſſed from the ſayd Nauy: and other, to be taken in, in their roomes. 2. Part, toward the finding of the poore Widdowes, and Orphanes of ſuch Men, as in good ſeruice, in the ſayd Nauy, haue manfully ſpent their lyues: 3. Parte, toward a ſufficient Stipend, for 4 Pety-Pylots-Publik, in 4 ſundry, and apt Ports of this Iland, to be reſident, and ready to ſerue, Mathematically and Mechanically, with Quadrants, Rings, Chartes, Sea Compaſſes, Sandglaſſes, and ſuch other furniture, as to the charge and Seruice of Pylotage, and Maiſterſhip in the foreſayd Nauy, may be found needfull: each one appoynted to xx Ships: (or a Quarter of the whole Pety-Nauy-Royall, how great ſo euer it do grow hereafter:) To thoſe Ships, I mean, that are to the Coaſts, next him, aſſigned. And thoſe 4 Pylots, Firſt, to be choſen out of them, that haue, allready, become expert at Sea: And then, by the Grand-Pylot-generall of England (for the tyme, being) to be informed farder, as appertayneth: And that, euery yere, once, by their appointed repayre, made vnto him, at place certayn. Other 4. parte, for Preparation of Store, of things neceſſary to the ſayd Nauy: And eche thing, excellent good, and perfect in his kinde. An other 5. parte therof, to be beſtowed toward neceſſary Hauens, Harboroughes, Ports, Fowre Pety-Pilots-Publik.

The Grand-Pilot-Generall, of England.

Blockhouſes &c. mainteyning: or, in moſt needfull places, new making. And [6] Parte, in building euery yere, ſome excellent Ships of war, for the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall. Some, toward New [7] Forreyn Diſcoueries making: for Gods glory, the Wealth-Publik and the Honorable Renown of this Ilandiſh Impire. Wherupon, alſo, dependeth the Firſt of our two diſcourſes, before ſpoken of. For, ſo may parte of the Threaſory of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, be employed, toward New Diſcoueries making, that, of all ſuch Diſcoueries, the half Charges may be Contributed out of the Threaſory of the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall: And ſo, 10. likewiſe, the half clere [*] Gayn therof comming, to be to the ſayd Threaſory due, and anſwered accordingly: by like, and like number of Officers, as are for the reſt of the Society of ſuch Diſcoueries.

Foreyn Diſcoueries.

☞ Greater Publik Equitie, is in ſuch a manner of New Societies making: and with better order, and more ayd, may greater things be attempted, than hitherto haue bin: with the Timerous myndes of a Few: and therefore, with their to to ſtraight Allowances, at their firſt Onſet giuing. Wherupon (oftentimes) not only their firſt Charges haue bin loſt: But alſo, the Attempts diſcreditted: as of things, either vnlucky, vnlikely, or vntrue: where, none of all theſe points, hath bin the occaſion of ſuch yll Succes.

Note.

By this means, all Marchants, and other, that are Partners of Priuileged voyages, ſhall be, not only vnhindred, of their hoped-for Gayn: but, rather, greatly furdred, to bring that to pas, by Publik Ayd, and to the Benefit Publik, and Priuate alſo: which, before, with much adoo, could ſcarſe be maiſtered: to make them (a few parteners of ſuch Societies) to become, Priuately, Welthy thereby.

Hereuppon alſo, the Queenes Maieſties Cuſtomes, both owtward and homeward, will greatly be encreaſed: And all the Commons, and Body of the Realm, will grow in greater loue, with the Marchants Dooings: and better like of the Princes eſtabliſhing of ſuch Priuileged Societies: When, the wary and carefull Diligence of the Merchant, and the gracious Priuilege of the Prince, ſhall (PROPORTIONALLY) be beneficiall to ONE, A FEW, and ALL. (Which is the chief Mark, that One, a Few, and All, ſhold ſhote at.) For, ſo, ſhall ſuch Dooings, be aſmuch auaylable to the Common-wealth, then, as, now they are to the Priuate Lucre of a Few: And that, with Publik Dammage. Seeing, the ſelf ſame things, which they Bring in, or Deale with, now, be Deerer bought than they were, before any ſuch New Trade or Society, therin Priuileged.

11. Homiſh Diſcoueries.

¶And in like ſorte, is to be ſayd, in this our Second Diſcours, of all other [8] Homiſh Diſcoueries, to be made within the Queenes Maieſties Dominions, of her Brytiſh Impire. For, moſt certayn yt is, that there is Naturally [*] couered in the Earth, and vnknown, in theſe Dominions, ſo ☞ great Riches of Lead, Tyn, Copper, Syluer, Gold, and Diuers kyndes of other very commodious and proffitable Minerall Matters, as might incredibly encreaſe both the Threaſor Royall, and alſo of all the Partners Publik and Priuate: who, ſhould Proportionally, be at all Charges, about ſuch Minerall Diſcoueries, to be throwghly and Maiſterly executed.

And by the way: How think you? Doth it not ſting the Naturall born Subiects, that Strangers ſhall be grafted into their places: and their Publik and priuate Parte of Benefit, to be, thereby Cut of? The Strangers Science, and Cunning, might be recompenced, and their Charges allowed: But, ſo vnnaturally to deale with the True and Naturall Body Politik, yt is not Neceſſary: I will ſay no farder. And, if Strangers, wold not ſo deale, other, wold: and will be found.

Note.

This thing, being once, by due Publik order and Authority, eſtabliſhed: How many an Owre, and Myne, (very rich,). wold be diſcloſed and pointed to: Where, they are: and Minerall Examples, of great Cumfort, ſhewed by diuers Priuate Men? (Ientlemen and other) who, now, will neuer open their Mouthes, to diſcloſe the ſame: Bycauſe, in their own Grounds, where their Propriety (by Gods law, and the Law of Nature) ſhould be, to them, moſt beneficiall of all other Men: now, (as the manner, yet, is) their parte, wold be leaſt, of all other.

Note.

But, when, with better Allowance to the Prince, and the Proprietary Owner of the Soyle alſo, (where any Gayn may riſe by Myning) and with ſome great Publik Commodity (as to the Threaſory of the Pety-Nauy-Royall,) theſe Minerall and Mettall woorks, ſhall be followed, *Then, Priuate Men, will not grudge, though 40, or an hundred other Priuate Partners, haue great Gayn of their peculiar ground. And therupon (Say we) the Commodity, all manner of wayes, will ariſe greater, than euer it will do, otherwiſe, by ſuch Societies, as they now are.

Then ☞

The Induſtrious Encreaſing of the PVBLIK THREASORY, Is A Principall Cumfort to the Commons. ☞

And vpon this Conſideration, that, of their Perpetuall Beneuolence, for Sea Security, Some portion therof, ſhall be employed to ſuch Publik vſes, as both the whole Body of the Realm, may vndoutedly haue ſome ſenſible and certayn proof, that their Publik Threaſory of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, doth, as proportionally encreaſe, as any, or a few Priuate Mens Coffers els, before, were, or (by good order) mought haue bin, by ſuch Societies, well amended: vpon this Conſideration (Say we) How gladly, and how readily, will euery Man be Contributer therunto, after the moſt eaſy Rate, and proportion preſcribed? And making this Reconing among them ſelues, (ouer and beſides all the former marueilous great Benefits Publik, rehearſed:) Thus, will they, then, ſay: *Yea Mary: This, is Common-wealth like, in dede: When, our Common Threaſory, is as carefully, and diſcreetly augmented, by the wiſdom and Authority of the Higher Magiſtrates, and the witty and Circumſpect trauailes of our Parteners, (Mar-chants, and other, whoſoeuer) As, before, by ſuch Priuileges, All, was intended and procured for the Benefit onely of a fevv. And chiefly, Seeing, before, the gaynfull wares and things, wherof they were Parteners, were, by their vnhabilities (not inſatiable Couetouſnes) that dealt with thoſe Attempts: or by the manner, as they dealt with them, become very dere: and derer, than before ſuch their Societies eſtabliſhed. Reaſon perfect none can be yelded, why it ſhould ſo be: But, this Single ſoule Allegation, is often repeated: The great Charges, which hitherto haue byn layd on their Shoulders, in that peculiar Trade of their Society. &c. And therfore, aſſone as they are in poſſeſſion of any thing, to raiſe Mony on: they think it politikly done, to make preſently their Reconing of their whole Charges hitherto ſuſteyned: And ſo, by and by, to begyn to raiſe the pryces of their things, higher, than they found them, before their new Societies erected: to haſten, thereby, ☞ their diſcharge, or Recompence of Dammages (ſay they) as yet ſuſteyned. And ſo, by that means, the poore Commons, buying the ſame wares derer, than before: become (ſeely Soules) Contributers to theſe few Mens priuate wealth amending: But, to the decaying and weakening of the wealth and hability of the Commons.

And therfore, by the preſcript of humayn Reaſon, yt is a more perfect Politicall Ordonance, ſo, before hand to eaſe all ſuch diſordered Charges, that, both, Rich [*1] Forreyn New Trades, and great Threaſor, may ſubſtancially and throughly be brought in, and purchaſed to this Kingdom: publikly, as well, as priuatly: And alſo, that Gods great Bountifulnes, [*2] Couertly beſtowed vpon this Incomparable Ilandiſh Monarchy, may, by Publik Ayde alſo, be ſo brought to light, handling, and vſe, as the whole Commons, hereby, may in their Pety-Nauy-Threaſor, become wealthyer: And pryces of ſuch things as (either ☞ one way, or the other) are gotten: may be either kept lovv, or brought lovv: That, the greateſt parte of this Kingdom, (which are the poorer ſort) may, both, laude and bles God, for the wiſdom, Charity, and Iuſtice, of their Gouernors (Wherupon alſo, they will both better loue them: And for very loue, be more affrayd, to diſpleaſe them.) And alſo, vniuerſally, all the Realm ouer, the true and faithfull Bleſſing and prayer of all honeſt Subiects, may be concurrent with, and aſſiſtant to, all ſuch honorable and Publik Attempts, either [1] Forreyn or [2] Homiſh: for the better ſucces therof obtaining, by Gods mercy: wherewith, theſe our two brief Diſcourſes, in this place, ſhall be finiſhed.

Conſider before for the Byhelps to encreaſe the Threaſor Publik, Ten Generall Extraordinary means: beſides the firſt Ordinary Beneuolence:

Theſe Ten Generall, and Extraordinary means, of increaſing the Threaſory of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, in this place, may be thought ſufficient, for the probable Diſſoluing of the firſt Dowt.

Anſwer to the Second Dowt, or Obiection.

And, as for the ſecond Obiection, yt is more eaſy and certayn, to put

to put that point, owt of all Dowt. I mean, as Concerning Scarſity, and Dearth, of Vittailes, ſuſpected or Dowted, by the continuall vittailing of this Nauy. Mary, herein, ſome forecaſt muſt be vſed: as, ſundry other, in other points, are. (But not * here to be rehearſed.)

* This brief Aduertiſemét doth expres but ſome of the principall poynts, moſt behoofull for the Common-Wealth at this tyme. ☞

For, as the Men, to Furniſh the forſayd Nauy with, are to be choſen, (and that, with Diuers Conſiderations) owt of all Shires, and Coaſts of this Realm of England: So, likewiſe, the vittailes, are, ſo, to be prouided for, that the whole Realm, may yelde the ſame: euery parte, according to the fertility of the Soyle: And according to the Store to be reſerued, for their Seruice, actuall or poſſible, otherwiſe. And that is very needfull: yf, againſt forreyn Enemy, we ſhould nede a Mayn Army (one, or mo,) by land, any way, toward Coaſt or Border: or, for the Grand-Nauy-Royall vittailing, in tyme of nede.

And, ſeeing the Vittailes, ſhall be ſo indifferently, or proportionally prepared, all the Realm ouer (as before,) How can any one party, in this Publik, and Common-wealths Caſe, finde him ſelf ſtraightly, vnduly, or vniuſtly, dealt withall?

And, as the Vittailes, and Men, ſhould riſe, (after a ſort) ioyntly and proportionally, within the places correſpondent: Store alwayes to be reſerued: as I ſayd: (And ſuch, about the Riuer of Thames chiefly, and within certayn myles therof, And in other Quarters: as, both for the City of London, continually: And the Grand-Nauy-Royall, in tyme of nede, may be [as it hath bin] ſeruiſable:) So, ſhould the Ships, receiue thoſe Men and Vittayles in, at Twenty ſundry Places, or Ports, in England.

Note this Poynt.

The Twenty Ports for the Pety-Nauy-Royall.

Now, ſeeing then, this Vittayle, thus orderly and indifferently prepared, out of all Places, is to be beſtowed on * Chriſten-men: yea, and them, our own * Cuntrymen: And not, on FORREYNER, SCOT, FRENCH, FLEMISH, DANE, or SPANIARD, &c. And ſome of them, either Sonnes, * or Brothers, or Fathers, or Coſens, or Kinſemen, or Singular Freends: Yea, ſome, Eſquyers, ſome Knights, ſome Barons: And ſome of them, Landlords, to ſundry of vs at home, here remayning: * Fourthly, Seeing, this Vittaile is to be beſtowed on them, who do, and will aduenture their lyues, in all Caſualties and dangers of the Sea: And againſt all violence of Pyrate, or any open warryor: And that, not, for any their own Priuate Quarrell: But for the Publik Safety, and Security, of all England and Ireland. Not, for thyne, and myne, alone: But, for the Safegard and proſperous Eſtate, of Millions of Men, Women, and Children, within this Monarchy, on Land: (and by this means,) at their eaſe, quyet, and pleaſure, remayning. Conſidering then, well and erneſtly, all thoſe 4 generall Reſpects: What true and Sound member, is there, of this Common wealth: and faithfull deſirer of the bleſſed Peaceable Security, of England and Ireland, vnder our Souerayn Empres, our moſt Gracious Elizabeth: who, will not (in a manner) be willing, the Charges to be borne (parte and parte like) the whole Realm throughout? wherewith, to beſtow meate and drink, on them, continually: that refuſe no one day, or a moment (yf occaſion be offred) to aduenture their hart blud, lyfe, and Lymmes, for vs: And on Seaboord, continually, to endure hard dyet and lodging: for Commodities innumerable, of both theſe whole Kingdoms?

☞ But, it is not ſo meant: as, to haue any farder Contribution of purs, then is before ſpoken of. But, what is he, (Yea, what is he, I ſay agayn?) is he, a ſound member of the Common-wealth: a faithfull Subiect to our good Queene Elizabeth: or, a Charitable Chriſtian, that either wold (in this Common-wealths ſeruice, or at any tyme els) * hide Corn, or other vittayle, from Publik Ayde, and Reliefe: Or els, wold not be content, to receiue the due value, and reaſonable Pryce therof, very gladly? But, moſt miſerably, wretchedly, couetuouſly, yea vnchriſtianly, (I will not ſay, Trayterouſly) wold deſire (now chiefly) to enhance the price of Corn, and Vittayles, to the great pinching of the poore at home: And perchance, for a Trayterous means, to hinder the vittayling of the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall: or, to make it odious, or doutfully thought of, to ſome: as though, it were a iuſt occaſion, of prices of Corn and vittayles ſtarting vp: more now, then before? ☞ O, vayn, blynde, Couetous Miſer (who ſo euer he be, that is ſo mynded.) Thou, and thy like, and that of late dayes, when no Army, or Nauy, hath bin to be vittayled, haſt, on the ſudden, and in the tyme of great Store, all the Realm ouer, (euen then) God knoweth, vpon what wicked Intent, or miſconſtruing, or light Credit geuing to Coniecture, found in ſome new Three halfpeny Prognoſtication: haſt, moſt vnreaſonably enhaunſed the Prices of Corn, Butter and Cheſe: And at other tymes, of Beofs, and Muttons, &c.

I Pray thee, be Reaſonable: and think truly: and make Reckening with me, Chriſtianlike; and like a good Member of this Common-Wealth: And, as a true Subiect, to our Souerayn.

The true Cauſe of Dearth.

What, may be the * true cauſe, of Dearth (whenſoeuer it pleaſeth God, to vſe that his ſkourge?) Any other thing, but Want of Corne, or Vittayles? That Want, yf God ſend yt, is eyther by the Ordinary Cauſes Naturall, taking effect, according to the Predeſtined Plat of this whole wordls œconomie, and contynuance: Or, it is, by Extraordinary Means, of Gods ſending: And that, Diuerſly, and in diuers tymes, and States of the Corne, or Cattayle &c. Theſe, be true Dearths, vpon great wants of Corn, or Cattayle to be had: Or, at the leaſt, to be had ſo good, as is behoofull for Mans bodily Suſtenance? All other Dearths, that come not of Want, by Diuine means: are either by 1. Fraudulent Want: As, through Corne, and Vittayles ſtolne, and Priuily conueyed to our Enemyes, or Fickle freends: for Priuate gayn only: to the hinderance of the Wealth-publik: Or, by falſly 2. Pretended Want: As the Vnchriſtianlike Practiſe, of ſuch Caterpillers, and Rauening Wolues: (Deuouring Corne and Cattell) wold make the Commons beleue. And, when, Abundance and Sufficiency is, to make and Wraſt a Dearth: by ſelling Three Quarters of Wheat, of the very value (then)

of fowr: And Three Oxen, of the very value of fowr: and ſo, of Shepe &c. What a Deuouring, and Rauening, is this? Of euery Fowr, to Deuoure and conſume one: and the ſame, neuer more to be hard of, in this Common-Wealth? And this, only, for his moſt Priuate Gaynes ſake, to be Bagged, or Cheſted vp, for his Idoll, to behold or Delight in; As in his ſtrength, and furniture: ready to mainteyn hym, in other wicked purpoſes: And (as God knoweth) fooliſh Intents. Perchance, with ſome of that pelf (ſo miſerably and diueliſhly ſcraped together, or violently, in manner, wraſted out of the poore Commons hands, and mouthes) to be at Charges, to encloſe ſome parte of the Commons, from a poore Village, or Townſhip. With ſome, to buy his neighbours Houſe, or Farme, ouer his hed: and ſo, to make him freends, of the Mammon of Iniquity. Nay, Nay, make him ſelf, the Carefull freend, and doting louer, of wicked Mammon: The Diuell Infernall, and not of God, nor his Members: Nor the members of the Common-wealth: Yea, many a Thouſand of ſuch, as, eche one of them, is more profitable and Comfortable to the Weal-Publik of England; than a Thouſand ſuch Mammons dearlings are. I mean the Maryner, the Soldyer, the Ientleman, Eſquyer, and Knight, yea and Baron: now, Toſt and Turmoyled at Seas: being the Publik Watchmen, Garde, and Champions, for the moſt Bleſſed State of Trãquillity publik, in this Sacred Monarchy, preſeruing.

Commons Encloſing.

And no les, is the Error and diſorder vſed in this Kingdom, of Dardanarie Trade, and Monopolie: two greuous hindrances, to the Weale-Publik. Iacobus Simancas, Epiſcopus Pacenſis, ſayd very well, in his book De Republica: * dedicated to the King of Spayn: *Ne oneretur Annona, & adeò rerum Venalium Prætia, iniqua ſint: animaduertère oportet in DARDANARIOS, qui omnia praeemunt, vt ea poſtea Carius vendant. And as for MONOPOLIE: this, had the ſame Simancas Noted, out of Zeno his Conſtitutions.

Lib. 4. C. Tit. 59.

Agayn, what Reaſon hath any Man to go about, by rayſing pryce (without any detriment to the Prince or Commons) haue now ſerued our turns very well: And ſo, the Poore Commons ſhould not haue, One, and the ſame Awle, twiſe thruſt in their right Eyes. As, to ſee, and fele agayn, the Incredible Spoyle of Woods, and Foreſts, as hath bin made, to furder Iren works withall: And yet, (Notwithſtanding,) Iren to be now, derer, than it was, when, from beyond the Seas, we were chiefly ſerued therof: And our Iren alſo (yet) worſe, then the forreyn Iren. And our Woods, and Foreſts, already, ſo deſtroyed thereby, that Fewell, and Tymber, of all ſorts, (of neceſſity) in many places of this Realm, is become, on the ſudden, extremely dere: and therupon, * Pryces of vittayles, ſomwhat the higher rayſed.

* The Prices of Vittayles, enhanced, by indirect means.

Oh, the Lamentable Spoyle of our woods, ſundry wayes: both, contrary to Lawes made, and alſo, for lack of ſufficient Prouiſo, and due execution, as wiſely and iuſtly performed, as either Olde Lawes made, or new, deuiſed, was, and may be, a ſufficient Token of wiſdom Speculatiue, in Lawmakers heds: But the great Recheleſnes, in the Practiſe (which onely, ſhould be the great Profit to the Common-Wealth, expected) doth make vs ſeme great Hypocrites: in good Lawes making: and keping the Bookes, wherein, the Lawes are recorded: but not obſeruing the Lawes, in our Actions Ciuile.

Omnis Laus Virtutis, in Actione Conſiſtit, Ariſt.

Peraduenture, yf (among ſundry other Ordonances, for preſeruation of Wood and Tymber, to be made) ſome Prouiſo were eſtabliſhed, by Act of Parlement, that No man ſhould Buyld, or cauſe to be Buylt, but with theſe Three poynts, concurring: Firſt, according to his Habilitie, and not aboue: Secondly, according to his State, or Vocation, and not aboue: Thirdly, according as his Neceſſary Affaires, and allowable Commodities, ſhall require, and not Superfluouſly: Therupon, fewer Banckrupts, and more Houſe-keepers, would be found: Les Ambition, and more Charitie, wold be vſed: And, Thirdly, better Cheap of more Store and Choyce of Ship-Tymber, and other, wold be reſerued.

A Nedefull Prouiſo, againſt Vnhable, Vndecent, or Superfluous Buylders.

The Commodities, of this Prouiſo.

The Penalties of the former Tranſgreſſors, might be, after this, or, a better manner, Decreed. Of the Firſt, the Houſe and Houſes, ſo built, to be ſold, by Auction: And the Tenth parte of the Whole Value, to be contributed, to the Threaſory of the Pety-Nauy-Royall.
1. And the other Nyne partes, to be payd to the Creditors: to euery Man, proportionally: ſo far, as the ſame Auction-Mony will reach: And, yf there be any Ouerplus remayning, the ſame, to be reſtored to the ſayd
2. Offender. Of the Second, the Houſe and Houſes, to be duely valued:
And the Fifth Parte, of the Whole Value, to be immediatly Payable:
the one half therof, to the Queenes Maieſtie her Exchecquer: and the other half therof, to the Threaſory of the Pety-Nauy-Royall. Of the
3. Third, the valuation of the Superfluous Houſes, or other Buildings, (beeing duly eſtimated and rated:) the Twentith parte therof, to be forfetted to her Highnes Threaſory, onely.

The Penalties of theſe three manner of Diſorderly Buylders.

Out of which Three manner of Forſets, and Amercements, the Fifth parte of the Forfet, is to be awarded due to him, or them, who truly do geue Aduertiſement of the ſayd Diſorder : and ſufficiently doth proue the ſame , ſo to be, as his Aduertiſement ſpecifieth.

Now then, how can it ſtand with the Termes of good Policy ; All theſe great Incommodities Publik , depending vpon our greatly diſordred Iren Mynes : And yet, notwithſtanding, ſuch Warlike prouiſion, as, ſo Dereiy to the Commons, is wrought and made therof : For a fewe Mens priuat commodity (we know not whom) to be caryed away, far and nere : to our great diſſurniſhing : And to the furniture and Strengthning of Moore or Moſchouite : or other Forreyn Prince : French or Fleming : our Secret Mortall Foes, or vnaſſured Freends ? In effect : The Sorrowfull Commons , moſt hartily wiſhing the Pety-Nauy-Royall, to be duly mainteyned : And moſt aſſured , that thereto , will be requiſite, not onely, Stoare of ſuch Iren Caſt Peces , * But alſo, of Tymber, Fewell, and other Iren worke : (The * pryces of all which , being by the foreſayd diſorders, vnreaſonably enhaunſed) do greatly dout , that either the foreſayd things, will, (by farther diſorder,) become deerer , then they now are : Or els, the Extremity of the pryces, being, then , made more ſenſible : the ſimple Multitude, or ſome other wrangling head, will Impute all, to this new deuiſed Policy, of the Pety-Nauy-Royall mainteyning. And therfore, in this place of Conſideration of Pryces and Dearth , they wold haue had ſuch a Petition (as before) moſt humbly moued , to the higher States . But no one man dare, (I know no iuſt cauſe why) vtter, in * Dutifull order , the Tenor of the Premiſſes , to the higher powers. Though, (diſorderly) many Thouſands do murmur at the matter, in maruelous manner : when , dayly , they finde ſo many Camps (as it were) of Iren Peeces , ready layd to the Forreyn Market : and for Forreyn Nauyes, or Forts furniſhing. Deliuering (thereby) a Rod, of our own making, into the hands of them , who could finde in their harts, to ſkourge vs with wyer whips , as God beſt knoweth : And to bring vs , into farder Inconueniences, then, either Dearth of Tymber, Fewell, Iren, or Vittayles, are to be eſteemed. But, vnto God his moſt Mercifull and Mighty hands, we commit our principall Protection, now and euer.

* The Occaſion & due Reaſon; of this Petition;

* The Vnfayned Zeale of the Publik Commoditie; Will Animate the Faythfull Subiect to make humble Petition for Redreſs of great Enormities, as yet.

And Suerly, yf there be any Brytiſh, or Engliſh * Pericles, now lyuing, who conueniently may, and will, both Zealouſly take to hart, and alſo Circumſpectly, and depely looke into theſe, and like Matters : (Nothing fawning vpon Forreyners, Nor to much liſtening or leaning to their Aduiſes, or Deuiſes, beſt for them ſelues, and their Purpoſes : and not for vs, and Ours : Nor fearing Forreyn, or Homiſh hurt, therefore : Meaning none, him ſelf) He wolde not make Strange , though the weaker and Imperfecter ſorte of People (Which are ſo nooſelled and embroyed vp to the elbowes , Yea, to their hart rootes , with the Inſatiable loue, of To to Priuate Lucre , that, therefore, they care, To to little, for the Publik and Common-Weale,) He would not (I ſay) be Agaſt, though ſuch wolde Diuiliſhly Maligne hym , and Subtily ſeke his Diſcredit, and Confuſion : as (in deede) the Athenienſiens, and other, did, to good Pericles, and other, his like. Yet, for all that, ſuch A Pericles, wold goe forward , ſo long , as he might preuayle : obſeruing the wiſe Precepts, of Perfect Politik Gouernment. And to ſuch, as fownd them ſelues greued, by any their Priuate Payne, Hurt, Los, or Chardge, ſuſteyned, by meanes of his Direction or Cownſaill, for Dutifull, and Nedefull Seruice, to be done, to and for the Common-¶ Wealth, either Militando, or, Contribuendo, or otherwiſe, he wold ſay thus: (For, ſo, ſayd the True Pericles:)

Of What Importance it is, To be Lords of the Seas.

In the ATHENIENSIEN STATE, then, yf that were True, Much more, may the BRYTISH IMPIRE Verifie that worde, abſolutely, NOW.

O ALBION, O BRYTAN, O ENGLAND, and (I ſay) O BRYTAN, agayn: What is to be hoped, of the Races of thoſe thy true Noble Courages: fraught with wiſdom and valiantnes: whoſe worthy Fame (moſt certainly) is regiſtred all the world ouer? God forbid, that it ſhould truely be ſayd: that Onely now, in our days, None can, None may, None dare: or None will, Carefully, and Faithfully vndertake to do ſo due ſeruice to God, ſo Beneficiall to this Impire, ſo victorious an exploit for his own Immortall Renown eſtabliſhing, as, to Merite ſome parte of a Præface to the Memoriall of his Triumphant Stile, ſuch, as the Romane Pompeius Magnus, did iuſtly deſerue, in the Romane Impire. Which, with theſe wordes, by * Plinie is diligently recorded: and for euer (thereby) and Gratefully remembred:

Plin. Lib. 7. Cap. 26.

CVM

CVM ORAM MARITIMAM
PRÆDONIBVS LIBERASSET:
ET IMPERIVM MARIS, POPV-
LO ROMANO RESTITVISSET:
Ex Aſia, Ponto, Armenia, Paphlagonia, Cappa-docia, Cilicia, Syria, Scythis, Iudæis, Albanis, Iberia, Inſula Creta, Baſternis: Et ſuper hæc, de Regibus Mithridate Atq́ Tigrane, TRIVMPHAVIT.

Oh, Note. What was the Actuall Præface, and politik preparatiue to all theſe Triumphes? Was it any other, than, IMPERIVM MARIS, POPVLO ROMANO RESTITVTVM?

God graunt vs (therfore) the verity and frute, of this Sea Souerainty, euery way: And that, with all Oportunity.

Wisely vse opportunity.

To Conclude then, (In this poynt Anſwering:) And to end my Conference, with that kinde of People, which either delight in Dearth of Gods ſending: or vſe (nay abuſe) Dearth Fraudulently procured by other: Or, will them ſelues Violently force in, And Counterfet a Dearth: And all, for Priuate Lucre onely: (which is a poyſon to the Body-Politik of this Kingdom) To thoſe, I confidently affirme: And, Euident and ſure it is, that the Mayntenance of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, can cauſe no one Grayn, or any one pound of Beof, Butter, or Cheſe: Or any quantity of any other vittayle, to be wanting in this Kingdom: No more, than yf no ſuch Nauy, were to be vittayled.

Note the Reaſons, wherfore the Vittayling of the Pety-Nauy-Royall can Cauſe no Dearth of Vittailes.

1. And the Reaſon is: No more Men, are now fed at Sea, thereby, than (yf no ſuch Nauy were) ſhould and wold be fedd at Land. And the little diuerſity, and Changing of the place, of the eating of it (As from Land, to Sea) ys not the Cauſe of any great want. And therfore, (by Reaſon, afore declared,) no Iuſt cauſe of any Dearth, thereby growing.

2. Secondly, the Vittayles are ſo Proportionally, and diſcretely from all Quarters and Partes of this Kingdom prouided: and ſo orderly ſerued in, as no one Corner therof, is, thereby moleſted, or left deſtitute of Corn or vittayle: otherwiſe, than by their own Iudgements, may very well, in that place (to ſo good vſe) be forborne.

3. Thirdly, True and ſpeedy Publik Payment alſo, will help to pleaſure many Farmars, and other: and be a means, of better cheape buying, commonly. But, olde Cuſtome, yll vſed, of Debentur Bylls, their ouerlong delayed diſcharge, ſhall (here) vtterly be aboliſhed.

4. Fourthly, the Plenty of former yeres being (by Princely * Priuiledge) duly prouided, and diſcretely ſaued, and ordered, in our Twenty Publik Store-houſes and Garners, of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, may in tyme of True Dearth, not onely be a Marueilous eaſe to this Realm, for the chief Charge of maintayning ſo many Thouſand Engliſh or Brytiſh Subiects, as appertayn to the Pety-Nauy-Royall: But alſo (by very good reaſon) may be deemed, charitably and politikly made ready to be ſeruiſable, for the relief, of many an Hundred of the poore Commons at home: And that, for pryces, tolerable. I mean, the ſayd Store-houſes, to be peculiarly ſeruiſable (euery one of them, to ſuch places,) chiefly, as do lye moſt commodiouſly, or next vnto them, to receiue the ſame. From ſome of which places, before (Ordinarily, and in the tyme of Plenty) parte of the Publik Prouiſion, was gathered into the ſayd Garners, or Store-houſes. Which manner of pleaſuring the Commons, is very Charitable Iuſtice.

* As, by Licence graunted to the Pety-Counſayle, of the Pety-Nauy-Royall.

5. Fifthly, by the Continuall Sea-Circuits, of this Pety-Nauy-Royall (duly vſed) we ſhall, Either, at Sea, be a Terror or Bar, to ſuch, as els (abhominably) wold conuey out of this Kingdom, the Publik Relief of diuers ſortes of Vittayles. So that, they will not (henſforward) lightly attempt that their wicked deſire: And thereby, the Commons may the longer tyme (within the Realm) enioy the frute of Publik Plenty, lately before floriſhing: Or, if any (notwithſtanding the vigilant Garde and Circumſpection of our Pety-Nauy-Royall, in euery Coaſt of this Realm) will be ſo diueliſhly adventurous, as moſt deteſtably to diſfurniſh this Land of the Vittayles: euen then, moſt nedefull (and alwayes by God Nature, and Humayn Induſtry, appropriat, to this Kingdom) Vndoutedly, we ſhall very eaſily intercept, and at Sea, ſeaſon vpon the conueyed Corn, Butter, Cheſe, Bacon, Barells or Hogſheds of Beof in Powlder, &c. of ſuch wilfull Offenders: being, (by Mans Law, and all good Conſcience,) forfetted and loſt, from the late lewd Owners thereof. And then, the ſayd Prouiſion, ſo forfayted, may at the pleaſure and order of the Queene her moſt excellent Maieſty, and her honorable Priuy Counſaill, be diſtributed by reaſonable ſale, into that parte, or partes of this Realm, which is known (at that inſtant) to be moſt deſtitute. And where, alſo, the Publik Garners, and appropriated Store-houſes of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, can not conueniently (or, of all the Twenty, the leaſt conueniently) any longer, ſupply the want, of their peculyarly aſſigned Territories.

Moreouer, this forfetted Prouiſion, by ſome of the ſmaller Barkes, of the Pety-Nauy, may very ſpeedily, and with ſmall extraordinary Charges, be carryed, & landed, either in the very place, where (then) the Dearth pincheth the Commons, moſt: or, in any other place: from whence, very commodiouſly, by farder Landiſh or Inlandiſh Carriage of it, (from the Sea ſide, Or, from any Hauen or Creke,) it may be brought: (yea, if nede be), into the very Hart, and Myddle of this Albion.

And here, it is to be Conſidered, alſo: that the Mony, ariſing of the foreſayd Charitable Sale, of the forfet, will, the one half thereof, become due to the Threaſory of our Soueraign: And the other half, to the * Coſers of the Pety-Nauy-Royall: which is (in effect) the Threaſory of the Commons, and Common-wealth. And thus, the Priuate diſorder of ſome one, or a few naughty perſons, is ſo prudently corrected, that, (beſides the deſerued Penalty, layd vpon the Offenders Backs: and the Publik Terror, thereby procured to the like mynded Miſers,) both the Vittailes them ſelues, do relieue and pleaſure many Hundreds of honeſt and faithfull Subiects: And the Mony therof, alſo, is no leſ profitable to the encreaſing of the Threaſories, aſwell of our moſt Gracious Queene, as alſo, of the Pety-Nauy-Royall.

The Threaſory of the Common-Wealth.

And, Seeing that the accuſtomed Goodnes, (yea the moſt mercifull and Bountifull æternall prouidence) of our heauenly Father, is ſuch, appropriated vnto this Ile of Albion, that, by the * Fertility of the Soyle, and due Induſtry of Man, employed thereto, it is very plentifully and holeſomly hable (one yere, with an other, and moſt commonly) to Vittayle * Two tymes ſo many more, as the Naturall Subiects of this Land are, in multitude, of Men, Women and Children, (So that, the ſame, might, by very good Order, be reſerued within this Kingdom.) Who is there then, of any ſound reaſon, or experience, that can dout, that the * Neceſſary Vittayling of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, (The Men therof, being but a little Parcell, of the whole Body-Politik, of this Kingdom,) can cauſe any vndue Want, or Dearth of vittayles?

* The Fertility of this ALBION.

* Note this Hypotheſis.

* An Argument Inſoluble.

Seeing, alſo, by this Hypotheſis, it followeth, that within euery Three yeres, ſpace (Ordinarily,) Stoare may be Layd vp, for Six yeres: or, at the leaſt, for Fowr: to maintayn the whole Realm: yea, though, for two yeres together, neither Wheat, nor Barly did grow at all, in the ſame: or, at the moſt, did yeld (clere) but fower graynes, for one, ſowed.

Note.

And, where I ſpeake, of Corn and Grayn reſeruing: I mean, no longer, Store to be made thereof, then (holeſomly) the ſame may * ſerue. Wherein, alſo, is many a ſoule fault committed, in this Kingdom: either by the diueliſh Greedy guts, ouer long keping back their Corn from the Common Market: or by other, to negligently vſing it, (in ſhorter tyme) reſerued.

* The Norimberg Secret, (or other) of Corne Reſeruing well, many yeres, is to be made a great account of. Vide Theop. Banoſium. in Epiſt. præfixa Libello P. Rami de Religione Chriſtiana.

But, when, Extraordinary plentifull yeres do come, then, may the Publik Threaſory, ſele the great Extraordinary* Benefit therof: (as, before is told, how:) And, alſo, the Ordinary Store, yerely be layd vp, Notwithſtanding.

* by transporting vpon their priviledg or lycense.

And, here, you may Note: that, very ſeldom, any Dearth, onely of God his ſending, doth continue aboue two, or * three yeres, togither, continually.

Note.

* Except that Vniuerſall Dearth, in Ioſeph his tyme, moſt Extraordinarily, continuing Seuen Yeres together: as God had foreſhewed, that it ſhould: Ge. 41.

Therefore, I Conclude, that we of this Kingdom, might (vpon wiſe Order taken, and inuiolably obſerued,) ſo enioy continuall Plenty: Or (at the leaſt,) Sufficiency of all manner of moſt nedefull Vittayles: (And of Corn and grayn chiefly,) that, the price of Wheat, ſhould not, in any Common Market, ariſe * aboue a Mark the Quarter: Rye, x.s. and Barly, viij.s. the Quarter. And, So, Proportionally, of Peaſon, and Beans.

* Note this phrase, not aboue.

And Butter, *Not aboue ij.d. the pound: and Cheſe, not aboue a peny the pound, &c. And here, I vſe this phraſe, Not aboue: For, rather, the Prices will be les. And thereupon, you may eaſily Conclude, that all Laboring Men, Handicraft Men, and other, may affoord their Labors, yea, and wares, better cheape. And ſo, a marueilous number of other Commodities, will therof enſue: wherof, any man of experience, or good iudgement, will ſone perceiue the Dependency, or Conſequency.

* Note this, I pray you. For, it is One of the Chief and beſt means, to bring the Pryces of all things (eyther Naturall, or, Artificiall,) to that Temperament, which is moſt Commodious, both, for the Buyer, and Seller: And For the Landlord, and Farmer, all the Realm ouer.

Vnto which peculiar great Bleſsing of God, our enioying, No certayner, readyer, and eaſier means, can be deuiſed, Than, by the Continuall Circuits of our PETY-NAVY-ROYALL: Thereby, (beſides many other Commodities, enſuing) either keping in, and terrifying the wretched harts of them, who, vnduly wold, (els,) proloyn Corn, and Vittailes, out of this Realm: Or catching them by the back, aſſone as they begin to Cros the Seas, to any forreyn Nation. Of which point, this may ſuffice to aduertiſe them, that are faithfully willing, to follow conſtantly the Redres, and Reformation of the manifolde diſorders, herein, continually committed, againſt the Weale-Publik of this Brytiſh Monarchy.

An Anſwer to them who think that, by the Prouiſion of Vittails, for the Pety-Nauy-Royall, Waſt, or Spoyle of Vittayles, is made.

And, where the Quantity of Vittayles, before hand, together, at once prouided, Maketh a Shew, of great Waſte, either made, or in Danger to be made: (yf Diligent Regarde therof, be not had:) Weake Brayn hath that Man, that wold think Waſte to be made, for Laying vp together, in a Fortnights ſpace, ſo much, as ſhall not be ſpent, in Fowrtene Wekes. But, yf there ſhould ſo much be ſpent in a Fortnight, as wold duly ſerue the Nauy Fowrtene Wekes: Then were there Waſte, indede: And ſo, ſome Want, fondly procured, more, than els is nedefull. Or, yf, vnder Pretence of Beof Powldring, for the Pety-Nauy-Royall, ſome Fals Iudas wold ſteale or proloyn A Hogſhed, Two, or Six, to ſend ouer Seas, to Forreyner: And that, for Priuate Lucre: or for a Farder, and Worſer Intent, &c. But, that, and ſuch like fowle Diſorders, will be left now, (We Hope:) or, moſt Narrowly be ſene to: As well in Beof, as Butter, Cheſe, and Bacon, &c.

And, as for Seeing to, or Sauing of the Vittayles, that they be not loſt: Ye nede not Dowt. For, yt ſtandeth them more vpon, than ſo. And, As for Exceſſiue Feeding at Sea: Who knoweth not, their Dyet to be but Reaſonable, and Sufficient? With Hunger rather finiſhing their Meales, than with Vnweldy Carcaſſes: Ouercharged with Meat and Drink, As among vs, at home, many a Thowſand is?

I Omyt alſo, to ſpeak of the great Ayde of Freſh Vittayles, which the Nauy may haue, ſundry Wayes, at Seas: by Diuers kynde of good Fiſh, (our Men being ſufficiently ſkilfull, now, at length, to preuent or Cure the Skyrby.) As Pylchard, Whyting, Haddock, Playce, Sole, Cunger, Herring, Burt, Thornback, Salmon, Bream, Gurnard, Mullet, Mackerell, &c. All, being (moſt commonly,) Better, then we haue them at Land, brought to vs. Which * good Fiſh, will alſo, be a Means, of their ſpending les Fleſh, at Sea: And therefore, to Nede the les, from Land.

So that, Yf all things be Duly, and Deeply Wayed: beſydes a great number of other the Principall Benefits, Redownding to this Kingdom (by the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall:) it is rather thought, that the ſtreict Dyet, (in dede, a moderat, preſcribed, and vniform Dyet) of our Publik freends at Sea, in the foreſayd Nauy employed, will be a means, of very much Vittayles, and Fleſh ſauing: and to help toward plenty finding, on Land. For (As Engliſh-mens noted Vice, or Diſorder is:) Of the ſelf ſame Men, ſome, wold at their Landiſh home, or in Alehouſes, and Tauernes, eat and drink, more, then Mans nature, behoofully needeth: Or els, ſome wold be more fine, delicate, and coſtly in their Dyet, then wiſdom and diſcretion wold Preſcribe them &c. So that, No dout, can here remayn, that Dearth can haue Roote, or iuſt occaſion, to riſe, or grow in this Kingdom, of this Temperate Dyet, allowed to them at Sea: who, els, ought to haue aſmuch, or wold haue coſtlyer, and more, yf they had continued on Land.

A little Digreſſion, againſt ſome Mis-Vſe of the Fiſhings of the Noble Riuers of Thames, and other, within this Realm.

And, while the Conſideration of one great Ayd, and Means, for Fleſh to become better Cheap, is in our hands: I think it very needfull, to geue you to vnderſtand, that by the wicked Wilfulnes ~~only~~, and euident fraude, of diuers Subiects of this Realm, There is, yerely, deſtroyed, more than Fiue Hundred Cart-loads of good freſh Fiſh, within this our Ile of ALBION. And though, then, not Meat-able, for Man, when they are ſo deſtroyed: yet, within ſhort tyme after, they wold be. And likewiſe, though, not then, likely to amount, in the whole Quantity, yerely, to ſo many loads: Yet, at the tyme of their being Market-able (of the Myddle * ſort) they wold euidently appere, ſo, to be rated: or rather, far aboue. And neither, any more Charges, nor yet any greater trauaile of Man, is to be employed, for the ſame ſorts of Fiſh hauing and enioying: both, when they wold be (as is ſayd) Markat-able: And alſo, when the foreſayd great haboundance of Vittayles, by them, might be enioyed: Than is, when, ſo abhominably, they are deſtroyed, and vtterly ſpoyled.

* This Phraſe, of Myddle-Sort Markat-able, is to be vnderſtood, neither of them which hard and ſcant are to be iudged Markat-able: Nor of the ouergrowen Fiſh, and in the Superlatiue Growth (as a Man might term them,) But only of them, which, moſt commodiouſly are Seruiſable: in reſpect of Profit Publik.

And, that this brief, and very needfull Aduertiſement, may be found the more manifeſtly true, and duly geuen: You may vnderſtand, That, in the Riuer of Thames only (as my Inſtructor, by Worſhipfull Ientlemen, and other Men of experience, heretofore hath tryed out) moſt commonly, euery yere, by the Fiſhermen belonging to ſome one ſmall Town (or within a little Circuit about it,) there is deſtroyed, aboue a Thouſand Buſſhels, of the yong Fry, of diuers kindes of good Fiſh: which, in due tyme of their growth, and by lawfull order, being taken, wold haue byn hable, to ſatiſfie Two Hundred Thouſand Men, one day: Or, Twenty Thouſand Men, ten dayes: or, Two Thouſand Men, an Hundred dayes, or, Fowr Thouſand Men Fifty, dayes. &c.

Which Account, dependeth vpon the Rating of euery kynde of Myddle Markat-able Fiſh, to be (one with an other) of Ten tymes ſo much meat, as, when, they are deſtroyed in ſuch Small Fry, as we mean of: And alſo, that a Buſhell of ſuch Markat-able Fiſh, is hable to ſatiſfie 20 Engliſh-men, One day, for their ſufficient Repaſte and Suſtenance: (the Bread and drinke, requiſite thereto, being excepted.) What is, then, (I pray you) to be rekened, of the Publik Dammage, of 500. Cart loads, of Fiſh, (yerely) thus deſtroyed? How may it (reaſonably) any longer, remayn vnreformed? Which 500, Cartload, (according to the former Rate of Myddle Markat-able Fiſh,) do amount and ryſe, of only 2400 Buſhels of Fry, yerely deſtroyed.

But, yf you ſuppoſe to be only 30 Trink-Boats: and that euery one of the ſayd 30 Trink-Boat Nets, euery day, only for 300, dayes, in euery whole yere, deſtroy, but one Buſhell of very ſmall Fry: The Somme therof, doth amount to Nyne Thouſand Buſhels of Fry, ſo deſtroyed, yerely. Which Fry, when it ſhould be Myddle Markat-able, wold be, (one with an other) of Ten tymes more Meat and Fiſh, than, when, it is ſo deſtroyed. Therefore, the Crafts-men of the Trink-Boats, on the Thames, may, very probably, be accuſed, conuicted, iudged, and condemned, as the moſt abhominable yerely Deſtructioners of Nynety Thouſand Buſhels of Markat-able Fiſh.

And, if you abridge me, in the number of the dayes of their Labor, yerely: I will, then, charge eche of their Nets, with deſtroying dayly, more, than a Buſhell of Fry: one day, with an other, euery day of their Labor. And I know (notwithſtanding,) how much, I kepe me, within my Bounds, yet: How Horrible and Intollerable, ſo euer, this Fact, doth ſound in your eares: who haue not liſtened to this matter, before now: nor know the Verity therof, yet.

Of this Nynety Thouſand Buſhels of Fiſh, if you will account but euery 48 Buſhels, (which make ſix Quarters,) to be a Cart loade: the Somme will be 1875 Cart loads, of freſh Fiſh: which is deſtroyed, yerely, by the Trink-Nets, only: And that, in the Noble Riuer of Thames, only. Whereby, it is moſt euident, that my firſt Aſſertion, of 500 Cart Loads of freſh Fiſh, deſtroyed, in the whole Realm of England, is moſt vndoutedly true.

So is it, now, alſo, Probable: that, in all England, by the manifold diſorder, vſed about Fry and Spawn, deſtroying, there is yerely Spoyled, ☞ or Hyndred, the Broode of Two Thouſand Cart Loads, of freſh Fiſh, of myddle Markat-able ſkantlyn.

The Publik Los yerely cauſed by the Trink-Boats, Kiddels, &c. is vncredible to them that know not the Truthe: Or, will not Search, and Examine to the quick, what Violent, or, rather Fraudulent Diſorder, is therin Practiſed.

The Value, of the foreſayd Nynety Thouſand Buſhels, of freſh Fiſh, (one with an other, being rated at fiue Shillings a Buſhell) is Two and Twenty Thouſand, and Fiue Hundred Pounds, of Current Mony of England.

Which quantity of Fiſh, alſo, (according to our former Hypotheſes) wold mainteyn, for one day, a Thouſand Thouſand, and Eight Hundred Thouſand Men. Or, Nyne Hundred Thouſand Men, two dayes: Or, Three Hundred Thouſand ſand Men, ſix dayes: Or, a Hundred Thouſand Men, 18 dayes: Or, Fifty Thouſand Men, 36 dayes: Or, 25 Thouſand Men, 72 dayes. &c.

And, yf, in the Riuer of Thames, Trinker-men only, do not (in your Opinion, or, in the eſtimation and knowlege of them, who are ſomwhat expert in theſe Caſes,) ſeme duly charged, with this Incredible Spoyle, and Dammage Publik: I will allow, vnto you and them, into this Reckening (to make vp, the full and heaped vp meaſure, of this abhominable Iniquity) all the Deſtruction of Fry, and yong Fiſh, which the 18, or, 19 Tymber-Nets, do yerely make: who are fayn, euery two howrs of the Flud or Tyde, to diſcharge their Nets, for feare of breaking. I will geue you in, alſo, the Spoyle, which is yerely made with the Engynes, called Kyddels. And they, are in the Thames, aboue an Hundred and Forty. And now, you can not dout, but I haue good reaſon, to warrant you, that the Deſtruction and Spoyle of Fry and yong Fiſh, made yerely, and that * only, by the Three former vnlawfull Engynes, (occupyed in the Thames) doth amount, yerely, to the foreſayd Publik los, of 90000 Buſhels of Myddle Markat-able good Fiſh: in the Totall Somme: I mean, when, the ſame ſhould come to be, of Myddle Markat-able growth. Though, at the tyme of their Spoyling them, they are, in Meaſure, but Nyne Thouſand Buſhels.

* For, by many other meanes, the Fry and Spawne of Fiſh is deſtroyed: as Partely by the Statute made Anno 4 Henrici Septi. Cap. 15, may appere: and Partly, by our dayly Experience, may be perceyued.

And, bycauſe, the 30, or 31 Trinker-Men, not [1] only, are the chiefeſt Cauſe, of the foreſayd exceeding great Deſtruction of FRY, and yong Fiſh, (to the Intollerable Dammage Publik,) but [2] alſo, lye in the Riuer of Thames, to the great Annoyance, and Cumber (many tymes) of the Ships, and Boats, paſſing betwene London, and Grauesend (and farder:) And otherwhile, to the loſſe, both of Goods and Liues, of many of her Maieſties Louing, and Faythfull Subiects: What diſcrete Subiect, or true Member of the Brytiſh, or Engliſh Monarchie, is there, who, in his hart, Doth not abhorre this Haynous Enormity? and will not, with his Voyce, Hartily, Cry owt, and Say: Fy on them, Fy on them: Away with them, Away with them: Who, ſo abhominably, conuert Mans Meat, to the Feeding of *[1] Swyne: And Otherwhile, *[2] Bury ſome of their vnlawfull Spoyle of Fry, and young Fiſh, in the Shores of the Thames, and Otherwhere.

* Much lyke Diſorders, haue heretofore byn vſed, about Orford Hauen, in the County of Suffolk. Read the Statute made Anno 4 Henrici 7. Cap. 21.

God, of his infinite Goodnes, ſendeth vs (Yerely) Euident Tokens, of the great Habundance, of this kynde of good Vittailes, prepared purpoſely for this parte, of this Brytiſh Albion: But, theſe Trynker-Men, Caſt Incredible Much of ſuch a Threaſor, before their Swyne, to Battle them withall: And are, (by that meanes,) great Hynderers, both to the Wealth, and Reliefe Publik: and alſo, to the Glory of God: Who, wold be Duly Glorifyed, and Prayſed of many a Thowſand of the Rich, and Poore, who, ſhould be Serued, Pleaſured, and Relieued, with the great Habundance, of the Dyuers ſorts of good and wholeſome Fiſh, Swarming in this Incomparable Riuer of Thames (from the one end therof, to the other,) in very mayn Skulls: Yf theſe Publik Enemies of God and Man, did not (more than Barbarouſly , and les than Chriſtianlike ,) vtterly ſpoyle, and wickedly tred vnder their feet , ſuch a Bleſſing and liberall Gift of our GOD , and moſt louing heauenly father, profered vnto vs , and in manner, put into our hands.

Very much , more abhominable , and more vnreaſonable, is the wickednes of theſe Trinker-men, than was the Diſorder , heretofore (and till of late) committed in Ireland : where , the Inhabitants of diuers Cities and Towns , adioyning nere to Riuers , that do Eb and Flow (in which Riuers , the Fry of Salmon , Ele , and other Commodious Fiſh are bred and nouriſhed) did kepe great heards and numbers of Swyne : which , at low water , they do , or (till of late) did lead , or ſuffer, to fede vpon the Strands , of the ſayd Riuers : where they do , or did , deſtroy great Quantity of Salmon , and Ele Fry : and of diuers other good Fiſhes : to the great hurt , and hindrance of Fiſhing : and the exceeding great dammage , of the Common-Wealth . As, by the Act , made againſt the ſame , at Dublyn , Anno vndecimo , of our moſt Gracious Souerayn Lady , Queene Elizabeth , more at large , may appere.

And , at this preſent, I am the bolder , to expres my Inſtructor his feruency, againſt the Trinker-Men , their haynous endammaging of the Publik-wealth of this Kingdom : Seeing , for (abowt) an Hundred and Fifty yeres ago , the whole Body of this Realm, by their Parlement Senators , left vnto vs , worthy Record of their vigilant Eye (to finde out ſuch Offences) and their Politik Prouiſo : by very good Iuſtice , either to Cut of , the Cauſe, of ſo greuous hindrance to the Common-wealth : or, diſcreetly to puniſh the fact (ſo often , as it ſhould be Committed) with a Hundred Shillings , to be Forfetted, to the King.

In the Second yere , of King Henry the Sixth , theſe are the wordes of the Statute , to our purpoſe , prudently eſtabliſhed : CAP. XV.

The Statute, againſt Trinker-Men: for Euer enduring.

> Item , it is Ordeined , that the Standing of Nets , and Engins , called Trinks , and all other manner of Nets , which be , and were wont to be faſtened , and hanged continually , day and night , by a certayn tyme , in the yere , to great Poſts , Boats , and Anchors , ouerthwart the Riuer of Thames, and other Riuers of the Realm , (which Standing , is a Cauſe and an Occaſion of as great , [and more] deſtruction of the Broode , and Fry of Fiſh , and Diſturbance of the Common Paſſage of veſſels , as be the Weares , Kyddels , or any other Engins ,) be wholy defended , for EVER. And that , euery Perſon , that ſo ſetteth , or faſtneth them , from henceforth , to ſuch Poſts , Boats, and Anchors , or like thing , continually to Stand , (as afore is ſayd ,) and be duly therof , by the Cours of the Law , conuict : he ſhall forfait to the King. C.S. at euery tyme , that he is ſo proued , in Default . Prouided alwayes , that it ſhall be lawfull to the Poſſeſſors of the ſayd Trinks , (if they be of Aſiſe ,) to Fiſh with them , in all ſeaſonable tymes : Drawing and conueying them , by Hand : as , other Fiſhers , do other Netts : and not faſtning , or tacking the ſayd Netts , to the Poſts , Boats , and Anchors : continually to Stand , as afore is ſayd . Sauing alwayes , to euery of the Kings liege People , their Right , Title , and Enheritance , in their Fiſhings , in the ſayd Water.*

* Which (cõmonly) are ſo vnlawfull, that of a Buſhell of Wheat, thrown into the Stream nere before the Net : Three Pecks of the ſame (or, the half) may be ſtayed in the Hoſe, or Cod therof : as Honeſt Men , full many, will Auouche.

But,

But, what ſhall any Zealous Louer of Iuſtice, and good Publik Policy, ſay, or think, herein? Seeing, ſo long ago, ſo Iuſt, ſufficient, and eaſy a Remedy, was prouided, againſt theſe Trink-Boats: 1· aswell, for the manifold Cumber, Danger, and Dammage, happening by them, to ſuch, as ſhould, and did pas (Vp or Down,) vpon the Thames, by Day: and chiefly in the Dark Nights, and Foggy Weather: As alſo, againſt the exceeding great Publik-Dammage, to the Naturall and Ordinary Encreaſe, of very good Fiſh, (of diuers ſorts) wilfully, and very vngodly, procured by the ſayd Trinker-men, hath byn, no better regarded?

And, ſeeing, 1· Sutes in the Law, haue byn, in our dayes, commenced, and followed (by vertue of the ſayd Act) againſt the ſayd Trinker-men: And they, therupon Condemned: And yet (that notwithſtanding,) their vnlawfull Practiſes, ſtill are continued?

And Thirdly, Seeing, (before our Eyes,) the Dammage to the Common-wealth, and the incredible hinderance to that plenty of Vittailes finding and enioying, which God hath prepared for vs, is, by theſe Trinker-men procured, more now, than euer before, moſt vnlawfully, and fraudulently: etiam, cum Calumnia quadam, to the Pitifull Clemency, and the very great Lenity, vſed toward them?

Therfore, Seeing, (I ſaye,) that Neither the foreſayd very good Law, can feare them: Nor, the Amercements, (as they are vſed,) do ſufficiently pinch them: Nor, the manifold iuſt Complaynts (beſides Coſtly Sutes, made and had) againſt theſe Trinker-Men, are (yet,) of ſufficient effect, to the poore Commons, to be vſed herein, according to the Lawes of this Realm: But that, they remayn remedyles, (yet,) and are euidently Spoyled (yerely) of an incredible great Publik Benefit, by theſe Trinkerly diſordred, and vnlawfull Fiſhings (as before is declared:) How can I, hope, that, vpon this very brief, and ſimple Aduertiſement, of my Inſtructor, Theſe Trink-Nets ſhall vtterly, and ſpeedily, be cut of, without any longer ſiniſter means to be vſed, by any Subiects, to beard, check-mate, or, to deface ſo commendable and needfull a Statute, as that is, which before is expreſſed, againſt the Standing of any Trink-Nets? ☜ But, yet, for all that, ſuch is my Confidence in the goodnes of her moſt excellent Maieſty: and ſo, aſſured I am, her Maieſties hart, to be fraught with pitifull Compaſſion, on the Lamentable, and due Complaynts, made, of the great and exceſſiue hynderance, and dammage to her Commons and Subiects wealth and relief: And, likewiſe, ſo well, are we acquainted with the moſt commendable Iuſtice, executed by her Maieſties moſt Honorable Priuy Counſaile, when duly and throughly they vnderſtand the Cauſes: That, (with calling theſe things, to my Remembrance) not only, now, my Hope is reuiued: but, alſo, I dare half warrant the Commons, That Trink-Net-Men, henceforward, ſhall be vnpartially conſtrayned, to vſe their Trade of Fiſhing only, according to the Law: and, Not, as they (moſt vnlawfully and very vngodly,) to long a tyme haue done, and very abhominably at this preſent, they do: Yerely deſtroying far more Fiſh, than they ſend, good, ſeaſonable, lawfull, and allowable, to the Markets. For, the more parte of thoſe, which they ſend, are Vnſeaſonable or Vnlawfull Smelts, or Whiting-Mops: Wherin, the Hebber-Boats, only, might ſufficiently well, (or, with much les Publik-dammage) ſerue: as the wiſe and expert, are well aſſured of it.

Though all other Abuſes be here Vntouched, yet, that vnlawfull Engyn, at Myll Tayles, From Stanes Weſtward, (called a BVCK, Wherewith, in ſome one Night a Buſhell of Salmon Fry, is deſtroyed:) wold Spedely, and Seuerely, be Aboliſhed.

Of the diuers, yea the manifold * other abuſes, of Fiſhing: or hyndrances to the ſame, in this noble Riuer of Thames, only: to diſcloſe, rehears, and expres the matter, and manner, particularly, fully, and vnpartially, it doth require a peculiar, and great Treatiſe.

But, to Conclude this neceſſary Digreſſion, withall: I may, aptly enough (and omitting many other,) Note only two manners of Hyndrances: Which, (eaſily, and moſt quickly) may be redreſſed: The one, is, of long tyme vſed, and (I know not, why,) permitted: and yet (notwithſtanding) is a great Hindrance and cauſe of Deſtruction, to the Weſtern ſtore of diuers kyndes of good Fiſhes. I mean, aboue London Bridge', vpward (which is Weſtward.) And that is, the Fiſhing with any manner of Net, in the places, which either for a Seaſon, or in the other, which are continually exempted from being Fiſhed in, (commonly called Seueralls, and Rough places.) In which places, what vnlawfull, or vndue Subtlety is vſed, to auoyd the Roughs, and Stakes, for feare of hurting, or renting of their Nets, (and yet, to beat, and punch the Beds, or Skulls of Fiſh: and by [in manner] thundring flowncing, thumping, and paſhing, or, with Chayn drawing vnder the water, &c: to driue the Fiſh, to their Nets) may eaſily be vnderſtood, and dayly ſene, or nightly hard, and perceiued. But, with all men, of ſufficient Iudgement (in many Reſpects,) it may be condemned, as a great hyndrance to the Broode and Store preſeruing: and a violent breaking, of the firſt Intent of the Politik Ciuill Senators: who, made the Ordonances, for ſuch Places Seueralling, or vtterly Exempting, and reſeruing vnranſakt, and vndiſturbed. And though Peter-Men, will make great ſhew of good Argument, to the Contrary: yet, it is beſt, to make ſure woork: in Circumſpectly eſtabliſhing the Priuilege, and exemption of thoſe peculiarly aſſigned, and well known places, of Store and Broode: from any manner of Net caſting in the ſame, or any artificiall diſturbance, purpoſely, therin to be vſed, for any Fiſh taking.

* The Seaſonable Repayr, of the Weſtern Smelt, is a matter of great Importance: Both, for the very wholeſome, and Plentifull Vittayling of Multitudes of all States: And alſo, for the good help, of many a poore Fiſherman, toward his Maintenance, (for that Seaſon:) Both for Meat, and Mony, for him, and his Family.

The Second Hyndrance, is the Stinching, Soyling, (or, rather Beſlouening,) of the Thames: Both Shores, and Channels: Where, the yerely Recours, and far more Plentifull Haunt, than now is, of the Weſtern * Smelt, (which is the Seaſonable, and beſt Smelt) was wont to be. Which kynde of Fiſh, greatly abhorreth ſuch Fylthy grownd. And this new, and to bold Attempt, hath, but of very late yeres, exceſſiuely, bin enterpriſed: Not only, (as I ſayd,) to the great Hyndrance of the beſt, and moſt Seaſonable Smelt, his annuall Delight, as in times paſt (and till, of very late) to Return, and abyde in great Plenty, for the ſpace of the whole Seaſon, in the Ancient Place of the chief Weſtern Smelt Fiſhing: But, alſo, to the cauſing of many lothſome Sights, horrible Sauours, and infectuous euaporations, of ſuch Dunghill ſtuf: to no little grief of Sent, and no les danger to the health of very many, of Court, Cuntry, and City: which, either do frequent, or (now and then) pas vpon the ſame Riuer of Thames, betwene the City of London, and Richemond: where (moſt vſually) our Soueraygn, euery yere, doth make ſome abode.

Betwene which two places, as our Soueraigns, (Kings and Queenes) haue very often, and (almoſt) yerely, heretofore, paſſed by water: So, durſt no man, in thoſe dayes, ſo careleſly, and vnlawfully annoy, and beſtinche the Thames: either, Banks or Shores, (in that Tract of the Riuer, chiefly: being, alſo, the fayreſt and pleaſanteſt paſſage, of the whole Riuer:) both, in reſpect of not offending, either the Eye, or Smell, of the Maieſty Royall: and alſo, for feare of breaking * Ordonances, generally prouided, and very duly appliable to the ſame Caſe.

 The Statute.*

*THat No Perſon, or Perſons, after the firſt day of Auguſt, next comming, do caſt, or vnlade, out of any manner of Ship, Crayer, or any other veſsell, (being within any Hauen, Rode, Channell or Riuer, flowing or running to any Port-Town, or to any Citie, Borough, or Town, within this Realm, or any other the Kings Dominions, any manner of Balaſt, Rubbiſh, Grauell, or any other wrack, or Filth, but only vpon the Land, aboue the Full Sea Mark: Vpon Payn, that euery Perſon and Perſons, offending this Act, to loſe and forfait, for euery tyme ſo offending, Fiue Pounds: the one half to the King our Soueraign Lord, and the other half therof, to ſuch Perſon and Perſons, as will ſue for the ſame, by Byll, Playnt, Originall writ or Information, in any the Kings Courts of Record, in which Action, or Sute, no wager of Law ſhalbe admitted, nor any Eſſoyne or Protection allowed. Anno 34. Henrici. 8. Cap. 9.

ITem for that ſo much Dung and Filth of the yſſues and Intralls aſwell of Beaſts killed as of other Corruptions, be caſt and put in Dyches, Riuers, and other waters, and alſo within many other places, within, about, and nigh vnto diuers Cities, Boroughs and Towns of the Realm, and the Suburbs of them, that the Ayre, there, is greatly corrupt and infect: and many Maladies & other intolerable Diſeaſes do dayly happen, as well to the Inhabitants, and alſo Dwellers in the ſayd Cities, Boroughs, Towns, and Suburbs, as to other, thither repayring, and paſsing, to the great Annoyance, Domage and Perill of the Inhabitants, Dwellers, Repayrers and Paſſers aforeſayd. It is accorded and aſſented, &c. Anno. xij. Richardi Secundi. Cap. xiij.

rance, that, both it is Vnlawfull, and alſo Needles, in Such Maner to be done, as it is.

And ſome, haue of late, ſo much encroached vpon the Patience of the Commons (in this vndecent and vnlawfull filthy Attempt:) yea, ſo far, as, not only, by Scattrings, they haue annoyed the Channels, nels, and Publik Shoares, with the ſayd Dung: and (in ſome places, nere the vſuall Landing of the right honorable Priuy Counſaile, and Embaſſadors: and of other her Maieſties Subiects, of all ſorts) with the often Recours of the Carts to the Dung-boats ſides, haue made ſuch Publik Shores, and Stronds, as before, were very clean, hard, and grauelly, to become (thereby) very myry, and depe to the knees: and vyly ſtinking, at the Eb, when the Sunne hath had any power thereon: And chiefly, if the wynde do cary the Noyſome Sauour therof, toward any man: But 2. alſo haue made two kynde of Standing-Leyſtoofs or Dung-hils: the one immediatly to receiue from Boat the foreſayd Filth: And the other, not far of: and nere, or in the High and Publik wayes: or in the Lords waſte adioyning. Both which kyndes of new deuiſed Dung hills, if heretofore, any Law or Policy did permit, or rather, not ſufficiently preuent: yet (notwithſtanding that ſlight permiſſion, or want of Prouiſo: better Conſideration, aduiſe, and examining of the matter, will or may finde good Remedy for the noyſome Diſorder: and eſtabliſh ſome ſufficient * Order: aſwell, for apt places aſſigning, or admitting, for certayn Leyſtoofs making: as alſo, for a very ſhort tyme limiting for ſuch ſtuf, lying or continuing there, to the great Annoyance, and poſſible Infection, not onely and chiefly of the nere Inhabitants, but of them alſo, which do and ſhall pas thereby: of what Dignity, Degree, or State ſo euer, they (he or ſhe) are: Engliſh, or Forreiner.

Though the London Fylth, may do good to the Weſtern Corn-Fields: Yet THE VSED MANNER of Publik Annoyance there-with, to Man, and Fiſh, is neither Lawfull, or Nedefull: And is but a Late Ruſticall Attempt, and Eaſily, may otherwiſe be ordered: And thoſe Huſbandmen their Land, nothing the Les holpen, to become Battle, and Fat, Sufficiently.

* As, None of the Foreſayd London Stuff, to be layd within 400 Foote of any high way: nor any to Remayn, or be aboue 48 Howres together on any Allowable Wharf, or Leyſtoof: Made, or Vſed, on, or nere the Thames Banks: And that not aboue the quantity of 4 Cart-Lodes, So to be left Lying at once. By this, or ſome better and more ſtreict Order, the great Multitude of People which pas on, or by, the Thames Sydes, wold wiſh ſome Reaſonable Redres, for their more Commodious, and Healthfull Paſſage, in their Affayres Priuate, or Seruice Publik.

And, though the Huſband-Men, therabout, do greatly allow ſuch kynde of helping their poore and hungry erable groundes: more, now, than in tymes paſt: yet, this Notable dangerous, and needles annoying of ſo many Thouſands, of the Queenes Maieſties louing Subiects: (and that for a very few Huſband-mens fanſies) hath not holpen them, to be hable, or (at the leaſt) admoniſhed them, to be the more willing, to ſell their Corn any better cheap, either at Market, or at Home, to their poore Neighbours, or, to other. And yet (forſothe) for their onely Priuate wealth amending, they dare be ſo bold, or are become ſo careles, to annoy, and vnlawfully to vex, with lotheſome Sights, and vnwholſome Sauours, ſo many, and ſo much, as they do. Yea, and that, dayly: and more and more. Farder I will not (as now) ſay, in this vnpleaſant matter: though I could.

But, in this point, (as in many other,) the poore Commons, and quiet Subiects of her Maieſtie, do Hope, that ſome Redres, will ſpeedily enſue. So, that Priuate Gayn, Delight, or wilfulnes, ſhall not ſo much either rechleſly, craftily, or violently, deuoure, or bar the PROFIT-PVBLIK: or, be ſo Noyſom, and greeuous, to the poore Commons: Whoſe Health and welfare, ought, in all good Common-Wealths, to be carefully procured, and conſtantly maynteined: as much, as any Humayn, or their beſt Policy, can aduaunce, and preſerue the ſame.

Hope of Amends, and Redres, is very Comfortable to the Queenes Maieſties very Faythfull, obedient, and Quiet Subiects.

The Third and laſt Dowt, is of the Due, True, and Iuſt, Beſtowing, of ſuch a Maſſe of Threaſor, which yerely will be, Ordinarily, Contributed: and odly, otherwiſe, now and then: as by Gift while men are lyuing: Or, by Legacy, after their Deceaſe: and ſundry otherotherwayes. The meaning hereof, is this: That the Threaſor Contributed, may ſundry wayes be abuſed. As, Partly, through the corrupt Nature, and very falſhood of ſuch, as ſhould in Office haue the fingring of yt: Being not contented with their ſufficient Salary, and Due Allowance. Or, by Vndiſcrete beſtowing ſome parte thereof: by waſting it to other purpoſes, or vſes, than it is meant, intended, and contributed for: one tyme or other. Or, by fayned Robberyes: or Los, by Negligent Wayes. Or (perhaps) the Poore Commons, and Body of the Realm, may (to Scrupulouſly) ſettle in their Fanſyes, A Speciall Dowt herein, which they dare not expreſſely Declare: As might be, To conſider many things, which haue bene, in tymes paſt, Liberally geuen to vſes Publik, and to Gods great Honor: (As, in thoſe Dayes, Chriſtian Religion, was rated.) And the ſame Gifts, then, moſt circumſpectly alſo, by the beſt Aduiſe of Lawyers, (in Tenor of woords) ordred: And with many other Circumſtances, confirmed: Yet, Notwithſtanding all that Aſſurance, And the Force of Legacy Law: Many a Thouſand Pounds Rent, of ſuch Free Gifts, haue byn in our Dayes, by Act of Parlement, turned from the firſt appoynted Vſes: And Therefore, herein alſo, mought the lyke Alteration be Dowted.

An Anſwer to this Dowt of the Commons.

1. ¶Eaſily, and Probably, their Fantazies might, in this their Dowt, be ſatiſfied. Firſt, the Caſes are very vnlike. For, there, either withowt Aduiſe and Conſent of the whole State: Or, of a Simple Intent, but Vaynly, (in Reſpect of the Means, to obtayn that their Intent,) ſuch Gifts were Firſt geuen: But, in this our Gift, and Publik Oblation, the whole Realm is priuy: the whole Realm conſenting: the whole Realm, ayding: And the whole Realm, certainly feeling the Publik Commodity of Peace, Wealth, and of Bleſſed Security, thereby, enioyed. And, Seeing the Caſe ſo ſtandeth, who can Dout, that euer hereafter, in any Parlement, all the Parlement Senators, or the more parte, will be ſo much corrupted in their Iudgements: as, either to miſlike the Continuall Garde of this Monarchy, by the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall: or, to Sollicite it to be layd aſide, in parte, or in all: And wold (notwithſtanding) haue the Commons, and Realm, vrged to the Contynuance of the foreſayd Perpetuall Beneuolence: for Sea Security onely, meant, and giuen?

2. ¶Secondly, to Preuent the likelyhood or poſſibility of ſuch dangerous Innouations: No les Wiſdom and Prudency, may herein be vſed, than was in Athenes, vpon Occaſion, not vtterly vnlike to this: But, ours, for manifold Purpoſes, to vs, more Commodious, than theirs, could be to them.

The Peloponneſians, being returned homeward from Attica, Thucidides (Lib. 2) recordeth ſome of the Athenienſiens new Ordonances enſuing: Saying: *Poſt *quorum diſceſſum, Athenienſes Præſidia & excubias diſpoſuerunt, in Terra, & in Mari, ſicut volebant per totum Belli tempus ſeruari. Et decreuerunt * Mille Talenta de Pecunia in Arce poſita, à reliqua ſumma ſegregata, ſeparatim reponenda eſſe, neq; inſumenda: ſed de Reliqua Pecunia, in Bello ſumptus faciendos.*

* Pelopnesiens

* Which is, very nere, Six Hundred Thouſand FRENCH Crownes: and vnderſtanding thoſe Talents to be of Siluer: So, will one French Crown be Rated at 10 Drachms, Atticall in Siluer.

tiendos. Si quis ſuaderet, vel decerneret, vt ea Pecunia moueretur, aut in alios vſus expenderetur, quàm cùm Hoſtes Atticam Claſſe & Nauali Exercitu peterent, & reprimendi eſſent, Illi Suaſori, Pœnam ſtatuebant SVPPLICIVM CAPITIS. Et centum Triremes præcipuas atq; inſtructiſſimas, quotannis, à reliqua Claſſe ſeiunxerant, adiunctis ſingularum Præfectis: Quibus, vnà cum Pecunia illa, ad nullam rem vti fas erat, præterquam, cùm Ciuitas, illa extrema neceſſitate & Periculo premeretur. The like Prouiſo, hath byn in ſundry other Realms, eſtabliſhed: And in this Kingdom alſo, ordeyned: And, in this Caſe, full well, and neceſſarily, may be.

3. ¶And, here alſo, ſuch other Circumſpect Conſiderations of Prouiſo, will vndoutedly be had, againſt all fals and negligent Officers, in any Seruice Publik, (to the vſe and behoof, of the foreſayd Pety-Nauy-Royall, appointed:) That, ſo ſone, as, any of them, ſhall be ſufficiently conuicted of falſhood, in their Office, vſed: Rigorous and ſharp Iudgement (according to the greatnes of the fault,) ſhall pas againſt them: and they vtterly be diſhabled for euer, From all Publik function of Office, within the Realm of England, and Ireland: vpon a Band of Recogniſance, taken of their hands, to that Intent. And the matter, Proces and Concluſion, fully to be Recorded, in two books: with the Offenders Name, ſubſcribed with his own hand: (As, ſundry other things, els, are, for Safety, and Readynes, to be twiſe, or oftner Regiſtred.) And if any Officer ſhall, twiſe, or thriſe, be found a Treſpaſer, by his own Negligence, or of any vnder him: in any matter of Importance, touching his Office: After due Amends ſhall by him, or his Suerties, be made, to the Publik Threaſory: That Negligent Officer, ſhall be put out of his Office, immediatly. And, after this, or ſome better Rate, all Faults, and Offences of Falſhood, and Negligences, and ſuch like, in euery kinde of Officers (to the Pety-Nauy-Royall belonging,) ſhall diligently (by apt Surueyors) be ſene to, and quikly eſpyed: narrowly ſifted, and duly corrected. So that (vndoutedly) ſuch Iuſtice, being vnpartially, and ſpeedily vſed, ſhall make, that, ere long, all theſe Officers, from the loweſt to the Higheſt, ſhall be tryed, approued, graue, honeſt, diſcrete, and circumſpect Men: who will deale ſo iuſtly, carefully, and diligently, as ☞ their Othes receiued, ſhall bynde them: And their ſufficient Suerties, ſhall be anſwearable for: And, as, the whole Commons will hartily requeſt them, for to do: and will, moſt faithfully promiſe vnto them, and gladly performe (vpon their good ſeruice, and due deſert) ſuch extraordinary Rewards, and ſo great, as may encourage any Chriſten Man, to deale truly, and iuſtly, in ſo waighty Affaires Publik: And may alſo reioyce any godly mans hart els, to ſee excellent Vertue, receiue ſuch Publik Honor, ☞ Credit, and Gwerdon.

4. ¶To Conclude: who Douteth, but that our King and God, of his Infinite mercy may graunt vs, euen at our firſt diſcrete and circumſpect Choys, and aſſigning, to finde all ſorts of thoſe Officers, ſo wiſe, faithfull, Iuſt, Carefull, and Diligent: as, it may be accounted his very handywork, and great Bleſſing, herein? Whoſe Mercifull Prouidence, at no tyme, is wanting in matters Coſmopoliticall, of great importance: and which, alſo, incomparably ſurpaſſeth all Humayn Policie: though the ſame be moſt carefully vſed, for matters tending greatly and chiefly to his Glorie, and Honor: as, vndoutedly, this doth. And ſo, are the Three former Douts, briefly, and ſufficiently (as this place may admit,) Diſſolued, and taken away.

Therfore, Seeing No Dout, or Obiection, (worthy of Conſideration, or, of any Importance,) is remayning, to the Contrary of that moſt zealous WISH, or rather, SVPPLICATION, which (certainly) is agreable to the Harty Deſire, of the moſt parte of all Naturall, and Faithfull Subiects of this Kingdom, at this very Preſent: (vpon our own State, both, in it ſelf, chiefly, and abſolutely: And alſo, in Reſpect of our Forrein Neighbors, their vnaſſured Frendſhip, being Conſidered): Why ſhould not we HOPE, that, RES-PVBL. BRYTANICA, on her knees, very Humbly, and erneſtly Soliciting the moſt Excellent Royall Maieſty, of our ELIZABETH, (Sitting at the HELM of this Imperiall Monarchy: or, rather, at the Helm of the IMPERIALL SHIP, of the moſt parte of Chriſtendome: if ſo, it be her Graces Pleaſure) ſhall obteyn, (or Perfect Policie, may perſwade her Highnes,) that, which is the Pyth, or Intent of RES-PVBL. BRYTANICA, Her Supplication? Which is, That, ΣΤΟΛΟΣ ΕΞΩΠΛΙΣΜΕΝΟΣ, may helpe vs, not onely, to ΦΡΟΥΡΙΟΝ ΤΗΣ ΑΣΦΑΛΕΙΑΣ: But make vs, alſo, Partakers of Publik Commodities Innumerable, and (as yet) Incredible. Vnto which, the HEAVENLY KING, for theſe many yeres laſt paſt, hath, by MANIFEST OCCASION, moſt Graciouſly, not only inuited vs: but alſo, hath made, EVEN NOW, the Way and Means, moſt euident, eaſie, and Compendious: In-aſmuch as, (beſides all our own ſufficient Furniture, Hability, Induſtry, Skill, and Courage) our Freends are become ſtrong: and our Enemies, ſufficiently weake, and nothing Royally furniſhed, or of Hability, for Open Violence Vſing: Though their accuſtomed Confidence, in Treaſon, Trechery, and Diſloyall Dealings, be very great. Wherin, we beſeche our HEAVENLY PROTECTOR, with his GOOD ANGELL to Garde vs, with SHIELD AND SWORD, now, and euer. Amen.

ΙΕΡΟΓΛΥΦΙΚΟΝ ΒΡΥΤΑΝΙΚΟΝ

TRuly, I can not here let pas, an other Little Diſcourſe, (as there are Diuerſe,) of his, much to this Intent. I am not vtterly Ignorant, (Sayd he,) of the Humors, and Inclinations, of the People of this ALBION, being (now) the greater Portion, of the BRYTISH IMPIRE. For, although, as well through ſo many Conqueſts, as alſo, great Reſortings hither, of ſundry other Nations, there hath byn made a Marueilous Mixture of People, of Repugnant Conditions: Yet, from Yere to Yere, the Generall Diſpoſition, of the preſent Inhabitants, doth, much alike, Alter ☞ to this great Imperfection: That is: Though otherwhiles, they know and Taſte of the Beſt: yet, ſeldome tyme, they do Conſtantly follow, and continue in the ſame: I mean now, in Publik Behauiour, Et officijs Ciuilibus: For that, their Ciuile Conuerſation, and Induſtry, in many poynts, is nothing ſo anſwerable to the Dignity of Man, As the very Heathens did preſcribe Rules for the Gouernment therof. Let CICERO, his Golden Book, DE OFFICIIS, be the Euidence againſt them, to the Contrary: And that, in thoſe Poynts, by the Heathen Orator expreſſed, which both greatly are agreable to the moſt Sacred Diuine Oracles, of our IEOVA: and alſo, for the Common-Wealths Proſperity, right Excellent.

Coſmopolites

I haue oftentymes, (Sayd He,) and many wayes, looked into the State of Earthly Kingdoms, Generally, the whole World ouer: (as far, as it may, yet, be known to Chriſten Men, Commonly:) being a Study, of no great Difficulty: But, rather, a purpoſe, ſomewhat anſwerable, to a perfect Coſmographer: to fynde hym ſelf, Coſmopolites: A Citizen, and Member, of the whole and only one Myſticall City Vniuerſall: And ſo, conſequently, to meditate of the Coſmopoliticall Gouernment therof, vnder the King Almighty: paſſing on, very ☞ ſwiftly, toward the moſt Dreadfull, and moſt Cumfortable Term prefixed:

And I finde (ſayd he) that if this *Brytiſh Monarchy, wold heretofore, haue followed the Aduantages, which they haue had, onward, They mought, very well, ere this, haue ſurpaſſed (By Iuſtice and Godly, ſort) any particular Monarchy, els, that euer was on Earth, ſince Mans Creation. And that, to all ſuch purpoſes, as to God are moſt acceptable: And to all perfect Common-Wealths, moſt Honorable, Profitable, and Comfortable.

* The Brytiſh Monarchy hath byn Capable of the greateſt Ciuile Felicity, that euer was any Particular Monarchy, Els, in the whole World: Yea, ſo Incomparably, that it might haue Cōtended, for the Generall Monarchie,

But, yet, (ſayd he) there is a Little lock of LADY OCCASION, Flickring in the Ayre, by our hands, to catch hold on: wherby, we may, yet ones more (before, all, be vtterly paſt, and for euer)

This Peaceable KING EDGAR, was one of the perfect Imperiall Monarchs of this Brytiſh Impire: and therfore, thus, his Fame remayneth (for euer) Recorded:

And why not, ARTHVRVS BRYTANIS? Bycauſe King ARTHVR his Name Sene, was a Thorne in the Saxons eyes, of thoſe Dayes: and his Name reherſed, was Odible to their Eares: Whoſe Anceſtors were by that Brytiſh Arthur, 12 times, ouercome in Battaile.

O Glaſtonbury, Glaſtonbury: the Threaſory of the Carcaſſes of ſo famous, and ſo many rare Perſons, (* Quæ olim MATER SANCTORVM dicta es: &, ab alijs, TVMVLVS SANCTORVM: quam, ab ipſis DISCIPVLIS DOMINI, ædificatam fuiſſe, Venerabilis habet Antiquorum Authoritas.) How Lamentable, is thy caſe, now? How hath Hypocriſie and Pride, wrought thy Deſolation? Though I omit (here) the names of very many other, both excellent holy Men, and Mighty Princes (whoſe Carcaſſes are committed to thy Cuſtody,) yet, that Apoſtlelike Ioſeph, That Triumphant BRYTISH ARTHVR, And now, this Peaceable, and Prouident Saxon, King Edgar, do force me, with a certayn ſorrowfull Reuerence, here, to Celebrate thy Memory.

Charta Regia Henrici Sec.

This Peaceable King Edgar, (as by Ancient Records may appere:) His Sommer Progreſſes, and Yerely chief paſtymes, were, The Sayling rownd about this Whole Ile of Albion: Garded with hys Grand Nauy of 4000 Sayle, at the leaſt: parted into 4 Equall Partes, of Pety Nauies: eche, being of a Thowſand Ships. For, ſo it is Anciently Recorded. Idem quoq; ÆDGARVS, 4000 NAVES CONGREGAVIT: ex quibus, omni Anno, poſt feſtum Paſchale 1000 Naues ad quamlibet Angliæ partem Statuit: Sic, Æſtate Inſulam* Circumnauigauit. Hyeme verò, Iudicia in Prouincia exercuit. Et hæc omnia, ad ſui Exercitium, & ad Hoſtium fecit Terrorem.*

Note STATVIT, and CIRCVMNAVIGAVIT: which declareth two orders of Ships: and ſo may the Totall Some of 4800 be alſo True. He Sayling with his NAVY-ROYALL, of 800 Ships, beſides the other 4 Stationary Pety Nauyes. For MATHEVS WESTMONASTER, ſayth: 4800 ſibi Robuſtas Congregauit Naues. So that he did gather ſo many: And alſo affirmeth the Partition into 4 equal Parts: And nameth their Stations: as other, don otherwiſe ſpeake, of the Seruiſable Alteration of their Stations. So that one with the other Conferred, and imperfect coniectures of the Writers being Somwhat holpen, the Verity ſeemeth now to be towched.

Could, and would that Peaceable, and wiſe King Edgar, before nede (as being in Peace, and Quiet, with all Nations, about hym) And Notwithſtanding, miſtruſting his poſſible Enemies, make his Paſtymes, ſo Royally, Politically, and Triumphantly: with ſo many Thowſand Ships: And at the leaſt, with ten tymes ſo many Men, as Ships: And that, yerely? And ſhall we, being not aſſured of ſuch Neighbours frendeſhips, as may become become, to vs, as Cruell and Tyrannicall Enemyes, as neuer King Edgar neded to Dread any the like: And they, as many, and Mighty Princes, as neuer King Edgar coped with the like? Shall we (ſayd he,) not Iudge it, ſome parte of Wiſdome, to Imitate carefully, in ſome little Proportion, (though not with ſo many Thouſands,) the proſperous Paſtimes of Peaceable King Edgar, that Saxonicall Alexander? Yea, Proſperous paſtimes, thoſe may be iuſtly cownted, by which, he alſo made euident to the whole world, that, As he wiſely knew the Ancient Bownds, and Limits, of this Brytiſh Impire: So, that he could, and wold, Royally, Iuſtly, and Triumphantly * Enioy the ſame: Spite of the Diuell, and Maugre the Force of any Forreyn Potentate: And, all that, ſo Highly, and Faithfully, to the glory of God, finally, intended, and brought to pas: As the Wiſeſt, and Godlyeſt Prelats, and Cownſailors of thoſe Dayes, (ſo cownted of, and recorded,) could beſt aduiſe or direct him: Or (Perchance,) but ſincerely Commend, and Dutifully encourage him, in: He being, of himſelf, ſo bent: As, purpoſing, firſt, Inuincibly to Fortify the Chiefeſt and Vttermoſt Walls of his Ilandiſh Monarchy, againſt all Forreyn Encombrance poſſible: And in that Fortification Furdering, and Aſſuring, to truſt beſt his own Ouerſight, and Iudgement: in yerely vewing the ſame, in euery Quarter therof: And that, (as it were) for his Paſtime Imperiall, alſo, in the Sommer Tyme: to the ende, that afterward, In all Securitie, he might, in Winter tyme * (VACARE:) be at conuenient Leyſure, On Land: chiefly, to ſet furth Gods Due Honor: And Secondly, to Vnderſtand, and Diligently to Liſten to the Cauſes and Complaynts, of his Commons. For, (As Mathæus Weſtmonaſtarienſis, of him, to his Immortall Commendation, hath left vs a Remembrance:)

* Vſus rei, melior re ipſa.

The Chief Walls of this Ilandiſh Monarchy, ought to be Prudently Fortifyed, Valiantly Garded, and Diligently, by Sea-Spye and Watchman, to be kept in Security, from all Sudden Approche, of the Enemy by Sea.

* That is: Beſide his Yerely Sea Progres.

* By this foreſayd Nauy, mainteyning.

Thus, we ſee, how, in * Opportunity, this Peaceable Edgar, procured, to this Impire, ſuch proſperous Security: That his true and faithfull Subiects, all manner of wayes, (that is, at home, and alſo at Sea, both outward and inward,) mought peaceably, Safely, and Securely, employ their wits and trauayles, for the marueilous enritching of this Kingdom, and pleaſuring very many other: Carrying forth, the Naturall Commodities of this Land, abounding here, aboue our neceſſary vſes: (and due Store reſerued): And likewiſe (agayn), Furniſhing the ſame, with all neceſſary (and not ſuperfluous) Forreyn Commodities: ſet from far, or Forreyn Cuntryes. This, was, in dede (as before is Recorded) a Kingly Prouidence: Reipub. Regniq; Vtilitati Conſulens, &c.

* Take tyme, while Tyme is: for Tyme will away.

Kingly Prouidence.

Beſides which great Vtility and Profit publik, foreſene: and by this means, enioyed: he him ſelf, vſed moſt gladly the Aduantage of that Security, in miniſtring of Iuſtice: Or cauſing the ſame to be executed, all his Kingdom ouer: Not Squeymiſhly, frowningly, or ſkornfully ſhunning the ragged and tattered ſleue of any * Suppliant, holding vp to him a ſimple ſoyled Bill of Complaynt, or Petition, and that, homely contriued: Or, afrayd at, and Timerouſly haſting from, the ſickly Pale face, or feeble Lymmed Suter, extremely conſtrayned, ſo, to ſpeak for him ſelf: Nor, partially ſmoothering his own Conſcience, to fauor, or mayntein the fowle fault, and treſpas vnlawfull, of any his Subiects: How Mighty, or Neceſſary ſo euer, they (els) were: But, diligently made Search, leaſt, Pauperes, à Potentibus præiudicium paßi, opprimerentur.

* Herein, our Souerayn Elizabeth is a moſt gracious Charitable, and Carefull Iuſticer.

☞ Thus, did Publik-[1] Security, from Forreyn foe, abrode: And True [2] loue, of his own Subiects, garding him, at home: And the [3] Heauenly Spirite, directing all his godly Purpoſes: Cauſe Iuſtice and Equity, in all Quarters of this ALBION, to floriſh. For which, his Peaceable and proſperous Benefits, at the Eternall King his hand, obtayned: he became, not Inſolent, or declyned to Tyrannicall Regiment (as ſome Princes, in other Cuntries haue made their lyues, Comicotragicall,) ☞ But with all his foreſayd Inuincible Sea Strength, aboundant Wealth, Triumphant Peace: with Security, and Iuſtice, ouer all his Monarchy preuayling: his hart, was continually, and moſt zealouſly bent, to ſet forth the Glory, Laude, and Honor of the Almighty Creator, the Heauenly and euerlaſting King: By ſuch principall and Princely means, as, (then,) were demed, to God, moſt acceptable: And ſuch, as many Monuments, yet, to our dayes, remayning, do of him vndoutedly Teſtify: As this, for one:

Ex Charta Fundationis Eccleſiæ Cathedralis Wigorniæ.

So that, by all theſe Rehearſed Records, it is moſt euident, that the Peaceable King Edgar, was one of thoſe Monarchs, in whoſe hands (if life had ſufficed,) the * Incredible Value and Priuilege, graunted by God and Nature, vnto this Brytiſh Monarchy, might haue byn peaceably purchaſed: In ſuch ſort, as the very Bleſſing and fauour of the Diuine Trinity, hath layd means, for our Induſtry to Attayn to, and enioye the ſame, by.

* The Preeminence and Priuiledge by GOD, and NATVRE, Appropriat to this BRYTISH MONARCHY, is Incredible: and will be yet, for a While:

And though ſundry other valiant Princes, and Kings of this Land, I could recite, which, in tymes paſt, haue either by Intent gone about: or, by wiſe and valyant exployt, haue meetly well proſpered, toward this Ilandiſh appropriat Supremacy atteyning: Yet, Neuer, any other reaſonable Means was vſed, or by Humayn wyt, and Induſtry, can be contriued, to all purpoſes Sufficient, But onely, by our SEA-FORCES preuayling: And ſo, by our Inuincible enioying All, within the SEA-LIMITS, of our Brytiſh Royallty, Conteyned.

Note this: For it is SVMMA SVMMARVM. (Without any Controllment,) to be Frankly Auouched.

To which Incredible Politicall Myſtery atteyning, No eaſyer, readyer, or perfecter Plat and Introduction, is (as yet) come to my Imagination, than is, The Preſent and Continuall Seruice, of Threeſcore, good, and Tall, warlik Ships, with Twenty ſmaller Barks: and thoſe 80, Ships (great and ſmall) with 6660 apt Men, furniſhed: and all, ſingularly well appointed, for Seruice, (both on Sea and Land) faithfully and diligently, to be done, in ſuch Circumſpect and Diſcrete Order, As, partly, I haue in other places declared: and farder (vpon good Occaſion Offred) may declare.

What nede we, now, any better Preſident: than of a King, ſo * Iuſt, as Edgar was, to learn, how Iuſtly, our Plat, for the Pety-Nauy-Royall is Preſcribed, and layd owt? And, of a King, ſo * Peaceable, as Edgar was, (And Therefore, Surnamed PACIFICUS,) To learn thoſe Princely Policies, which not onely ſtand with the Due Termes of Forreyn Peace, and Amity preſent, Royally preſerued: But, alſo, cary with them, (Triumphantly) The Deadly Darte, and Hedding Axe, ineuitable to all forreyn Offenders, and Homiſh Rebells?

SOMWHAT MORE, he ſayd herein: (which I here purpoſly omit:) But very much, is to be ſayd, in the Premiſſes: (As by my ſayd Inſtructor, I perceiued not long ſynce:) which, to you, or other, in conuenient Tyme and Place, (and after his manner) he him ſelf, can beſt

1. expres: 1· ASWELL of the Fowr conuenient Places, for the ÆRARIUM PUBLICUM, or Pety-Nauy-Exchecquers, to be in:

in : (as, LONDON, YORK, WEST-CHESTER, and BRISTOW:) Both in reſpect of Safe Cuſtody, of the Publik-Threaſor : And alſo in reſpect of the Conuenient Diſtances, from our Twenty Portes : And from the Fowr Chief Quarters, and the Hart alſo, of this ALBION : So that, Both to the ſayd Exchecquers, and from them, all Payments, and Caryages, requiſite, may be conueniently made:

2. 2. As alſo, of his Plat, and IDEA De Officijs, Or, De Muneribus Militum Naualium, & Nautarum, of the PETY-NAVY-ROYALL : In tyme of Peace, In tyme of Dowtfull Inclination Forrein, and in the Tyme of Open War : And that, eyther Ordinary, or Extraordinary, for the Day, for the Weke, for the Monthe, for the Quarter, and for the Yere.

3. 3. Likewiſe, for the Certificat, of the Affaires, and State, of the PETY-NAVY-ROYALL, to be ſent wekely, or Oftener, to our Gracious Soueraign, and her moſt Vigilant Priuy Cownſailors, from the Pety-Nauy his Grand-Gouernor, in Tymes Suſpicious, or Dowbtfull : And but euery Fortnight, Once, in Tymes of Aſſured Tranquillity : And that, by ſome of our Smaller Barkes : And to One of the Aſſigned Twenty Portes, being next to him, at that Inſtant. And there, the ſayd Meſſager, with the Smaller Bark, to Attend and Receiue from the Queenes Maieſtie, and her Honorable Priuy Cownſaile, their will and pleaſure : Anſwerable to the forſayd Certificat : And ſuch farder Direction, as to them ſemeth for that Tyme, to be moſt Expedient.

4. 4. Fardermore, of the Prerogatiue-Prouiſo Royall, very Sufficienly to be made, That the Grand-Gouernor, and All and euery of the Sea-Soldiers and Mariners, of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, with their Ships, ſhall come-in, and be in their Aſſigned Ports : Within any one Fortnight Space, after the Day of their Receiuing the Expres Charge, and Sufficient Warrant, from our Soueraign, to that Intent : Vnles, Contrary, or Raging Storme, and Tempeſt, Cauſe, and Force, longer Delay. Wherein, the FAITHFVLL COMMONS, do nothing Dowt of the Prouident-Circumſpection of the Higher Powers, to Forſee, that Such Dutifull Repayre and Attendance of the Grand-Gouernor, with all his Charge, (as is here ſpecifyed,) ſhall be Nothing Dam-mageable, or Preiudiciall, to the Proſperous Continuance of the Pety-Nauy-Royall, thoſe his waighty Seruyces, which partly before are ſpoken of, and other, which (Yet) are to be ſpoken of. For, Reſpub. Omnis, Sua quædam habet ARCANA.

5. 5. There remayne alſo, to be Declared, the Reaſons, why my Inſtructor doth Wiſh, and Aduiſe, Parte of the Publik-Threaſory, to be beſtowed vpon ſome Two, or Three Honeſt Men, who ſhould be Skilfull in Far-Forreyn-Languages: As, in the Sclauonian, or Moſchouite, the Arabik Vulgar, the Turkiſh, the Tartarien, the Chiny Language, the Canadien, and the Iſlandiſh, &c. For that, (within ☞ theſe fevv yeares next following,) with Men of all theſe Cuntries, and farder, Great Affayres are by ſome of our Cuntry-Men to be handled: Yf God contynue his Gracious Direction, and Ayde thereto, as he hath very Cumfortably begonne: and that, by means not yet publiſhed.

6. 6. And ſome alſo, of the ſayd Pety-Nauy-Threaſor, he did Aſſigne, for a good Stypend geuing to an Excellent Enginer, aſwell for Matters of Fortification, as alſo, for Inuenting of Weapons, or Engyns, Offenſiue, or Defenſiue, by Land, or Sea: And likewiſe, for Engyns of Seruice, for Profit-Publik, otherwiſe: By Land, and Sea: Either aboue Grownd and Water, or vnder Grownd and Water, &c.

7. 7. Moreouer, ſome Parte to be beſtowed on Fowr Chriſtian Philoſophers, Skilfull, or to become Skilfull, and alſo Excellent: both in Speculation, and alſo Practiſe, of the beſt Manner of the Ancient and Secret Philoſophie: which is not Vulgar: but, Vndowtedly, which may be moſt ☞ Comfortable, and Profitable, to Some, of Courteous KALID, his Diſpoſition, &c. By which Titles of Matter, left Vnſpecifyed hitherto, It may Euidently appere, that my Inſtructor hath (as it were,) but opened the Doore of his Philoſophicall and Politicall Brytiſh Furniture: to be Fauorably vewed of them, whoſe Inſight, is Sharp, and Profound: Whoſe Zeale, and Care alſo, for the State-Publik of this Monarchy, to become moſt Chriſtianlike Happy, (in all Reſpects,) is Ardent, and not Luke-warme.

Seeing then,

NO KINGDOM, in theſe Dayes, hath more nede of a PETY-NAVY-ROYALL, and to be Continually at Sea maintayned, for the Reſpects aboue rehearſed:

No Kingdome, hath apter TYMBER for Shipping: And thereof (YET) ſtore enough:

No Kingdome, hath Skilfuller, and more SHIP-WRIGHTS:

No Kingdome, hath Subiects better HABLE, and which more willingly will be Contributary for the ſufficient Setting forth, and mayntenance of ſuch a PETY-NAVY-ROYALL, continually, at Sea (and that, for the former Reſpects:)

No Kingdome, hath better ſtore of APT and willing MEN: as well couragious Ientlemen, as other: very manfully diſpoſed, to furniſh the foreſayd Nauy with, for all kynde of purpoſes:

No Kingdome, hath better, or more Hauens, and HARBOROVGHS, (and thoſe, round about it) to Succour a Nauy in, from Dangers, or Diſtres of Sea:

No King, nor Kingdome, hath, by Nature and Humayn Induſtry (to be vſed) any, more LAWFVLL, and more Peaceable Means (made euident) wherby, to become, In wealth, far paſsing all other: In Strength, and Force, INVINCIBLE: and in Honorable eſtimation, Triumphantly Famous, ouer all, and aboue all other:

Than this hath:

And, (To be brief) Seeing No Kingdome,

is more Diſcrete, and willing to Vſe the * Opportunity, of any exceding great and Publik Benefit procuring to the ſame, than this Brytiſh Monarchy, is, or May be: Our hope, then is, That, vpon the Vniforme, Brotherly, Willing, and Frank Conſent, of all States, of Men and People, of this Incomparable Realme of England: to this Godly, Politik, and moſt Commendable Means: to [1] preſerue Amity and Peace, with all Forreyn Princes: And to Garde this State-Publik in [2] Security, from taking Iniury of any, or by any, (Fraudulently, or Forcibly,) And to [3] kepe our own hands and harts, from Dooing, or Intending Iniury, to any Forreyner, on Sea or Land: Our Hope is, (ſayd he,) That vpon this Godly [1] Intente, Diſcrete [2] Couenant, and Publik Contributary [3] Oblation: the Omnipotent [4] Author of Heauenly Peace, will ſo bend down his Mercifull and gratious Eyes, vpon vs: and ſo manifeſtly ſtretch forth his Almighty hand to Bles, Furder, and Proſper the foreſayd Oblation, with all the Purpoſes and Commodities therof expected, and likely to enſue: that, all we may, with the Kingly Prophet Dauid, (both old and yong, Rich and Poore,) moſt ioyfully, and Triumphantly, (IN PERFECT SECVRITIE,) Syng,

Somewhat, I haue now ſayd, (quoth my Inſtructor) in this PETY NAVY MATTER: to diſcharge me of my Duty, to the COMMON-WELTH, herein: And very ſory I am, that I know not, as much, as this moſt waighty Caſe requireth, to be * Speedily known: And that I am not able, aptly and Duly to Order and expres ſo much, as I already know. Moreouer, (Sayd he) if it ſhould not be taken in worſe parte, of OVR SOVERAIGN, than, of the Emperour of Conſtantinople, Emanuel, the ſyncere Intent, and faythfull Aduiſe, of Georgius Gemiſtus Pletho, was, I could (proportionally, for the occaſion of the Tyme, and place,) frame and ſhape §. very much of Gemiſtus thoſe his two Greek Orations, (the firſt, to the Emperor, and the Second to his Sonne, Prince Theodore:) for our BRYTISH ILES, and in better and more allowable manner, at this Day, for our People, than that his Plat (for Reformation of the State, at thoſe Dayes,) could be found, for Peloponneſus, auaylable. But, Seeing thoſe Orations, are now publiſhed: both in Greek and Latin, I need not Dowbt, but they, to whom, the chief Care of ſuch cauſes is committed, haue Diligently ſelected the Hony of thoſe Flowres, already, for the Common-Wealths great Benefit. But, Gemiſtus ſayd very well, THEN:

§. Though in ſundry points, my Inſtructor did miſlike Gemiſtus opinion: ſometymes not the ſoundeſt for the Peloponneſians commoditie: & ſomtimes greatly repugnant to the order moſt nedeful for this Brytiſh Policy: Yet, much therof, might be a good Aduiſe for the framing of an Analogical Ciuile conſideration, in reſpect of the Intent, by Gemiſtus regarded.

At qui ſimul & moderato numero fuerint, & non indocti, cùm vt alius aliud conſideret, atque in medium proferat, ita Communi vtilitate communiter ducantur, optimi erunt ac certiſsimi Conſultores. Deindè hoc requiritur, vt mediocri ſint fortuna, nec vel ditiſsimi vel pauperrimi: ſiquidem illi, præ diuitiarum ſtudio, nihil ferè ſuadent aliud, quàm vnde Lucrum ipſis aliquod proueniat: hi, præ inopia, nihil ſpectant aliud, quàm vt Neceſsitati ſubueniant ſuæ. Cum porrò, tria hæc prima ſunt hominum in vrbe genera, propria quædam ſingulorum eſſe debent officia: quæ quidem proba Lex obire

quemq; iubet, nec inter ſe confundere. Principes igitur nullum ſubeant Miniſterium, quandoquidem Imperio maximè contrarium eſt miniſtrare. Sunt autem inter Miniſteria, cùm alia quæ recenſuimus, tum Inſtitoria & Mercatura. At Principem iubet Lex, nec Mercaturam nec Inſtitoriam facere, nec aliud quicquam non liberale tractare. Similiter à Vulgo ſecernantur Milites; ac Seruatores à ſeruandis: & illi quidem ab omni Collatione liberi Militent, ac Populum tueantur: Hi verò ſuas res agentes idonea, ſimul nec grauia Principum & Militum delectorum Dimenſo, Tributa pendant. Maior verò pars Exercitus & potior, Ciuium ſit ac domeſticorum, non Peregrinorum: ſiquidem raro fidi ſunt Peregrini, multiſq; mutationibus: interdum pro Seruatoribus atq; Cuſtodibus hoſtes exiſtunt. Domeſtici verò ſi rectè curentur, magis firmi ſunt atq; fidi. De Ruſticis autem pleriq; militiæ aſſueti, per coniugationes diuidantur, eorumq; alterutro communibus ferè laborante ſumptibus, viciſsim alter laboret, alter militet: ſic vt pariter et familiæ ſuæ curam & Salutis Communis ijdem, quantum fieri poſsit, gerant. Separentur autem in exercitu Pedites ab Equitibus: Peditibus quidem in Turmas ſub Ducibus, Equitibus autem in Alas ſub Magiſtris relatis, quò confeſtim poſsint, vbicunq; fuerit opus, ordine adeſſe. Neque ſimul vtræq; Copiæ, Terreſtres ac Nauales, cogantur: verùm alteræ ſemper, eæq; * Si id Vrbis & Gentis atq; etiam Regionis patiatur Natura, potiùs terreſtres: ne cum vtriſq; ſimus inferiores, neutros vincamus. Ac præſtat longè * Terreſtribus Copijs in militum ac Ducum virtute, quam Nautarum ac aliorum hominum † vilium arte fiduciam ponere: ac terra poſitos, indidem neceſſaria nanciſci, quàm peregrè petere: relictiſq; Mari proximis locis, niſi cogat extrema neceſsitas, ſoli cum vicinis bello vacare: quàm pluribus, tùm cum vicinis, tùm cum exteris. Iam cùm Tributorum tria ſint minimùm genera, Primum Seruitus, deinde certa ſiue pecuniæ, ſiue aliarum rerum ſumma, tùm quędam rerum naſcentium pars: Grauiſsimum quidem Tributi genus eſt Seruitus, quippe quod non opes arripiat, ſed corpora: nec paruam ipſis præbet exactoribus moleſtiam, quorum præſentiam quotannis requirit: certa verò ſumma, præter ſeruitutem, magnam etiam habet inæqualitatem, dum & neceſſariò penditur, et ſæpè non pro opibus: quando nec facilè ſit opibus cuiuſq; Tributum exæquare, nec ſingulorum opes eandem ſemper obtineant magnitudinem. (Eadem quidem per partes quotannis ſępiùs à pluribus exacta, longè maiorem difficultatem parit.) Rerum autem naſcentium quędam pars cùm ſeruitutis minus habet, tùm quouis alio Tributo, tantundem quod efficeret, multo leuior eſt, ipſa temporis ratione, (quandoquidem, quo tempore fructus à ſingulis colliguntur, de ipſis petitur fructibus:) nec non æqualitatem habet maximam, dum quiſq; pro opibus perſoluit: quo fit, vt optimum ſit hoc Tributum, cùm & leuiſsimum

* Marke this Si: for, in our Ilandiſh State, certainly and euidently, our greater aduantage and les coſt and encombrance is to kepe our Publike and vniuerſall Garde in a Nauy at Sea. As before is aboundantly proued. And GEMISTVS his earneſt deſire to prefer the Land forces, and Land Soldiers maketh him to ſpeake not ſo aptly and fauorably as the Caſe might admit of skilful Sea-men and Mariners: who alone are not the workers of great victories at Sea without the Sea Soldiers induſtry and valiantnes concurrent. For his Cuntry, and at that Tyme (perhaps) it was beſt ſo, to refuſe the maintenance of a Nauy. And after this maner, are many things in this oration: which, at that Tyme, and in that Place, were for the Peloponneſians more ſeruiſable and commodious, than the like were to be demed for this ſtate. For, all, here, contained, is not to be of vs allowed, or imitated: But, here and there, the Idea generall, is to be anſwered with due application, particularly, for our Cuntry, and these our Dayes.

mum ſit, vt diximus, & æquiſsimum: &, ſi cum æquitate exigatur, Reipubl. vtiliſsimum.

Quæ porrò æquitas hic locum habeat, hinc licet animaduertere. Terræ fructus tria potiſsimùm requirunt, Operas, Sumptus operis præbendos, (vt boues, vineas, Armenta, et ſimilia) & horum Cuſtodiam. Quapropter etiam Tribus iure debentur, Operis, ſumptuum Dominis, ac deniq; Cuſtodibus vniuerſorum et Seruatoribus, quos Reges, Principes, alioſq; Præfectos diximus. Ruſtici ergo, qui ſuis laborant ſump» tibus, cùm liceat ipſis quocunq; loco, terram quouis pacto colere, dua-
» bus fruentes partibus, altera operis, altera ſumptibus debita, Tertiam » Reipubl. et Cuſtodibus vniuerſorum præſtent: omni alia Collatione qua-» cunque omniq; miniſterio vacantes. Atq; hoc ſit iuſtiſsimum Tributum, Præmium ſimul ac Dimenſum publicis miniſtris futurum. Ac de Tributis quidem hactenus.

Viuendi porrò ratio, cùm reliquorum Ciuium, tùm Præfectorum maximè, non ſumptuoſa, ſed moderata ſit: ſic vt peregrinas quidem veſtes et nugas alias negligant: ad Bellum autem ſint omnes compoſiti, quiq; huc pertinent apparatus, diligenter procurent: quos quidem, cùm aliò ſumptus tranſferuntur, diminui oportet ac deteri.

Terræ fructus nemini liceat, quocunque velit, niſi alteram partem pro vectigali pendat, euehere. Ad ſocios quidem, euehere liceat. Sin quis ferro, vel armis, vel alia re neceſſaria velit mutare, nihil pendat.

Moneta nec improba nec peregrina vtamur: ne videamur etiam praua & aliena vti Republica. Siquidem non paruum in Republica momentum habet Monetæ ratio.

Sontes ne Barbarico more mulctentur, vt poſt mulctam minimùm deinceps peccent. Nam qui videntur inſanabiles eſſe, eos de medio pręſtat auferentes, animam corpore liberare, qua non recte nouit vti: quàm illos mutilantes, hanc tùm corpori mutilo atq; inutili, tùm reliquæ Ciuitati alligare.

Atq; hæ quidem probæ ſunt Reipubl. Leges, aliæq; ſimiles: Caput autem horum eſt omnium, de Deo rectè & publicè et priuatim ſentire, maximè autem hæc tria: Primùm, eſſe Deum quendam præſtantiſsimam omnium Naturam: deindè, hunc & homines curare, et res omnes humanas tùm magnas, tùm paru[illegible] regere: tùm arbitrio ſuo cuncta illum rectè iuſteq; ſemper adminiſtrare, nuſquam ab officio deflectentem, vel alia de cauſa, vel hominum donis delinitum, quibus non indigeat. Quæ cùm ita ſe habent, conſequitur illud, vt in cultu ſacra donariaq; modo & pietate adhibitis offerant, velut inde bonum omne proficiſci fatentes: nec vel minùs præſtantes, aut duarum, aut alterius ſaltem duarum impietatis formarum opinionem ſibi comparent: vel nimio ſumptu, & priuatas domos & Rempubl. perdentes, quaſi donariorum quicquam proficeret magnificentia : nec amplius quid offerre, ſed redimere viſi, tertio ſe impietatis generi obſtringunt. Has demum ſententias publicè priuatimq́ confirmatas, neceſſario virtus & honeſti omne ſtudium ſequitur.

At vitium quoduis et maxima mortalium peccata, de contrarijs naſcuntur ſententijs . Semper enim exiſtunt nonnulli prauis opinionibus imbuti: & vel nullum eſſe prorſus Deum arbitrantes, vel vt ſit, res tamen humanas negligere: vel deniq; vt ſit atque curet, corrumpi nihilominus poſſe, ſacriſq́ ac donarijs delinitum, nonnunquam ab officio deflectere.

Ab his enim duabus inter ſe contrarijs de Deo ſententijs, tanquam fontibus, duo procedunt vitæ genera, plurimùm inter ſe diſſidentia: quorum alterum virtutem vel ſolum, vel ſummum ponit bonum, alterum Voluptatem.

Etenim cùm Hominis natura, partim Diuina ſit, partim humana, (quod omnibus & Græcis & Barbaris vel aliqua præditis mente viſum fuit) Diuinitatem quidem Animo, humanitatem autem exprimente Corpore. Qui quidem Diuinitatem Ducem ſecuti, cùm rectè de cognata natura ſenſerint, tùm ad virtutis normam vitam omnem direxerint, Boni ſunt omnis inter homines Auctores : qui verò mortali ac ferina parte ducti, cùm de Deo ſecus ſenſerint, tùm ad voluptatem retulerint omnia, magnorum contrà ſunt Auctores Malorum.

Inter hos Medij ſunt, & qui Gloriæ ſtudent, & qui Diuitijs: cùm “ ſimulacrum illa ſit virtutis, hæ voluptates concinnent. “

Et in eorum quidem numero, qui virtutem ſunt amplexi, cùm alij ſæculis omnibus extitere, tum Amphitryonis F. Hercules, quem diximus bona reipubl. conſtitutione virtutiſq́ ſtudio Græcis conciliato, celeberrimos illos reddidiſſe, cùm ſibi primùm ipſi virtutem crebris laboribus & certaminibus comparaſſet: Lycurgus item Lacedæmonius, qui fratre Rege ſine liberis mortuo, cùm Coniunx, quæ grauidam ſe norat, ad ipſum ſe, fetu abolito, Regnum vnà cum Matrimonio delaturum recepiſſet, re non conceſſa, quoniam Iuſtitiæ repugnabat, fratriſq́ filio tum vita conciliata, tum paterno dominio reſtituto, aliquanto pòſt tempore Legiſlator à ſuis conſtitutus, præclara illa Reip. conſtitutione introducta, celeberrimam ipſam vrbem cùm inter Græcos tùm inter Barbaros reddidit: Alexander quoque Rex Macedonum, qui per virtutem ſimul & animi magnitudinem, Græcorum Princeps effectus, ipſis pariter & Macedonibus, Aſiæ comparauit imperium:

Nec non inter Barbaros, Perſa Cyrus, qui Perſas ſuos virtute propria cùm tyrannide Medorum liberauit, tùm & horum & Aſiæ reliquæ dominos conſtituit.

In altero verò numero cùm alij recenſentur, tùm Alexander Troianus, Priami filius, qui in Dearum iudicio, vitæq; generum electione, tùm Iunone contempta, virtutis Præſide, tum Auctore glorię Minerua, Venerem voluptatis Deam prætulit. Quapropter neglectis tùm Regno à Iunone conceſſo, vita cum virtute et fœlicitate coniuncta: tùm à Minerua oblata victoria bellica, vita glorioſa: Helena verò Lacęna Tindarei F. Menelai Atridæ coniuge, præmio tam iniqui iudicij accepta, tanquam voluptatis colophone, vt corpore omnium pulcherrima, ſic animo turpiſsima & adultera, cum hac ſeſe ſimul & Patriam peſſundedit. Sardanapalus item Aſſyrius, qui per Mollitiem et luxum, Aſiæ Imperium Aſſyrijs quidem ſuis ademit, Medis autem conceſsit: Nec non de Romanis Nero, qui cùm alijs grauibus ac nefandis perpetratis, tùm occiſa matre, ſeipſum quoq; tandem malum malè perdidit. Nam » Patriam cupiebat quidem, ſed præ Romanorum virtute, nondum pote-
» rat euertere. Ac ſæpè plures exiſtunt huius generis, tùm inter Princi» pes, tùm inter Priuatos, alij grauiùs alijs peccantes: in his etiam » illi, qui Iuſtitiam quidem et Veritatem & Bonum Commune pro vm» bris ducunt, auro autem & ſimilibus inhiant: fœlicitatem quidem in » veſtibus, auro, argento, luxúq; quotidiano ponentes, Propriam verò » ſimul & liberorum, et Patriæ totius Libertatem, ac SECVRITA-

» ret, ac per ſe conſideratur, vehementiſsimè Iuſtitiam & Veritatem » defendunt: Sed ſimul atque vel aurum, vel Auri quid ſimile micuerit, » mox & lingua ligatur, & os obturatur, ac de Iuſtitia quidem ſilent:

Leges Ratę.

Poſtquam autem alia re nulla, quàm Salute, nunc indigemus, (non enim nos latet, quò res ex ampliſsimo Romanorum Imperio deuenerunt, quibus duæ tantum in Thracia relictæ ſunt vrbes, et Peloponneſi pars aliqua, ac ſi qua reſtat etiam Inſula,) Salutem autem Ciuitatum duntaxat è proba Republ. diximus proficiſci: Reſpubl. nobis & legibus præſtantiſsimis et Moderatoribus quàm fieri poterit optimis erit emendanda. AND with this pithy peece of wiſe warning, by HESIODVS (very aptly to our preſent purpoſe) recorded, I will end this firſt Treatiſe: falling out, in very good Oportunitie, to be in ſtead of a Preface, for the better vnderſtanding and enioying the reſt of the RARE MEMORIALS enſuing: collected, according to the Title prefixed. For which Preface, being thus, (though with more zeale than cunning) finiſhed, I yeld thanks moſt humbly to the Omnipotent Spirit of Veritie, the Spirit of all Comfort and Bountifulnes: which Directed & enclined the Minde and Tongue of my Inſtructer, thus to prefer the SAFETY AND POLITIKELY ASSVRED PEACE VNIVERSALL, OF THIS BRYTISH KINGDOM, before any other Lucre, or Honor, Publike or Priuate: As, without which PEACE AND TRANQVILLITY, neither the COMMONS: nor, the LORDES SPIRITVALL OR TEMPORALL: no, nor yet our moſt GRACIOVS ELIZABETH, can atteyne to the excellent Scope, and perfection of Ciuill State: vnto which, both, by the Law of God and Nature: and alſo by Humaine Policy, all ſound Common-Wealths, and Bodies Politike, ought to direct all their Actions Ciuill.

And I beſeche you (Right Worſhipfull Sir,) not onely to take theſe my ſpeedy Trauailes and Collections in good parte, your ſelfe: But alſo, to whom ſo euer, you will deliuer any one of the Copies, (wherof, only one 50 Hundred are to be printed, by the warning of my Inſtructor:) You would be my Carefull Orator, to this purpoſe chiefly: That my good will, and exceding zealous Intent herein, dutifully to pleaſure this BRYTISH MONARCHIE, might be thankfully accepted: and ſo, my ſimple & very faythfull Trauailes, to be rewarded. And finally, that you would very earneſt-

PRAEFATIO.

Huius opusculorum quorundam minorum Hilarii Pictauiensis editionis usum ut lectoribus commodiorem redderemus, complura iam de librorum illorum genuinitate atque indole, de codicum natura atque affinitate, de difficilioribus aliis quibusdam quaestionibus lingua germanica in Actis academiae litterarum Uindobonensis exposuimus. scripsimus enim dissertationes has: Studien zu Hilarius von Poitiers I. Die sogenannten 'Fragmenta historica' und der sogenannte 'Liber I ad Constantium imperatorem' nach ihrer Überlieferung, inhaltlichen Bedeutung und Entstehung, 1910 = Sitzungsberichte, phil.-hist. Kl. CLXII 4. — Studien II. Bischofsnamen und Bischofssitze bei Hilarius. Kritische Untersuchungen zur kirchlichen Prosopographie und Topographie des 4. Jahrhunderts, 1911 = SB CLXVI 5. — Studien III. Überlieferungsgeschichte und Echtheitskritik des sogenannten 'Liber II ad Constantium', der 'Tractatus mysteriorum', der 'Epistula ad Abram filiam', der Hymnen. Kleinere Fragmente und Spuria. Nebst einem Anhang: Uaria über die Fassung der Bibelstellen, 1912 = SB CLXIX 5.

Satis igitur erit, ut hac praefatione totam rem nuper fusius tractatam breuiter complectamur nonnullis additamentis adiectis iisque correctis, quae aut minus recte exposita aut re melius perpensa nunc prorsus mutanda esse putamus. impense autem beneuolum lectorem, qui parum se hic edoceri aegre ferens uberiora desiderat, rogamus, ne commentationes illas germanicas in suum uocare usum neglegat.

I.

DE TRACTATIBUS MYSTERIORUM.

1. De codice Aretino. — 2. De excerptis Petri diaconi et alio fragmento tradito ab auctore quodam s. XI/XII. — 3. De editione principe et uirorum doctorum notis criticis. — 4. De titulo et dispositione Tractatuum. — 5. De partibus Tractatuum deperditis.

1. Tractatus mysteriorum seu potius eorum reliquiae unico tantum libro manu scripto nobis traditi sunt, scilicet codice Aretino lat. VI 3 (= A), membranaceo, saec. XI medio litteris, quae beneuentanae-casinenses dicuntur, exarato[1]. constat autem totum illud uolumen Aretinum ex residuis duorum codicum eadem fere aetate scriptorum, quorum alter (nunc quindecim foliorum) continebat Hilarii Tractatus mysteriorum atque Librum hymnorum, alter (nunc uiginti duorum foliorum) Aetheriae Peregrinationem ad loca sancta. singularum paginarum prioris codicis partis spatium scriptura completum est 207 × 138 mm., folia autem sunt longa 262 mm., lata 171. lineae in singulis prioris codicis partis paginis sunt tricenae ternae, in alterius partis paginis tricenae quinae. in codice ipso folia numerata non sunt; quare foliorum numeros nos exhibemus incipientes a primo folio conseruato. sunt autem folia secundum quaterniones ordinata. quorum primus quinque foliis constat, quoniam folia eius primum, septimum, octauum perierunt. qui hodie secundus est quaternio, integer exstat, tertii quaternionis folia secundum et septimum tantum seruata esse uidentur. de quaternionibus prorsus deperditis conferenda sunt, quae p. XVII sq. exposuimus.

Etiam in foliis exstantibus scripturae damna quaedam deprehenduntur orta madore uel temporum iniuria; neque enim solum complura uocabula ita sunt euanida, ut uix aut ne uix quidem legi possint (uelut p. 3, 7. 8. 5, 17. 7, 3. 25, 5. 28, 19. 29, 27. 37, 26), sed etiam non paucae uoces uel uocum partes eo perierunt, quod cum ipsa membrana corrosae uel abscissae sunt (uelut p. 4, 5. 6. 7. 5, 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 25. 7, 2. 3). ubi in apparatu nihil de hac re adnotauimus, iam primus editor Iohannes Franciscus Gamurrini ipse damna illa resarsit. lacunae inueniuntur in codice duae, scilicet p. 9, 27 et p. 14, 27. quarum altera complectens spatium 14 fere litterarum fortasse inde ortum ducit, quod in archetypo locus s. scripturae desinebat litteris etc, altera autem complectens spatium 5 litterarum inde, quod scriba omissa in archetypo intellegere non potuit. interpunctio, quam librarius codicis A adhibuit, haud paucis locis aut falsa aut minus recta est; interpunguntur saepius, quae arte cohaerent, uel non separantur, quae plane seiungenda sunt. s. scripturae loci etsi non semper, tamen plerumque signis aduncis a cetero textu distinguuntur.

[1] Cf. etiam I. F. Gamurrini, Praef. editionis (Biblioteca dell' Academia storico-giuridica IV [1887]; P. Geyer, Itinera Hierosolymit. (CSEL XXXIX p. VIII sqq.); H. Lindemann, Des hl. Hilarius von P. Liber mysteriorum 94—98; Studien III 16 sqq.

Correcturae habentur in A non multae, earum pleraeque sunt factae ab ipso librario, paucae a diuersis scribis aetatis posterioris. distingui possunt duae manus pertinentes ad saec. XV uel XVI, quas signamus siglis m2 et m3, et quarta manus eiusdem fere aetatis (m4), quae scriptura currente in textu mutauit 18, 9 hereditate in hereditatis et in margine uariis formis addidit signum N (p. 6, 21. 9, 7. 11, 11. 27. 12, 10. 21. 15, 4. 14. 18, 9. 19, 28. 22, 24. 23, 5. 24, 3) uel margini denuo ascripsit uocabula textus glossarii, ni fallor, in usum; ita repetiuit in margine 24, 3 demutata, 24, 9 resurrectionis demutationem, 32, 5 demutationis, 36, 11 demutatur. de titulis quibusdam in margine additis u. infra p. XIII.

Quod ad codicis orthographiam attinet, eam in uniuersum uel certe saepissime scribendi consuetudinem, qualis erat librarii temporibus i. e. saeculo XI, repraesentare dicendum est. quoniam uero Tractatus mysteriorum uno codice Aretino traditi sunt, huius codicis orthographia pro fundamento adhibeatur et retineatur necesse est, dummodo ne formae traditae obstent rationi scribendi hominis eruditi saeculi IV. etsi igitur librarius sibi ipse non semper constat, religiose conseruandum est, quidquid ab Hilarii ipsius more non prorsus abhorrere uidetur.

Quare non mutauimus e (= αι) in nominibus propriis peregrinis: amorreorum 36, 12, egypt- 19, 31. 23, 15 (ubi tamen Aegyptio scripsimus, quod praecedit Aegyptium). 25, 2. 27, 16. 17. 36, 18 (sed ęgypt- 23, 15. 26, 11. 28, 8. 11. 35, 11), hebreis 23, 2 (ębreis A). 37, 27 (hębreis A), iudeis 31, 3 (sed iudę- 5, 4. 7, 17. 11, 12). retinuimus etiam in nominibus propriis hebraicis aspirationem in A traditam: barrachihel 9, 26, hiericho 34, 10. 35, 15, hierusalem (hirłm) 9, 14, iafeth 13, 14, hiesum (sc. Iesum Naue) 33, 10, hiesu 34, 23 (abbreuiatum ihs̄ etc. 32, 25. 33, 6. 7. 34, 26. 35, 17. 22), israhel 32, 7 (ih̄l 23, 18. 30, 10. 31, 11. 32, 4. 12, ish̄l 32, 3), israhelita 37, 27 (cf. israhelitici 15, 19 cod. Casinensis 257 (= B) magna ex parte a Petro diacono anno 1137 scriptus continet f. 691—710 Scolia in Quaestionibus Ueteris Testamenti seu excerpta quaedam, quae ipse Petrus ex uariis operibus exegeticis collegit atque in unum coniunxit. inter quae Scolia habentur, ut primus monuit Andreas Wilmart[2], f. 706^{v} — 707^{r} complura excerpta ex nostris Tractatibus Hilarianis partim ad uerbum desumpta partim modo solutiore circumscripta. haec autem excerpta eo pluris aestimanda esse patet eo, quod nonnulla fragmenta nobis aliunde nota non sunt. in excerpendis Tractatibus mysteriorum Petrus diaconus secutus est ordinem ipsum operis Hilariani. eum autem excerpta ex ipso cod. A, procul dubio tunc integro, desumpsisse pro certo haberi posse existimamus. Scolia illa in Quaestionibus Ueteris Testamenti cum excerptis Hilarianis primum in lucem edita sunt in Florilegio Bibliothecae Casinensis V1 (1894) 175—191. rogante me P. Quodsi quaeritur, num haec ultima sex fragmenta, quae in ipsum textum recepimus, ex codice A ad uerbum descripta sint, id asserere de longioribus fragmentis, scilicet de primo, quod arte conectitur cum septimo primae classis (p. 15, 13—16), de quarto, quinto, sexto non dubitamus. solebat enim Petrus diaconus longiora excerpta ad uerbum uel fere ad uerbum ex A desumere. quod attinet ad secundum et tertium, etiam haec speciem fragmentorum ex sententiis longioribus ad uerbum uel fere ad uerbum exscriptorum prae se ferunt. quare haec quoque in textum admittere non haesitauimus.

b). In paruulo aliquo tractatu saec. XII, cui titulus Ratio generalis de initio aduentus domini secundum auctoritatem Hilarii episcopi, traditum est fragmentum Hilario ascriptum, quod adhibetur ab auctore ad probandam antiquam consuetudinem aduentus liturgici trium hebdomadarum. incipit ita: est autem et alia eiusdem negotii ratio haudquaquam uilipendenda, qua gloriosus ecclesiae auctor et doctor eximius Hilarius in libro utitur officiorum et desinit his uerbis: haec sunt, quae apud Gallos positus ex libro officiorum sancti Hilarii non inutiliter mihi (michi cod. M) corrasi. opusculum illud uiri docti plerique Bernoni Augiensi (1008—1048) attribuerunt. id autem excerptum esse ex actis synodi cuiusdam Aurelianensis uel potius ex chronico Floriacensi saec. XI rationibus haud spernendis nouissime demonstrauit Dom Blanchard[1]. tractatum edidit Bernardus Pez in Thesauro Anecdotorum IV P. 2 (Augustae Uindel. 1723) 51 (= CXLII 1085 M) usus duobus libris manu scriptis, scilicet codice aliquo S. Emmerami et alio Ecclesiae Cathedralis Frisingensis membraneo uolumine, cuius characteres aetatem Bernonis assequi uidebantur (Pez VII). priorem codicem recognouimus in cod. Monacensi 14477 (Em. Originem Hilarianam illius fragmenti negarunt nonnulli eo, quod initium aduentus liturgici ante festiuitatem natiuitatis uel epiphaniae domini instituti ad tantam antiquitatem referri non possit. ad quod argumentum respondent alii[1] iam in concilio primo Caesaraugustano anni 380 (381), quod duodecim fere annis post mortem Hilarii habitum est, commemorari aduentum liturgicum domini in Hispania festiue celebratum[2] et quidem aeque atque ab Hilario aduentum trium hebdomadarum: uiginti et uno die, quo a XVI kalendis Ianuarii usque in diem epiphaniae, quae est VIII idus Ianuarii etc. Bernonem autem Augiensem ipsum, siue est auctor Rationis generalis siue non est, uerba illa habuisse pro Hilarianis comperimus ex eius ad Aribonem archiepiscopum epistula Qualiter aduentus domini celebretur. in ea enim epistula scribit haec: et nos ueraciter dicimus, quia ritum, quo aduentum domini (hoc anno add. N) celebramus a sanctis patribus Gelasio, Gregorio, Hieronimo atque Hylario indubitanter accepimus (M f. 71^v, N f. 65^v, apud Pez p. 48).

Ea uero, quae fragmento illo continentur, singula optime concordare cum stilo atque elocutione, cogitandi ratione atque methodo exegetica Hilarii Pictauiensis multis monstrauit Andreas Wilmart l. c. Quod autem Hilarii Tractatus mysteriorum ab auctore Rationis generalis commemorantur sub titulo Liber officiorum, id magnam difficultatem gignere nequit. in similem enim errorem etiam Coustantius, egregius operum Hilarianorum editor, incidit, qui ignorans sensum illius uocis Hilarianae mysteriorum scripsit in Praefatione n. 23 de libro mysteriorum, cuius nihil nobis superesset nisi titulus ab Hieronymo indicatus, ex ipso illo titulo coniectare licere eum librum officiis ecclesiasticis immixtum fuisse. quam Coustantii opinionem alii quoque uiri docti non pauci suam fecerunt decepti insuper hoc, quod etiam Ambrosius scripsit librum De mysteriis, quo de ritibus sacris agitur, et quod Isidorus Hispalensis publicauit opus, cui titulus est Officiorum libri duo seu De ecclesiasticis officiis. unde mirum non uidetur, quod etiam ille auctor, qui fragmentum ad stabiliendum suum de aduentu liturgico argumentum ex Hilario exscripsit, Librum mysteriorum per errorem Librum officiorum appellauit.

3. Textum Tractatuum primus in lucem edidit I. F. Gamurrini simul cum aliquot hymnis Hilarii et cum opere, quod inscribitur Peregrinatio ad loca sancta, in eodem codice A nunc conseruatis. editio haec princeps uulgata est in collectione, cui titulus Biblioteca dell' Academia storico-giuridica IV, Romae 1887, p. 3—28. textus multis quidem locis ab editore optime et feliciter emendatus est, sed aliis non paucis locis aut omnino non correctus est aut minus bene; saepius etiam male interpunctus, ita ut sensus aut nullus sit aut falsus euadat; praeterea textus editus complures errores in legendo codice exortos continet, quorum seriem dedimus in Studien I 36 sq. grato tamen animo multas correcturas et coniecturas editoris fecimus nostras semper addentes eius nomen exceptis iis uiri docti correctionibus, quae cuiuis legenti sponte sese offerunt. indicem plus quadraginta coniecturarum ad textum Tractatuum corrigendum praebuit cardinalis I. P. Pitra (Analecta sacra V [1888] 144 sq.). codicem Aretinum quamquam Pitra non ipse inspexit, tamen quosdam locos corruptos sanauit, alios coniecturis memoratu dignis temptauit. non paruum adiumentum nobis suppeditabant notae, quas Hubertus Lindemann codice ipso Aretino usus in libro Des hl. Hilarius von Poitiers Liber mysteriorum (1905) p. 98—119 publici iuris fecit.

4. Unicum testimonium de Tractatibus mysteriorum ex antiquitate nobis traditum est ab Hieronymo (de uiris inl. 100), Hilarium scilicet scripsisse librum hymnorum et mysteriorum alium. Hieronymus igitur uidetur exemplar ante oculos habuisse, quod continebat aeque atque cod. A simul et librum mysteriorum et librum hymnorum. quoniam autem titulos operum, quae enumerat, saepius non satis diligenter indicat, ex eius uerbis titulus uerus et planus certo erui nequit. inscriptionem operis simul cum primo folio in cod. A periisse iam supra diximus. uerum subscriptio ansam nobis dat ad titulum accuratius definiendum. legitur enim in ea ita: finit tractatus mysteriorum S. Hilarii episcopi etc. librarium per errorem scripsisse finit pro finiunt statim uidebimus. uox autem tractatus erat iam saeculo IV terminus ualde usitatus ad significandos commentarios uel homilias sacras scripturas interpretantes. alia exempla sunt u. g. Hilarii nostri Tractatus super psalmos, Tractatus in Iob (Hieron. de uiris inl. 100) et Tractatus Gregorii Eliberitani, qui uulgo dicuntur Origenis. afferri possunt et aliae rationes, quae operis inscriptionem Tractatus mysteriorum fuisse suadeant. opus diuisum est in libros duos; post tractatum enim in Moysen absolutum legitur in cod. A: explicit liber primus. incipit secundus (p. 30 nota 4). minime autem uerisimile est auctorem opus suum, quod diuisit in duos libros, ipsum nuncupasse Librum mysteriorum. praeterea Hilarius ipse adhibet terminum tractare ter ad significandam naturam materiei operis: sed suis quibusque temporibus uniuersa tractabo ab Adam 4, 4, et hoc quidem quamuis utile fuerit ad cognoscendam spiritualium gestorum significantiam tractasse 32,26 sq., cf. 13, 18. argumentum denique operis plane concordat cum notione, quam termino tractatus adiungimus. de sensu autem uocis mysteriorum uiri docti, priusquam ipse textus Tractatuum repertus est, alii aliud statuerunt. plerique putabant Tractatus fuisse opus liturgicum destinatum ad usum ecclesiarum gallicarum. ex opere autem ipso elucet uocem mysterii habere sensum 'typi', 'exempli', 'imaginis', qui sensus saepius apud scriptores ecclesiasticos inuenitur (cf. Studien III 38).

Quod attinet ad titulos, quos singulis interpretationibus patriarcharum et prophetarum in textu praemisimus, eorum alii in cod. A scripti sunt in margine atramento rubro, uelut 4, 8 de adam, 7, 24 de cain et abel, 10, 20 de lamech, 32, 25 de hiesu naue; alii eodem colore inter ipsum textum exarati sunt uelut 12, 14 de noe, 22, 12 de moyse, 30, 5 de osee; alios denique, qui in ipso codice cum foliis perierunt, qui tamen ex contextu fragmentorum seruatorum et ex subscriptione codicis A restitui possunt, nos substituimus uncinis eos includentes, uelut 15, 23 de abraham, 17, 10 de ysahac. posuimus autem omnes titulos in ipso textu ideo, quod ex titulis inter textum codicis A scriptis concludere licet titulos cunctos originem ducere non ab aliquo scriba, sed ab ipso auctore Tractatuum. libri primi caput undecimum, quo Hilarius post gesta Lamech explanata de Seth patriarcha prosequitur, non inscriptum est ullo titulo forte propterea, quia haec interpretatio nimis breuis est et in Genesi quoque enarratio de Seth eodem capite continuo insequitur narrationem de Lamech.

Ut conspectum utriusque libri Tractatuum eorumque argumentorum magis perspicuum redderemus, diuisimus duos libros in singula capita.

Tractatus mysteriorum ab Hilario Pictauiensi conscriptos esse praeter Adolphum Ebert[1] uix quisquam negauit, originem autem Hilarianam Hubertus Lindemann luculentissime comprobauit[2]. arbitramur autem Hilarium opus composuisse in Gallia ex exsilio reuersum (360) et quidem postquam Tractatus super psalmos expleuit. ex ampla enim notitia operum Origenis, quae elucet ex Tractatibus mysteriorum aeque atque ex Tractatibus super psalmos, pro certo habemus Tractatus mysteriorum non esse scriptos ante exsilium, in quo solo Hilarius de libris Origenis pleniorem cognitionem acquisiuit. eum autem suum opus non in ipso exsilio scripsisse ostenditur sermone tranquillo ac pacato, qui liber est ab illa commotione animi, qua Hilarius in libris in exsilio scriptis de hoc ipso exsilio et de litibus circa fidem exortis loquitur. Tractatus mysteriorum denique post commentarios in psalmos compositos esse ex aliquo huius operis loco (in ps. 138, 4) concludi posse suspicamur[3]. postquam enim auctor uerba epistulae S. Pauli ad Romanos 5, 3 sq. commemorauit atque de suo addidit: et haec quidem in sanctorum quorumcumque uita atque operibus fuisse cognoscimus, ut multis passionibus tribulationibusque iactati probabiles deo facti sint, illustrat hoc suum dictum exemplis Abrahae, Iacobi, Moysis atque de his et similibus exemplis se alio loco tractaturum esse promittit dicens: longum est passiones ceterorum patriarcharum, prophetarum, apostolorum—memorare —, sed haec oportunius et plenius suis locis tractari oportet.

quae uerba manifeste ostendere putamus Hilarium ante Tractatus super psalmos compositos de typis uel mysteriis Ueteris Testamenti peculiares tractatus non conscripsisse.

Qui autem fuerint libri Origenis, quibus praecipue Hilarius in componendis Tractatibus usus est, indicauimus in apparatu, in quo locos parallelos, qui maiorem similitudinem exhibent, notauimus; cf. etiam infra indicem locorum. forte aliquis pendere Hilarium ab Origene etiam aliis locis inueniet, u. g. si contulerit p. 17, 12 Rebecca etc. cum homil. X in Gen., p. 20, 15 ager etc. cum homil. XI 3 in Num., p. 22, 30—23, 13 cum homil. III 4 in Ex., p. 25, 17 equisse etc. cum homil. VII 1 in Ex., p. 27, 1—9 cum homil. III 4 in librum Iesu Naue etc. quorum locorum numerus sine dubio augeri posset, si Origenis homiliae in libros Ueteris Testamenti integrae et si imprimis eiusdem auctoris mysticarum homiliarum libri duo, in quibus etiam de Genesi tractabat (Rufin. apol. II 20), nobis traditi essent. testes complures, qui praeter Origenem de nominibus Abram et Sara mutatis (ad p. 16, 6) similiter, etsi non eadem ratione atque Hilarius disserunt, inuenies indicatos in Studien III p. 40.

5. Ualde dolendum est, quod opus Hilarianum in cod. A non integrum, sed temporum iniuria mutilatum ad nos peruenit. quot autem folia interciderint et quid continuerint, et auctor et ipse cod. A indicia quaedam suppeditant. ac primum quidem dicuntur Tractatus ab ipso auctore libellus: 3, 20 hoc libello uisum est ostendere; quibus ex uerbis apparet librum non fuisse magnum. quodsi deinde fidem habere possumus subscriptioni codicis A (finit tractat; mysteriorum s̄ hylarii ep̄i ab adā usq; ad noe. deinde abraę. ysaac. iacob. moysi. et oseę proph̄ę. et helie, cf. infra p. 38), ex ea idem colligere licebit. enumerantur enim in subscriptione typi, quos in partibus opusculi seruatis omnes tractatos inuenimus, scilicet Adam (et Eua, Cayn et Abel, Lamech, Seth), Noe (et filii eius ex parte), Abraham (ex parte), Ysahac (ex parte), (Esau et) Iacob (ex parte), Moyses, Osee (ex parte), Helias (sed cf. p. XVIII). aegre autem ferimus, quod in subscriptione nulla quaestionis de Hiesu Naue mentio fit, praesertim cum Tractatus attente legenti fortasse etiam mirum uideatur, quod Hilarius de Hiesu Naue et Raab demum uerba faciat, postquam ad prophetarum typos tractandos aggressus

Maiores operis partes in A periisse etiam ex ipsius codicis forma cognoscimus. atque imprimis desideratur initium totius operis, quod cum primo folio quaternionis primi periit. uox tamen Multiplex, qua incipiebat praefatio, fortuito nobis conseruata est in breui illa notula, quam de codice A continet catalogus bibliothecae Casinensis anni 1532, nunc cod. Uaticanus 3961 (u. supra p. IX). quae autem fuerit sententia auctoris, facile conicitur cum ex uerbis praefationis adhuc seruatis et ex nonnullis locis ipsorum Tractatuum, quibus Hilarius suam rationem typos Ueteris Testamenti interpretandi defendit, tum ex initio praefationis commentariis in psalmos praemissae, in quo pariter de typis Ueteris Testamenti eorumque diuersa interpretatione disputat. sunt autem uerba haec: diuersas esse plurimorum in psalmorum libro opiniones ex libris ipsis, quos scriptos reliquerunt, compertum habemus (p. 3, 1 sq.). quibus dictis non dubitamus Hilarium initium Tractatuum mysteriorum fecisse hisce uel similibus uerbis: Multiplex est scripturarum interpretatio uel Multiplex est de sensu scripturarum opinionum diuersitas.

Primi quaternionis praeter folium primum perierunt etiam duo ultima folia, quae continebant reliqua explicationis typorum Noe et filiorum eius et uerisimiliter initium quoque explanationis gestorum Abrahae patriarchae. haec autem explanatio in cod. A tota periit; conseruata sunt sola illa fragmenta a Petro diacono et a monacho aliquo germanico saec. XI uel XII tradita, quibus tractatur de duabus Abrahae uxoribus aduersariis Sara et Agar, de sacrificio Abrahae, de nominum Abrahae et Sarae mutatione. iustificationem Abrahae se tractaturum esse indicauerat Hilarius in praefatione p. 3, 17. in reliquis suis operibus Hilarius commemorat ex uita Abrahae haec gesta: Abraham iustificatum[1], angelum dei missum ad Agar, tres uiros coram Abraha assistentes, Agar ancillam de Abrahae domo cum filio suo expulsam, angelum dei ad Saram uerba facientem, poenam in Sodomam et Gomorrham immissam[2], nomina Abrahae et Sarae mutata[3], promissiones dei Abrahae datas[4]. hos igitur omnes uel fere omnes typos etiam in libro mysteriorum tractatos fuisse pro certo haberi posse putamus; exempli Abrahae explicationem sequebatur consideratio typi Isaac, quam auctor breuiter iam significauerat in praefatione (ecclesiam — discernit — ortu Ysahac p. 3, 15 sqq.) et quam similiter indicat subscriptio (cf. p. 38). praeter unum autem fragmentum apud Petrum diaconum conseruatum, quod commemorat sponsalia facta inter Isaac atque Rebeccam et assumptionem gentilium in ecclesiam praefigurantia tota interpretatio, qua agebatur de Isaac patriarcha, intercidit. sed quoniam Hilarius nec in reliquis libris plura de Isaac tractat, eum exemplum Isaac patriarchae paucis absoluisse in promptu est.

Sequebatur deinde consideratio typi Iacob patriarchae (cf. praef. p. 3, 17 et subscriptionem p. 38), cuius apud Laban seruitutem praefigurasse redemptionem ecclesiae Hilarius iam in praefatione indicauerat et cuius cum angelo dei luctam capite 13 libri alterius commemorat (p. 36, 29). quam luctam etiam in libris De trinitate[1] et in Tractatibus super psalmos[2] explicatam inuenimus. cum in iisdem commentariis praeterea commemorentur nomen Iacob in Israhel demutatum et id quidem saepius[3], filii duo Iacob et Esau dissidentes, Rachel uxor ecclesiam praefigurans, haec uel similia etiam in Tractatibus mysteriorum Hilarium interpretatum esse non immerito suspicamur. pars autem ulterior enarrationis de lucta inter Iacob et Esau exorta adhuc seruata est in primis foliis illius quaternionis, qui nunc in cod. A est alter.

His igitur positis pro comperto haberi potest in illo secundo totius libri manu scripti quaternione deperdito — nisi quis potius duos quaterniones periisse putat — tractatum fuisse de gestis reliquis Abrahae et breuiter de exemplis Isaac atque Iacob prophetarum. totum autem uolumen non magnum fuisse colligitur etiam ex excerptorum Petri diaconi ea parte, cuius uestigia in ipso cod. A perdita sunt. si enim Petrus aequali semper modo Tractatus mysteriorum excerpsit, partes nunc perditas, quarum notitiam soli Petro diacono debemus, prolixas non fuisse excerptoris fragmenta neque longa neque multa documento sunt. dolendum sane est, quod Petrus priorem tantum librum excerpsit.

Discissus ac lacunosus secundus quoque liber nobis traditus est. ac primum quidem perierunt complura, quae sequebantur ultima uerba quaternionis, qui nunc est secundus (p. 37, 21). multa, fortasse duos quaterniones seu paginas triginta duas intercidisse putauit I. F. Gamurrini. H. Lindemann uero, quem sequitur A. Wilmart, unum tantum quaternionem deesse censuit. arbitratur autem ultima uerba pertinuisse ad interpretationem typi Heliae prophetae, quam aliorum prophetarum (uelut Dauidis, Ionae) interpretationes praecessissent. non quidem negandum est ultimis uerbis Tractatuum nobis traditis sermonem esse de Helia propheta eaque, si fides habenda esset subscriptioni codicis A (cf. p. 38, 3 not.), ad tractatum de Helia pertinuisse. hoc autem posito ualde dubitari posset, num ille tractatus suo loco traditus esset. sed cum recte monuerit u. c. Aug. Engelbrecht (cf. p. 35, 23) capitulis 11—15 manifesto totius operis perorationem contineri, ex abrupto autem initio totius libri secundi in cod. A seruato conici licere hoc loco in quodam archetypo codicis A complurium aliorum prophetarum interpretationes excidisse, potius putandum est ipsum tractatum de Helia propheta, qui ultimis perorationis uerbis breuiter resumi uidetur, suum locum in illa parte nunc deperdita tenuisse. cui sententiae obstare nequit subscriptio codicis A, fortasse ab ipso librario huius codicis composita; ea enim neque prioris libri typi tractati recensentur omnes et ex exemplis libri secundi manifesto omittitur Hiesus Naue. quod autem ex prophetis nominantur tantum Osee et Helias, facile explicatur eo, quod librarius haec nomina ex initio et fine materiae sibi traditae exscripsit.

Exodium uero Tractatuum paucis resumens exemplum Heliae, quale in A traditur, huius operis naturae optime respondere arbitramur, cum in eo disseratur de restitutione uniuersorum extremis diebus peragenda. denotatur enim exodii illius uerbis praedicatio illa prophetae, qua eum in fine mundi restituturum uniuersa, id est reliquum, quod deprehenderit ex Israel, ad cognitionem dei reuocaturum Hilarius ostendit etiam in commentario in Matthaeum[1]. quoniam uero f. 13^v est ultimum folium quaternionis tertii, ea perorationis pars, quae excidit (p. 37, 21), expleuit minimum unum folium noui quaternionis; plura folia excidisse ut statuamus, nulla ratio nos cogit. Hilarium autem in Tractatibus non neglexisse typum Heliae prophetae etiam ex eo concludendum est, quod in aliis commentariis de s. scripturis confectis saepius uerba de illo propheta facit. commemorat enim coruum cibos Heliae solitum inferre[1], prophetam in corpore raptum in caelestem habitationem[2], eundem in transfiguratione Christi in monte Thabor constitutum[3], eum denique in fine mundi uenturum atque ab antichristo perimendum[4]. hos igitur uel similes typos etiam in Tractatibus mysteriorum ab Hilario enarratos esse ualde est uerisimile.

DE COLLECTANEIS ANTIARIANIS PARISINIS (FRAGMENTA HISTORICA).

1. De titulo et dispositione. — 2. De codicibus totius collectionis. — 3. De textibus parallelis. — 4. De editionibus. — 5. De fontibus collectionis eiusque redactore. — 6. De huius editionis natura.

1. Anno 1598 Nicolaus Faber (Le Fèvre), uir de studiis humanioribus promouendis optime meritus, Lutetiae Parisiorum edidit collectionem complurium documentorum saeculi IV, quae ad impugnandos Arianos congesta et ex parte textibus narratiuis inter se coniuncta sunt, collectionem quidem, si folia numerantur, non adeo magnam, sed si argumenta considerantur, grauissimam[1]. hanc editionem prelo parauerat et ad finem fere perduxerat Petrus Pithoeus secundum codicem saeculi XV, qui dicitur Pithoeanus (= T, cf. infra p. XXXVII), cum morte praematura abreptus est. in illo autem libro manu scripto Pithoeus inuenerat collectionem in duas partes diuisam, unam partem titulo carentem, alteram inscriptione ornatam, quae Hilario Pictauiensi libellum hisce uerbis attribuit: Incipit liber secundus Hilarii Pictauensis prouinciae Aquitaniae, in quo sunt omnia, quae ostendunt uel quomodo, quibusnam causis, quibus instantibus sub imperatore Constantio factum est Ariminense concilium contra formellam Nicheni tractatus, qua uniuersae haereses comprehensae erant. ultimum documentum alterius partis concludebatur hac subscriptione: Explicit Sancti Hilarii liber ex opere historico. Faber, qui Pithoei editionis curam suscepit, totam collectionem in codice Pithoeano male in duas partes distinctam esse parte posteriore priori per errorem anteposita ratus ordinem utriusque seriei mutauit, ita ut inscriptio supra memorata in totam quasi collectionem caderet et litterae synodi Parisiensis, a qua in codice prioris partis initium sumebatur, sequerentur tamquam rescriptum epistulam Orientalium synodi Seleuciensis, quae finem faciebat parti alteri. paginas autem editionis suae Faber a secunda parte noua serie numerorum signauit. praemisit uero operi hunc titulum: Hilarii Pictauensis prouinciae Aquitaniae episcopi ex opere historico Fragmenta numquam antea edita. in fine adiecit documentum aliquod, quod etiam in posterioribus editionibus semper recusum est, scilicet: Damnatio blasphemiae Arii et expositio integrae et catholicae fidei, quam catholici in tractatu Ariminensi firmauerunt et manu sua subscripserunt. de quo documento Faber ita dicit: quod sequitur, est ex alio cod. Deruen. post exemplar fidei Nicenae. sed quia hoc documentum nullo modo ad collectionem nostram pertinet, in nostra editione id plane negleximus.

Ordinem fragmentorum denuo inuertit Petrus Coustantius e congregatione Maurinorum in editione anni 1693. cum enim eo ordine, quo in cod. T et in huius apographo cod. C (u. p. XXXVII) collectio exstaret, sine fastidio et sine quodam a uero aberrandi discrimine legi uix posse putaret, hanc dispositionem Coustantius censuit optimam fore, quae omnia sic temperaret, ut et temporum seruaretur ordo nec rerum ab Hilario ordinatarum ratio immutaretur. eam ob rem se obseruasse, quoties in toto opere desideraretur aliquid, quod auctor se subnexuisse significaret, aut sequeretur aliquid, quod cum praecedentibus non cohaereret, atque proinde opus in tot fragmenta se partitum esse, quot in locis nactus esset dissutum aut aliqua sui parte mutilatum, et fragmenta singula, numero quindecim, secundum ordinem temporum collocasse. editioni autem praefixit titulum hunc: Fragmenta ex libro Sancti Hilarii Pictauensis prouinciae Aquitaniae, in quo sunt omnia etc. (cf. p. XX). ut ordo monumentorum, quem Faber secutus est, et ordo a Coustantio propositus melius cognoscantur, ambo hic inter se conferantur. tituli singulorum fragmentorum, qui apud Fabrum et Coustantium uix discrepant, sunt fere iidem atque in cod. C.

Cum autem editoris sit fragmenta eo ordine, quo in libris manu scriptis tradita sunt, in lucem proferre idque eo magis, quod de origine nostrae collectionis tantum coniecturae plus minus probabiles factae sunt, reliquimus plane immutatam et diuisionem collectionis in duas partes seu series et ipsum ordinem singulorum utriusque partis fragmentorum. sed ut clarior esset conspectus totius collectionis et commodior eius usus atque indicatio singulorum monumentorum, fragmentis titulum breuem in margine praefiximus. quod ad titulum totius collectionis attinet, iam in Studien I 5 proposuimus, quoniam codicum nostrorum memoria titulus proditus non est, ut inscriptionem aptam, dilucidam, commodam hanc: Collectanea Antiariana Parisina, quae uulgo dicuntur Fragmenta historica S. Hilarii Pictauiensis (compendio abbreuiatam Coll. Antiar. Par.); indicari igitur potest certus quidam locus breuiter u. g. ita: Coll. Antiar. Par. Ser. A IV 1, 5. rationes autem, quae nos mouerunt ad eligendam hanc nouam eamque a nobis fictam inscriptionem, sunt hae: tituli usque adhuc usitati nec traditione librorum manu scriptorum ulla ratione confirmantur et multorum de origine collectionis opinionibus aduersantur. nouus autem titulus eiusmodi esse debet, ut et naturam collectionis breuiter exprimat, quae constat documentis uariis uariorum auctorum ad Arianae haeresis impugnandae historiam pertinentibus insertis textibus narratiuis unius uel plurium redactorum, et ut omnibus, qui opus illud indicare uel indicatum recognoscere uelint, commodus sit. uox uero Collectanea magis consentanea uidetur quam uox Collectio eo, quod congestio illa fragmentorum nobis minus ordinate tradita est. uox denique Parisina significat locum, ubi unicus ille et antiquissimus liber manu scriptus, ex quo pendent ceteri, seruatur.

Sequitur iam ordo noster Collectaneorum, qui codicis Parisini auctoritate nititur, comparatus cum ordine Coustantii. titulos autem singulorum fragmentorum finximus nos rationem habentes cum titulorum in textu illius codicis traditorum (cf. ipsum textum editum) tum uniuscuiusque fragmentorum ipsorum argumenti.

Indicem sequuntur 'Libri septem Cassiani de incarnatione domini contra Nestorium' cum praefatione (f. 1^v—61^v). traditur dein liber sc̄i Athanasii ad Epictetum de fide catholica, hoc est epistula Athanasii Alexandrini ad Epictetum episcopum Corinthium, et sequitur: incipit sc̄i hilari de essentia patris et filii contra hereticos, h. e. fragmentum ex libris Hilarii de trinitate (X 887 sq. M). f. 76^r—113^v repraesentantur Collectanea sine inscriptione, subscriptio autem habetur haec: explicit sc̄i hilarii ex opere historico. folium 114^r non est inscriptum, in f. 144^v—115^v inueniuntur excerpta ex historia tripartita Epiphanii.

In margine textus Collectaneorum complures notae adiectae sunt, quae partim breuiter summa rerum capita indicant, partim alicuius scribae animaduersiones criticas continent; recepimus has notas in apparatum criticum, cum uerisimile sit scribam codicis A eas iam repperisse in archetypo suo; nam tales notulae marginales desunt in textu epistulae Athanasii et fragmenti Hilariani supra memorati. hoc posito melius etiam explicatur, quod aliquae animaduersiones scribae cuiusdam codicis antiquioris procul dubio primitus in margine positae in nostro codice inueniuntur in ipso textu (cf. p. 169, 8. 10. 13. 170, 8.). non tamen cum Fabro et Coustantio sententias quasdam in epistula synodi Sardicensis Orientalium (sc. sed propter compendium haec hactenus de Marcello 53, 10 sq.; nec actus commissi umquam ab innocentibus fuerant 53, 25 sq.; erant quidem illi grauia et acerba ab accusatoribus obiecta 53, 29 sq.) pro interpolatis, sed pro genuinis habemus ideoque in ipso textu immutatas reliquimus. neque cum aliis glossema esse putamus uerba sicut in Ariminensi synodo continetur, quae habentur in textu narratiuo Hilarii p. 155, 26. ex suo scriba codicis A nihil correxit uel addidit ideoque liber quam maximam fidem meretur; menda autem, quae inueniuntur, eius scribae uel praedecessorum erroribus in legendo uel scribendo exortis tribuenda sunt.

Anno 1906 Parisiis codicem A cum codice C, ex quo editio Fabri prodiit, accurate contulimus et cum certitudine concludere potuimus, id quod M. Schiktanz iam suspicatus erat, codicem A esse archetypum, ex quo cod. T, cuius apographon est cod. C, descriptus est. argumenta autem, quibus id nobis euincitur, uberius iam exposuimus in Studien I 11—13.

Quod ad remorthographicam codicis A attinet, plane singularis est eius codicis condicio. itaque fusius de hac re agentes sub uno conspectu afferimus et quae sit codicis orthographia et quatenus nos eam in editione repraesentare par fuerit. ac primum quidem formas traditas eas omnes in textum ipsum admisimus, quae a saeculo auctorum non abhorrent, praeferentes ita memoriam codicis unici eiusque optimi sequi quam ad scribendi rationem uniformem quidem, sed rerum ueritati non consonam sectandam adniti. et ita agere nobis eo magis licere arbitramur, quod documenta uaria, quae cod. A tradit, a diuersis auctoribus uel redactoribus, a diuersis temporibus et locis ortum ducunt eaque omnia eandem rationem orthographicam secuta esse minime putandum est. quare si in codice A cum eadem uocabula tum eadem nomina propria uarie scribuntur, hanc uarietatem imitari non dubitamus, dummodo formae traditae aetati ipsorum auctorum ne obsint neue nimis oculos lectoris offendant — ut fit u. g. in mere phonetica mutatione consonantium b et u (silbanus, uitinia, euseuius) uel in falsa et extraordinaria addita aut omissa aspiratione uocabulorum imprimis latinorum (heusebianam, helianum, ithaliam, aciui). ex apparatu uero critico semouimus orthographica minoris uel etiam nullius momenti, ne quisquiliis nimis oneraretur, omnia. ad usum autem eorum, qui edoceri uolunt de scribendi ratione codicis A, hic addere placet uarias formas huius codicis orthographicas generis phonetici in ordinem congestas. lectiones, quas in ipsum textum recepimus, signamus asterisco, lectiones a mendis correctas duobus asteriscis.

2. Cod. Remensis S. Remigii deperditus (= S). editione principe Collectaneorum iam uulgata Iacobus Sirmondus S. I. inuenit in bibliotheca monasterii Remensis ad S. Remigium librum manu scriptum, qui continebat eadem Collectanea. in notula enim quadam ad epistulam synodi Parisiensis anni 361 addita ipse haec scribit[1] in editione Conciliorum Galliae: Hanc (sc. synodicam) primus in lucem protulit Nic. Faber cum reliquis fragmentis Hilarii ex chartaceo, ut ipse praefatus est, libro non antiquo. nos etsi eorundem fragmentorum peruetus aliud exemplar nacti sumus in Bibliotheca Sancti Remigii Remensis, perpauca tamen in hac praesertim epistula suppeditauit, quae a Fabri editione discreparent. Coustantius nos certiores reddit in illo libro Remensi eundem fuisse ordinem et easdem inscriptiones atque in cod. T; se quidem illud exemplar frustra quaesiuisse, sed Stephanum Baluzium uarias Sirmondi lectiones suppeditando iacturam hanc utcumque resarsisse. moneo tamen Sirmondi lectiones aliquoties caute in textu recensendo adhibendas esse et talis cautio praesertim tunc adhibenda est, cum uariantes illae in se speciem praebent lectionis a Sirmondo uel editoribus potius fictae quam e codice fideliter receptae. sic p. 45, 9 lectio impietatem (S) est coniectura procul dubio falsa pro pietatem (A); p. 99, 5 dicitur S legisse, sed potius Sirmondus coniectasse uidetur praeuius numeratur, ubi cum A scribendum est praemiis muneratur.

3. Cod. Pithoeanus (= T), chartaceus, saec. XV, deperditus. Nicolaus Faber in praefatione editionis suae p. 25 describit codicem ut exemplar — in chartà manu gallica nec latinam linguam satis percipiente, confusis dictionibus scriptum, quod praeterea etiam librorum Cassiani de incarnatione Christi epitomem eadem manu scriptam contineret et addit Petrum Pithoeum Lutetiae anno 1590 illum librum repperisse et editionem ipsam fragmentorum sustinuisse, quia spem concepisset se antiquum exemplar, unde recens illud exscriptum fuisset, aliunde recuperare posse. bibliothecam autem, ex qua Pithoeus librum eruïsset, Faber se indicaturum fuisse profitetur, nisi uiris, qui delitescentis huius in bibliothecis suis thesauri dignitatem non agnouissent uel agnitam non sine publica iactura tam diu continuissent, ruborem suffundere ueritus esset. codicem T ad monasterium S. Uictoris Parisiense pertinuisse haud improbatum ducimus; cf. Studien I 16. eundem librum accepit Coustantius, cum suam editionem pararet, a uiro iuris docto Francisco Desmarets (Desmarès), qui eius possessionem hereditate nactus erat. postea codex periit (cf. Studien I 15 sq.), sed eius iactura non multum dolenda est; nam eum ex cod. A descriptum esse iam supra exposuimus. quamobrem eius lectiones uarias raro, scilicet quando correctiones uel coniecturas haud spernendas praebet, attulimus.

4. Cod. Parisinus latinus 1700 (olim Colbert. 2568. Reg. 3982.3.3) (= C), chartaceus, saec. XVI. de hoc codice scribit Stephanus Baluzius, praepositus bibliothecae Colbertinae (1667—1683): Hoc est ipsummet exemplar, ex quo prodiit editio Nicolai Fabri anno MDXCVIII, ab eodem Fabro repositum in bibliotheca Thuana, ex qua translatum est in Colbertinam anno Xi. MDCLXXX die XXIII Martii. Steph. Baluzius — Emendationes in margine appositae sunt Nicolai Fabri eius manu scriptae. anno 1683 cod. C cum aliis Colbertinae bibliothecae libris bibliothecae regiae adiunctus est. praeter Collectanea, quae p. 1—131 occupant et quae exscripta sunt ex T (cf. supra n. 3), liber continet undecim alia opera, inter quae Marcellini et Faustini libellus precum, Rescripta Honorii et Theodosii, Concilium septimum oecumenicum memoratu magis digna sunt. Coustantius, qui in componenda editione etiam cod. C inspexit, hunc et codicem Colbertinum et Apographon, quo usus est Nicolaus Faber, appellauit (c. 1402). nos lectiones codicis C negleximus exceptis correctionibus aut coniecturis alicuius momenti siue ab ipso scriba siue a Fabro adiectis. coniecturas autem et emendationes, quas scriba ipse postea addidit, notamus siglo Cm1, eas uero, quas Faber apposuit, siglo Cm2.

3. Inter documenta Collectaneorum sunt nonnulla, quae etiam extra totam collectionem seorsim tradita sunt et quidem maxima ex parte in collectionibus canonum; sunt autem haec: Series A IV 2. V 1. VII. IX 1. 3; Series B II 1—4. 6. 8. 10. VII 1—6. 8—11. quoniam ad commodiorem usum lectorum in nostra editione etiam illos textus parallelos, qui quam maxime inseruiunt ad textum Collectaneorum accuratius emendandum et melius intellegendum, repraesentauimus, hoc loco illorum textuum testes manu scriptos breuiter enumeremus atque recenseamus necesse est. integros autem textus tantum eos dedimus, qui multum discrepant a textu Collectaneorum. textus graecos parallelos uulgauimus secundum Athanasium[1], qui ipse documentis tempore erat proximus, additis ceterorum editorum graecorum lectionibus uariis.

[1] Athanasii libri manu scripti, quos adhibuimus, sunt duo hi: 1. Cod. Parisinus graecus 474 (Reg. 2284) (= p), fol. 457, saec. XI (Opera S. Athanasii). ut patet ex nota aliqua in f. 458 adiecta, pertinebat liber olim ad S. Sophiam Constantinopolitanam, cum anno fere 1204 per monachum quendam in monasterium oppidi Kyrici (= Kyrissos) delatus est. unde postea in coenobium S. Dionysii montis Athonis peruenit et hinc tandem in bibliothecam Colbertinam Parisinam. — 2. Cod. Basileensis Bibl. Uniuersitatis A. III. 4 graecus (= s), chartaceus, VI + 607, saec. XIV (Opera Athanasii, Cyrilli, Ioh. Damasceni, Theodoreti). uidetur prius pertinuisse ad monasterium Athanasii in monte Athonis situm. postea uenit in manus cardinalis Iohannis de Raguse († 1443), qui reliquit eum bibliothecae fratrum praedicatorum Basileensi. — de his et aliis codicibus operum Athanasii cf. Fr. Wallis, Notes and Studies of some Mss of the writings of St. Athanasius (The Journal of Theol. Studies III [1902] 97 sqq. 245 sqq.); K. Lake, Some further Notes on the Mss of the writings of St. Athanasius (ib. V [1904] 108—110); Studien III 109 sq.

Nunc igitur dicendum est de singulis illis documentis separatim traditis et de codicibus, qui ea continent.

1. Symbolum synodi Sardicensis Orientalium una cum albo prouinciarum, ex quibus episcopi conuenerant = Ser. A IV 2.

a) Latine tradita sunt symbolum et album apud Hilarium de syn. 34. in enumeratione autem prouinciarum exhibet Liber de synodis quinque prouincias, quae in recensione codicis A desiderantur, scilicet Aegyptum, Mysiam, Pannonias duas, Phrygiam alteram, cum contra Isauria desit. in Libro de synodis similiter desunt symboli articuli de ecclesia, de remissione peccatorum, de carnis resurrectione. quae differentiae aeque atque discrimen stili facile explicantur ex diuersitate archetyporum graecorum. nam aliud sine dubio exemplar adhibuit Hilarius symbolum in Collectaneis traditum e graeco uertens ante aestatem anni 356 in Gallia, aliud librum de synodis scribens exsul in Oriente.

b) Uersionem latinam alteram symboli et albi prouinciarum continet collectio canonum, quae dicitur Theodosii diaconi, codicis Ueronensis LX (58) saec. VII (= W) in f. 79ʳ. uberiora de hoc codice u. infra p. XL. etiam in W desunt articuli de ecclesia, de remissione peccatorum et carnis resurrectione. ceteroquin habet W maximam affinitatem cum textu syriaco (u. n. d), ita ut concludere liceat utrumque textum profluxisse ex eodem textu graeco.

c) Cum symbolum Sardicense Orientalium paucis anathematibus additis repraesentet formulam fidei Antiochenam anni 341, quae dicitur quarta, textu graeco huius symboli Antiocheni IV uti possumus apud Athanasium de syn. 25, Socratem hist. eccl. II 18, Nicephorum Callistum hist. eccl. IX 10. formula autem synodi Antiochenae anni 344, quae dicitur ἔκθεσις μακρόστιχος, resumpsit symbolum Sardicense Orientalium.

d) Uersio denique syriaca symboli et albi prouinciarum inuenitur in cod. Parisino syriaco 62 saec. IX.[1] hunc textum syriacum symboli, qui continet in fine quaedam additamenta, in lucem edidit Schulthess p. 167 sq. dedimus nos uersionem graecam ad uerbum factam secundum textum syriacum.

2. Epistula synodi Ariminensis ad imperatorem Constantium = Ser. A V 1.

Graece tradunt has litteras Athanasius de syn. 10 (= cod. p f. 343^{r}—345^{r}, cod. s f. 426^{v}—427^{v}), Socrates hist. eccl. II 37, Sozomenus hist. eccl. IV 18, Theodoretus hist. eccl. II 19, Nicephorus Callistus hist. eccl. IX 40. epistulam primitus sermone latino scriptam fuisse testatur Socrates l. c.; quare epistula in Collectaneis tradita ut originaria habenda est.

3. Epistula Liberii ad Constantium = Series A VII.

Epistula haec inuenitur etiam in appendice operum Luciferi Calaritani, quae tradita sunt codice Uaticano Reg. 133 (= U) in Gallia scripto saec. IX et codice Parisino S. Genouefae 1351 (= G) saec. XV, qui fugit Guilelmum Hartel, cum pararet editionem operum Luciferi. epistula traditur in cod. U f. 164^{v}—166^{v}, quorum tabulas photographicas suppeditauit Franciscus Ehrle S. I., et in cod. G f. 141 sq., quae contulit Iulius Lebreton.

4. Definitio Ariminensis episcoporum homousianorum = Ser. A IX 1.

Uersionem latinam definitionis a nostra diuersam tradit cod. Bodleianus e Museo 101 (olim Floriacensis), (= J) saec. VI in ultimo folio i. e. f. 62^{v}. qui liber continet collectionem conciliorum et canonum, quam dicit Fr. Maassen 'collectionem (Christoph.) Iustelli', in cuius possessione codex olim fuit. definitionem contulit H. M. Bannister.

5. Damnatio haereticorum = Ser. A IX 3.

Graece tradita est damnatio ab Athanasio de syn. 11 et quidem in cod. p f. 345^{v}, in cod. s f. 428^{r}.

6. Epistula synodi Sardicensis Occidentalium ad uniuersas ecclesias = Ser. B II 1.

a) Recensionem latinam praebet cod. Ueronensis LX (58) saec. VII (= W)[1] f. 81^{r}—86^{r}. collectionem autem canonum in W nobis seruatam appellant Theodosii diaconi, quod inuenitur f. 126^{v} subscriptio a manu diaconi cuiusdam Theodosii addita: Hec de mendosis exemplaribus transtuli tandem et quedam quidem qua (quamuis Ball.) non ut uolui[t] tamen potui recorrexi[t] quedam autem tacito pretermisi rēī (= rem in uel reuerendi Reiff.) dn̄i arbitrio derelinquens qui legis ore (leg. ora) pro me peccatore sit (si Reifl.) dm abeas redemptorē ⟨hum⟩ilimus omnium dia⟨conorum⟩ theodosius indignu⟨s dia⟩conus fecit. quibus ex uerbis colligitur quidem Theodosium diaconum singula monumenta, quae nunc collectionem documentorum et canonum codice W traditorum efficiunt, suo quodque ex exemplari transcripta in unum redegisse corpus, minime autem probant eum documenta in codicem W recepta ipsum e sermone graeco in latinum uertisse. neque id affirmare potuit Theodosius. nam inseruit collectioni suae non solum documenta, quorum exemplaria originaria sermone latino scripta erant, ut acta quaedam conciliorum in Africa habitorum, sed etiam alia monumenta, quae desumpsit e uersionibus latinis uetustioribus. ita transtulit uel potius transcripsit acta complura conciliorum graecorum e uersione Isidoriana, canones apostolorum et canones Antiochenos ex interpretatione Dionysii Exigui; alia denique documenta, inter quae acta Sardicensia erant, deprompsisse uidetur ex interpretatione quadam latina, quae collectionem documentorum graecam Alexandriae circa annum 385 ortam — forte Synodicon Ps.-Athanasii[1] — repraesentabat. ceterum Theodosium linguae graecae omnino ignarum fuisse putant fratres Ballerini[2], qui addunt eum latinae quoque linguae imperitissimum ex ipsius adnotatione cognosci. quod peculiariter ad litteras Sardicenses attinet, harum uersionis latinae Theodosium diaconum auctorem non esse etiam eo apparet, quod illae litterae continent complura menda scripturae, quae librarium exscribentem, non translatorem nouam interpretationem comparantem certo indicant; legitur u. g. in W 104, 14 religioso sola pro religio sola, 105, 14 apa pro asclepa, 106, 9 theo pro theogene, 107, 10 mendacium pro mendaciis, 110, 13 potauerant pro portauerunt, 113, 16 uersatio pro uersutia, 114, 15 facta pro ficta, 114, 16 macaris pro macario, 116, 13 iussisse pro ussisse, 117, 12 necesse pro nec esset, 118, 18 credidisse pro credi ista uel credi in se, 119, 13 presbyterarum pro presbyteratum, 121, 17 inocultas pro inultas, 124, 13 hac et qualitate pro ac de aequalitate.

His igitur consideratis optimum duximus orthographiam ipsius codicis quidem sequi, quantum fieri posset, sed tamen ea grauiora menda orthographica corrigere, quae abhorrent a primario translatore erudito utpote sermonem et graecum et latinum callente.

44—49 (in cod. p f. 241^v—246^v et in cod. s f. 376^r—379^v) et a Theodoreto hist. eccl. II 8. in editione nostra repraesentauimus textum Athanasii cum lectionibus uariantibus Theodoreti. textus Athanasii et Theodoreti aliquoties inter se differunt; uterque autem haud paucis locis discrepat a textu latino codicis A. unde in restituendo textu codicis A caute procedendum est, ne nimis corrigatur secundum textum graecum uel textum latinum codicis W, qui e graeco translatus est secundum Theodoretum. rem nonnullis exemplis illustrare liceat: 104, 8 legit A: (ut) pietas sola, quae est in Christo hominibus, custodiretur; Cm2 et Coustantius mutarunt hominibus, custodiretur in ab omnibus custodiretur, cum textus graecus habeat (ἵνα) ἡ εἰς Χριστὸν εὐσέβεια μόνη παρὰ πάντων φυλάττηται (cf. W ut — in Christo religio sola aput omnes seruetur). — 114, 9 legitur in A: testificati sunt, qui praesentes fuerunt ex Alexandria de eodem loco, eo quod nihil tale esset factum; Coustantius posuit et Mareote et aliis locis pro de eodem loco, cum Theodoretus legat: ἐμαρτύρησαν μὲν αὐτοῖς οἱ παραγενόμενοι ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀλεξανδρείας καὶ Μαρεώτου καὶ τῶν λοιπῶν τόπων, ὅτι μηδὲν τούτων πέπρακται (qui de Alexandriae et Mareotae locis ipsis uenerunt W). — cf. porro 107, 5 licet etiam A cum tamen ex his W (ὅμως καὶ) et 124, 9 apostoli cuius est praeceptum cum apostolica etenim est praeceptio W (ἀποστολικὸν γάρ ἐστι παράγγελμα Theod).

Quodsi quaeritur, quo sermone ipsi patres synodi Sardicensis suam epistulam scripserint, non facile est responsum. fratres Ballerini in editione Leonis Magni III p. XXXI optime demonstrarunt synodum canones duplici originali exemplo redegisse, graeco nimirum pro patribus graecis et pro latinis episcopis latino; cui opinioni assentitur etiam Carolus Hefele[1]. idem dicendum esse opinamur de eiusdem concilii synodica ad uniuersas ecclesias missa. nusquam enim in textu latino inueniuntur signa uel uestigia translationis, immo is textus plane speciem praebet exemplaris originalis.

7. Epistula synodi Sardicensis Occidentalium ad Iulium papam = Ser. B II 2.

Latine tradita est epistula haec nonnullis etiam collectionibus canonum, quas aptissime in classes uarias disposuit Fr. Maassen[2]. codices, quibus in textu recensendo usi sumus, sunt hi:

a) Collectio Sanblasiana (= Π):

[1] Conciliengeschichte I^2 556 sq. [2] Geschichte der Quellen und der Literatur des canonischen Rechts I (1870) 64.

a) Cod. Sanblasianus S. Pauli Carinthiae XXV a/7 (= B^1), fol. 154, saec. VII, scriptus in Gallia characteribus uncialibus. continet collectionem conciliorum quandam ortam in Italia et affinem ei, quae dicitur collectio codicis Uaticani. pertinebat liber olim ad monasterium Augiae maioris, ut elucet ex subscriptione in f. 9 adiecta: lib' mon̄ augie maioris. traditur epistula f. 141^v—143^r. contuli ipse.

β) Cod. Parisinus 3836 (Colb. 784) (= B^2), fol. 104, saec. VIII. epistulam, quae habetur f. 91^v—93^r, contuli ipse.

γ) Cod. Coloniensis CCXIII App. V (Darmst. 2336) (= B^3), fol. 143, s. VIII (s. VII Wattenbach), scriptus litteris hibernicis. epistulam traditam f. 141^r—143^r contuli ipse.

δ) Cod. Lucanus 490 (ol. 89) (= B^4) saec. VIII, scriptus magna ex parte litteris uncialibus. inuenitur epistula f. 267^r sqq. contulit canonicus Petrus Guidi, praesul bibliothecae Lucanae.

In codice Parisino 4279 (Colb. 2489) (= B^5) saec. IX epistula ipsa desideratur, subscriptiones seruatae sunt (cf. infra p. XLVI).

b) Collectio codicis Diessen:

Cod. Monacensis lat. 5508 (Diessen 8) (= M), fol. 213, saec. IX. epistula, quae habetur f. 125^v—126^v, descripta est ex exemplari aliquo collectionis Sanblasianae eiusque textus maxime affinis est ei, qui continetur in cod. B^1. contuli ipse.

c) Collectio Hadriana Aucta:

Cod. Monacensis 14008 (Ratisb. S. Emmer. A 8) (= H^1), fol. 259, saec. IX/X. epistula traditur f. 167^v—168^v. contuli ipse.

Ceteri libri, qui continent hanc collectionem, sc. cod. Uallicellianus A. 5 saec. IX/X, cod. Uercellensis LXXVI saec. X, cod. Uaticanus 1353 saec. XII, solam inscriptionem epistulae referunt.

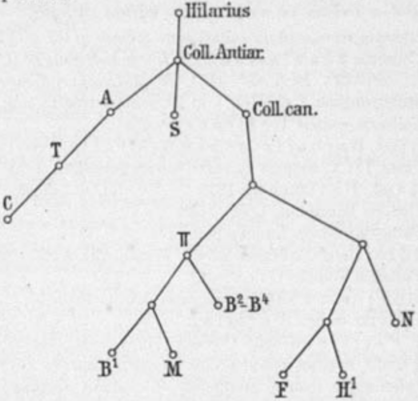
d) Collectio Dionysiana Aucta:

Cod. Uaticanus 5845 (= F), fol. 327, saec. X, scriptus litteris beneuentanis exornatis ornamentis francicis. quaedam manus saec. XI uariis locis correcturas fecit. contuli secundum tabulas photographicas.

e) Collectio codicis S. Mauri:

Cod. Parisinus 1451 (= N), fol. 107, saec. VIII. epistula traditur f. 38^r—39^r. contuli ipse.

Ex his collectionibus Sanblasiana orta est saec. VI in Italia, collectio cod. S. Mauri in Gallia eodem saeculo, collectio Dionysiana Aucta in Italia saec. VI, collectio cod. Diessen saec. VII in Italia (?), collectio Hadriana Aucta in Italia saec. IX. textus autem epistulae Sardicensis, qui in his uariis collectionibus traditus est, redit ad unum idemque exemplar Collectaneorum, quod quidem paucis differebat ab archetypo codicis A et iam ipsum continebat menda illarum collectionum. ex ipsis codicibus enumeratis M ualde similis est B^1, H^1 paucis discrepat a Π et M, sed compluribus conuenit cum N et praesertim cum F. consideratis iis, quae uberius de affinitate librorum in Studien III 105 disseruimus, hoc stemma delineari posse putamus:



De codice, quo usus est Baronius ad a. 347 n. XXII ad recensendam epistulam Sardicensem, cf. Studien I 25 sq.

8. Nomina haereticorum = Ser. B II 3.

Tradita sunt nomina iisdem codicibus collectionum canonum, quae continent epistulam Sardicensem ad Iulium missam. etiam Sozomenus hist. eccl. III 12 enumerat quidem nomina, sed uidetur ea desumpsisse ex epistula synodica generali (cf. Athan. apol. c. Arian. 48, infra p. 119, 22 sqq.).

9. Subscriptiones synodi Sardicensis Occidentalium = Ser. B II 4.

Hae subscriptiones continentur iis collectionibus conciliorum, quae canonum Sardicensium eam recensionem, quam dicit Fr. Maassen quartam[1], tradunt. sunt autem collectiones hae: Sanblasiana, cod. Uaticani, cod. Iustelli, cod. Parisini, cod. Diessen. nomina inserta sunt etiam in exemplaribus non paucis collectionis, quae uocatur Hadriana. supra iam uidimus in nonnullis illarum collectionum inesse etiam epistulam synodi ad Iulium Romae episcopum directam; sed in iis nomina episcoporum non sequuntur, ut in Collectaneis, ipsam hanc epistulam ad Iulium missam, sed canones, qui finiuntur uerbis: omnis synodus dixit: uniuersa, quae constituta sunt, catholica ecclesia in uniuerso orbe diffusa custodiet.

Ad textum recensendum collati sunt codices hi (cf. p. XLIII):

a) Collectio Sanblasiana (= Π) in codicibus B^1 (f. 64^r—65^r), B^2 (f. 42^r—43^r), B^3 (f. 69^r—69^v), B^5 (qui subscriptiones solas sine epistula continet f. 68^r—69^v). in B^4 nomina tradita non sunt.

b) Collectio codicis Uaticani (= Φ):

α) Cod. Barberinianus 679 (XIV 52, ol. 2888) (= V^1), fol. 298, saec. IX/X, scriptus ex parte litteris uncialibus. f. 75^v—76^v.

β) Cod. Uaticanus 1342 (= V^2), fol. 213, saec. IX/X, scriptus litteris uncialibus. f. 62^v—63^r.

c) Collectio codicis Iustelli:

Cod. Bodleianus e Museo 101 (= J) saec. VII. f. 27^v—28^v.

d) Collectio codicis Diessen:

Cod. Monacensis 5508 (= M). saec. IX. f. 15^r—15^v.

e) Collectio codicis Parisini:

Cod. Parisinus 3858 C (Colb. 1108) (= P), fol. 87, saec. XIII. P tradit nomina episcoporum ex parte tantum f. 59^v, sed omittit plerumque nomen prouinciae et mutauit saepius formas nominum sedium episcopalium.

f) Coll. Dionysio-Hadriana (= Δ):

α) Cod. Parisinus 8921 (suppl. lat. 331) (= D^1), fol. 140, saec. VIII. f. 34^v—35^v.

β) Cod. Parisinus 11710 (Sangerm. 367) (= D^2) saec. IX. f. 53^v—54^r.

γ) Cod. Parisinus 3840 (Faurianus) (= D^3), fol. 152, saec. IX. f. 45^v—46^r.

δ) Cod. Parisinus 11711 (Sangerm. 365) (= D^4) saec. IX. f. 34^r—34^v.

ε) Cod. Monacensis 6355 (Fris. 155) (= D^5), fol. 270, saec. IX/X. f. 77^r—78^v.

ζ) Cod. Monacensis 6242 (Fris. 42) (= D^6), fol. 291 + 20, saec. X. f. 90^r—91^r.

η) Cod. Monacensis 5258 (Chiems. 8) (= D^7), fol. 166, saec. X. f. 79^v—80^v.

ϑ) Cod. Lucanus 125 (= D^8) saec. X. f. 52^r—52^v[1].

g) Coll. Hadriana Aucta:

α) Cod. Monacensis 14008 (= H^1) saec. IX/X. f. 58^r—58^v.

β) Cod. Uallicellianus A 5 (= H^2), fol. 339, saec. IX/X. f. 81^r—81^v.

γ) Cod. Uercellensis LXXVI (= H^3) saec. X. f. 63^v—64^r.

δ) Cod. Uaticanus 1353 (= H^4), chartaceus, saec. XV. f. 62^v—63^r. cod. H^4 descriptus est ex codice uetusto archiui cathedralis Bergamensis a. 1461 (cf. Studien I 30).

h) Collectio Dionysiana Aucta:

Cod. Ambrosianus S. 33 sup. (= R), fol. 322, saec. X—XII. initium tabellae subscriptionum traditur f. 52 (saec. X).

Ex his codicibus inspexi ipse B^1—B^4 M P D^1—D^7 H^1, contuli secundum tabulas photographicas V^1 V^2 H^2 H^4. J contulit C. Walker, D^8 Petrus Guidi, praefectus bibliothecae Lucanae, H^3 Romualdus Pasté, Uercellensis bibliothecae praesul alter, R Georgius Fell S. I.

Nomina episcoporum illis collectionibus canonum tradita sunt deprompta ex aliquo exemplari Collectaneorum et quidem ea forma et eo ordine, quem exhibent familiae *Π*MJ*Φ* (= α); nam hae tradunt nomina eodem fere ordine atque cod. A et in nominum formis minus discrepant a cod. A quam reliquae familiae *Δ*HR (= β) et P. P non enumerat nisi 16 nomina et addit: et cęl̄i ņūo q̄draginta quinque, ita ut in archetypo huius quoque codicis P 61 nomina, inter quae procul dubio etiam Deas a Pofoebus commemorabatur, exstitisse uideantur (cf. p. XLVIII). R autem tria tantum nomina praebet additis uerbis, quae pariter in ceteris libris canonum inueniuntur: et subscripserunt oēs ep̄i diuersarum prouinciarum uel ciuitatum. causa autem mutationis ordinis in β factae est haec: in archetypo Collectaneorum, ad quem redeunt et A et omnes codices canonum, nomina tradita erant scriptura continua, quem ordinem secutus est etiam librarius codicis A et scriba exemplaris collectionis canonum, ex quo ortae sunt familiae ΠMJΦ. scriba autem exemplaris, ad quod familiae librorum canonum alterius generis i. e. Δ et H redeunt — quod exemplar ex sua parte ortum ducit ab aliquo exemplari typi α — mutauit seriem nominum eo, quod nomina scriptura continua tradita in duobus ordinibus posuit, ita ut primum episcopum sequeretur episcopus n. 32 memoratus, sicut melius patebit ex tabella infra adiuncta. in qua tabella ordinem codicis A signauimus numeris ordinariis, ordinem familiarum ΠMJΦ numeris uncis rotundis inclusis, denique ordinem familiarum ΔH numeris circumsaeptis uncis angulatis.

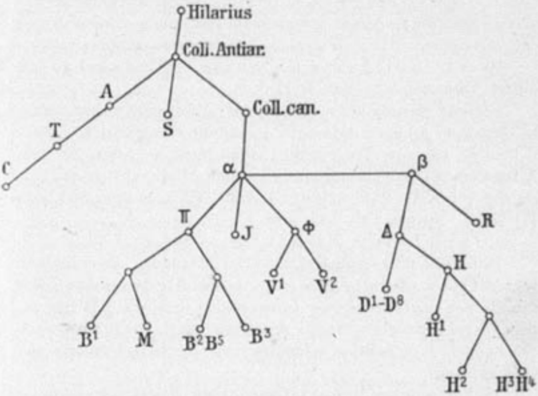
Duae aliae discrepantiae inter cod. A et libros canonum exortae consistunt in eo, quod primus redactor collectionum canonum, qui album subscriptionum ex aliquo exemplari Collectaneorum sumpsit, episcopos Uincentium Capuae, Ianuarium Beneuenti, Calepodium Campaniae, qui in cod. A sub n. 14. 15. 45 habentur, statim post Osium Cordobensem et Annianum Castalonensem enumerauit eisque titulum legatorum sanctae ecclesiae Romanae dedit et quod nomen episcopi, qui in cod. A dicitur cocras ab acaia de asapofoebus (n. 43), in duo diuersa nomina episcoporum diuisum est, scilicet in Chocras ab Achaia et Deas a Pofoebus. mutatio, quae in singulis libris canonum facta est ex transpositis nominibus Uincentii, Ianuarii, Calepodii, illustratur optime his numeris:

1 (1) [1]. . . . . 2 (2) [32]
14 (3) [2]. . . .15 (4) [3] . . . 45 (5) [33].

In locum autem numeri 45 (cod. A), qui in libris canonum initio albi subscriptionum positus erat, successit ille Deas a Pofoebus per errorem introductus i. e. n. (46) [24].

De singulorum codicum natura atque affinitate plura habes in Studien II 13 sq. id unum hic monemus nos nunc cod. V^1 (= V^2 in Studien II) ascribere saeculo VIII et ideo anteponere illum codicem codici V^2 (= V^1 in Studien II), qui pertinet ad saec. IX/X. ex iis, quae in Studien II 12 sqq. de affinitate codicum diximus, efficitur hoc stemma:



Multa episcoporum eorumque sedium nomina seruata sunt etiam in subscriptionibus, quae in cod. Ueronensi LX (58) (= W, cf. p. XL) duabus epistulis a synodo Sardicensi et ab Athanasio ad ecclesias Mareotae missis (n. XX f. 103^r et n. XXI f. 104^r—105^r) adiunctae sunt. nomina sunt ex parte quidem ualde corrupta, attamen non raro nobis suppeditant subsidia ad sananda menda ceterorum codicum; qua de causa nomina adiunximus tamquam testimonia textui editionis et quidem notauimus epistulam priorem siglo W I, epistulam alteram siglo W II. ceteroquin remittimus lectorem ad Studien II 50 sqq., ubi nomina denuo edidimus atque de iis plura disputauimus. repraesentarunt illas litteras cum subscriptionibus Sc. Maffei (Istoria teologica delle dottrine e delle opinioni corse ne' cinque primi secoli, Trento [1742] 259 sqq.) et fratres Ballerini (Leonis Magni Opera III 608 sqq.). nomina subscriptionum meo rogatu denuo contulit Antonius Spagnolo.

Graece tradita sunt nomina episcoporum, qui in synodo Sardicensi aut ipsi adfuerunt aut postea decretis subscriptione adhaeserunt, apud Athanasium apol. c. Arianos 50, qui nomina eorum, qui ipsi Sardicam uenerant, initio sui albi dat; quae nomina nos in Studien II 58 sq. secundum codd. p (f. 246^v) et s (f. 379^v) repraesentauimus. cum nomina graeca ad textum latinum recensendum saepius aliquantum conferant, ea tamquam testimonia eiusdem aetatis cum nominibus codicis W textui Collectaneorum subiunximus.

10 et 11. Epistulae Ualentis et Ursacii ad Iulium et Athanasium = Ser. B II 6. 8.

Utraque epistula latine scripta erat. Athanasius autem litteras in sermonem graecum transtulit secundum exemplaria sibi missa a Paulino episcopo Treuirorum (Athan. apol. c. Arian. 58, hist. Arianorum 26). inueniuntur epistulae apud Athan. apol. c. Arian. 58 (in cod. p f. 253^r—254^r, in cod. s f. 383^r—383^v), Sozom. hist. eccl. III 23 sq., Niceph. Call. hist. eccl. IX 27.

12. Symbolum Nicaenum = Ser. B II 10.

De uariis formis symboli cf. Studien I 29 et 95 sq., ubi ostendimus textum Collectaneorum maxime concordare cum textu Luciferi Calaritani, De non parcendis in deum delinquentibus 18 (CSEL XIV 247 sq.). cum textus uetustiores traditi sint nimis multi, eos in nostra editione addere supersedimus, addentes tamen lectiones uariantes maioris momenti.

13. Epistulae Liberii Quamuis sub, Nolo te, Inter haec[1], Pro deifico, Quia scio, Non doceo et textus narratiui = Ser. B VII 1—11.

Continentur hae litterae ex parte genuinae, ex parte dubiae duabus collectionibus canonum, quae dicuntur Dionysiana Aucta et Hadriana Aucta (cf. supra p. XLIV). usi sumus ad textum restituendum his libris: F (f. 187^{r}—189^{v}), H^{1} (f. 165^{r}—167^{v}), H^{2} (f. 229^{r}—231^{v}), H^{3} (f. 194^{r}—196^{r}), H^{4} (f. 179^{r}—181^{r}). H^{1} contuli ipse, codicum FH^{2}H^{4} tabulae photographicae mihi praesto erant, H^{3} contulit Aloisius Sincero, praefectus bibliothecae Uercellensis.

[1] Aliqui uiri docti putarunt illas duas litteras ad Caecilianum et Osium missas, quarum tantum partes sub n. 4 et 6 traditae sunt, in ipso opere Hilariano integras exstitisse. sed recte monuit iam I. Chapman (Rev. Bénéd. XXVII [1910] 32) Hilarium ipsum ex illis epistulis non excerpsisse nisi ea, quae conferrent ad demonstrandum id, quod sibi proposuerat, scilicet Liberium ante suum exsilium omnibus conatibus aduersariorum firmiter restitisse.

De horum codicum indole, affinitate, orthographia uberius exposuimus in Studien III 106 sqq. nonnulla ibidem de affinitate dicta hic repetere liceat, ut melius textus restitutus intellegatur. ex libris manu scriptis collectionis Hadrianae Auctae accuratius quam ceteri tradit textum cod. H^{1}, cui proxime accedit H^{2}. H^{3} autem et H^{4}, qui eidem familiae ascribendi sunt, haud paucis differunt a codicibus H^{1} et H^{2}; quae differentiae ad manum correctricem alicuius librarii referendae sunt. secundum exemplar aliquod huius familiae, ad quam pertinent H^{3} et H^{4}, etiam cod. H^{2} a manu prima et altera saec. X correctus est. mutationes arbitrariae maiores inueniuntur in H^{3} H^{4} et in cod. H^{2} correcto hae: pro uerbis amoto Athanasio a communione omnium nostrum, cuius nec epistolia a me suscipienda (p. 168, 16—169, 1) scribitur amoto Athanasio, super quo statuta omnium uestrum a me cum sede apostolica suscipienda; pro uerbis uniuersa in irritum deduxit scribens praeuaricatoribus (p. 168, 1) legitur uniuersa in irritum deduxit; nam tribulationum tedio fatigatus scribit praeuaricatoribus; uerbis qui in sanctum Athanasium orthodoxum episcopum iniuste tulere sententiam (p. 168, 2) additur ut exilio absolueretur et hereticae prauitati accomodaret assensum. porro legunt H^{2}m2 H^{3} H^{4} 167, 15 delator existere pro delator, 169, 12 contradicens huic pro contradixi, 169, 12 hanc itaque pro itaque etc.

Cod. F quidem ualde similis est codd. H^{1} et H^{2}, sed correcturas nonnullas continet factas a manu saeculi XI, quae concordant cum lectionibus codicis S a Coustantio nobis traditis. quod factum explicari non posse uidetur, nisi quod Fm2 correcturas illas adiecit secundum exemplar Collectaneorum ualde affine codici S. correcturae autem sunt hae: 170, 16 cognoscat itaque prudentia uestra Athanasium, qui Alexandrinae ecclesiae episcopus fuit, (a me esse damnatum add. S^{1} Fm2) priusquam ad comitatum sancti imperatoris (secundum eras. F, om. S^{1}) litteras Orientalium (add. destinarem S^{1} Fm2) episcoporum; 171, 13 imperatoris] add. fideli S^{1} Fm2; 171, 13 eunuco] add. direxi S^{1} Fm2.

Textum librorum canonum textui codicis S magis similem esse quam textui codicis A ostendunt exempla haec: 165, 18 cruentos gladios S^1FH fructus gladio A; 166, 16 cecilianum A aelianum S^1 helianum FH; 170, 9 iunior A iuniores, quibus credidit S^1FH. libros manu scriptos, quibus usus est Baronius ad textum epistularum Liberii recensendum (ad a. 353 n. XIX, ad a. 355 n. XXXV, ad a. 357 n. XLI) esse cod. Uaticanum 1353, cod. Uercellensem LXXVI, cod. Uallicellianum A. 5 demonstrauimus iam in Studien I 30—32. addimus stemma codicum, quo eorum affinitas melius cognoscatur.

4. Nunc de editionibus Collectaneorum pauca adiciamus. editio princeps a Petro Pithoeo usque ad finem fere perducta in lucem prolata est anno 1598 cura Nicolai Fabri secundum cod. T et huius apographon C. titulus fuit: B. Hilarii Pictauensis prouinciae Aquitaniae episcopi ex Opere Historico Fragmenta nunquam antea edita. Ex bibliotheca Pet. Pithoei I. C. Eiusdem Pet. Pithoei uita. Parisiis MDXCVIII. haec autem editio eodem anno[1] bis uulgata est: Apud Ambrosium Drovart, sub scuto Solari uia Iacobaea. Cum priuilegio Regis et: Apud Robertum Niuelle, uia Iacobaea, ad insigne Columnarum. Cum priuilegio Regis. quoniam autem Summa priuilegii Regis Ambrosio Drovart data est, editio apud eum uulgata uidetur esse originaria. ceterum textum ex eadem officina typographica prodiisse et tantum apud diuersos bibliopolas prostitisse putamus; in duabus enim illis editionibus textus plane est idem et paginae iisdem uocabulis uel uocabulorum partibus incipiunt et desinunt.

inspeximus utramque editionem, priorem in bibliotheca uniuersitatis Bonnensis, alteram in bibliotheca Parisiensi et in bibliotheca uniuersitatis Monacensis[1]. textus editionis principis est multis locis corruptus, cum haud pauca menda codicibus tradita non correcta, alia ex mala lectione addita sint. textus editus a Fabro insertus est etiam editioni Hilarii operum, quam Iohannes Gillot altera uice Parisiis anno 1605 uulgauit (p. 398—460). denuo atque iterum idem textus prodiit in editionibus Gillotii, quae Coloniae Agrippinae anno 1617 (p. 126—144), Parisiis annis 1631 et 1652 (p. 429—490) in lucem prolatae sunt. textum primum uere purgatum atque emendatum edidit anno 1693 Petrus Coustant e congregatione S. Mauri in editione Operum S. Hilarii (col. 1279—1364), cui titulus: S. Hilarii Pictauorum episcopi Opera ad manu scriptos codices gallicanos, romanos, belgicos necnon ad ueteres editiones castigata; aliquot aucta opusculis, praeuiis in locos difficiles disputationibus, praefationibus, admonitionibus, notis, noua S. Confessoris uita etc. ad textum castigandum usus est Coustantius praeter cod. T et C cum lectionibus uariantibus codicis S a Sirmondo collectis tum ad complurium documentorum emendationem textibus, qui dicuntur paralleli, siue latinis siue graecis. textus a Coustantio emendatus transiit uel solus uel simul cum notis etiam in editiones posterioris aetatis. qua de causa hae editiones a nobis plane neglegi possunt. sunt autem hae: editio Ueronensis anno 1730 a Scipione Maffei parata (uol. II p. 617—710), editio Ueneta anno 1749 sq. apud Iacobum Capellati secundum editionem Ueronensem adornata (uol. II 483—544) et editio Wirceburgensis, quae cura Francisci Oberthür a. 1785 prodiit (tom. II 44—133). Patrologia Mignii deprompsit textum ex editione Ueronensi.

Editiones, quae documenta atque acta, quae extra nostram collectionem uel apud alios ueteres scriptores ecclesiasticos uel in uariis collectionibus canonum tradita sunt, continent, omnes fere commemorauimus in Studien I 33—36 et magna ex parte etiam in hac ipsa editione. sed quoniam pauci tantum editores textum aut coniecturis emendarunt aut secundum nouos libros manu scriptos castigarunt, in apparatu critico plurimos plane neglegimus. inter paucos autem editores, qui textum reuera aliquatenus emendarunt, praestant Baronius (Annales ecclesiastici, ed. Coloniae Agrippinae 1609) et Hardouinus (Conciliorum Collectio, Parisiis, 1715 sqq.). quare horum correcturas uel coniecturas saepius in apparatu critico attulimus.

5. De fontibus atque ortu Collectaneorum non una fuit sententia editorum atque auctorum. conspectum totius historiae controuersiae dat Max. Schiktanz, Die Hilarius-Fragmente 125—133; auctores recentiores u. Studien I 113. quid nosmet ipsi de hac quaestione sentiamus, exposuimus in Studien I 113 sqq. hic grauissima quaeque repetentes praemittimus testimonia, quae ueteres de opere historico Hilariano nobis reliquerunt.

Ac primum quidem Hieronymus (de uiris inlustr. 100) indicauit opus quoddam Hilarii: Liber aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium historiam Ariminensis et Seleuciensis synodi continens. etsi adnotatiunculis, quas Hieronymus de titulis et inscriptionibus librorum in suo catalogo congessit, plena fides non semper habenda est, tamen hoc in aperto esse uidetur Hieronymum nouisse librum Hilarianum conscriptum aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium, in quo agebatur etiam de historia synodorum Ariminensis et Seleuciensis. de fatis autem eiusdem, ut uidetur, libri Rufinus[1] haec copiose enarrat: Hilarius Pictauiensis episcopus confessor fidei catholicae fuit; hic cum ad emendationem eorum, qui Ariminensi perfidiae subscripserant, libellum instructionis plenissimae conscripsisset cumque libellus ipse — in manus inimicorum ipso ignorante uenisset, ita ab eis corruptus est illo sancto uiro nihil penitus sentiente, ut postea, cum ad concilium episcoporum secundum ea, quae se in libello ipsius nouerant corrupisse, haereticum eum inimici arguere coepissent et ipse libelli sui fidem pro sui defensione flagitaret, de domo sua prolatus libellus talis inuentus sit, quem ipse non agnosceret, faceret tamen eum excommunicatum de concilii conuentione discedere. addit Rufinus Hilario adhuc uiuo fraudem postea detectam esse. Hieronymus[2] quidem in Rufinum aduersarium uehementer increpauit, quod Hilarium a synodo aliqua excommunicatum criminatus esset, et ex eo quaesiuit, in qua urbe fuisset synodus, qui episcopi, qui eo anno consules fuissent, quis imperator hanc synodum iussisset congregari, ob quam causam congregata esset. ex doctoris tamen uerbis elucet eum non uoluisse negare exstitisse librum Hilarianum, sed potius affirmasse; nam dicitur ab eo iste liber 'liber illius', non autem 'aliquis liber illius': non ei sufficit Graecos et antiquos calumniari —, uenit ad Latinos, et primum ponit Hilarium confessorem, quod post Ariminensem synodum liber illius falsatus ab haereticis sit. Sulpicius Seuerus denique in Chronico (II 45) circa annum 403 scripto loquitur de tribus libellis publice datis, quibus audientiam regis poposcit Hilarius. Sulpicium autem, cum haec scriberet, significasse aliquod opus Hilarianum, ad quod pertinebant ex nostrorum Collectaneorum Serie A fragmentum I et ex Serie B fragmentum II et pariter Appendix ad Collectanea (cf. infra p. LXII) apparet ex aliquibus locis, quorum fons haec ipsa fragmenta erant[1].

His praemissis ipsam quaestionem de fontibus et ortu Collectaneorum aggrediamur[2].

1. Ac primum quidem constat Seriei B fragmenta I et II partes esse operis cuiusdam Hilariani, quod scriptum est a. 356 post synodum Biterrensem et quo Hilarius se ipsum atque negotium Athanasii publice defendebat[3]. in codicibus tota Series B tribuitur Hilario cum inscriptione tum subscriptione, de quibus infra sub n. 3 uberius disputabimus. Hilarianam originem demonstrat porro ipsum argumentum illorum fragmentorum. primo fragmento, quod ut prooemium alicuius operis facile agnoscitur, exhibentur cogitationes, quibus Hilarius affectus esse putandus est, antequam a. 356 exsilium in eum decretum est. communionem cum Saturnino episcopo Arelatensi, uno ex praecipuis aduersariis, respuit Hilarius: nomini dei ac domini Iesu Christi adhaereo iniquorum societatem — respuens (p. 100, 8 sq.); anno autem 360 dicit in Libro c. Constantium 2 hanc communionem se iam ante plures annos rupisse. damnationem Athanasii, quam eius aduersarii in synodo Mediolanensi anno 355 pronuntiauerant, commemorat Hilarius ut recens factam: (si modo) iudicii corruptelam excusatione alieni arbitrii defenderem (p. 100, 15); cf. et ‘Athanasium quo iudicio damnastis?‘ dicetis nempe ‘episcoporum‘ (p. 141, 12 sq.). de suo autem ipsius exsilio Hilarius ne uerbum quidem dicit, cum eius mentionem faciat in omnibus ceteris libris, quos exsul scripsit, uelut de trin. X 4, de syn. 2, c. Const. 2. contra satis clare indicat se ipsum nondum esse missum in exsilium: uersari in sermone hominum iam diu memini quosdam sacerdotum dei idcirco exulare, quod etc. (p. 101, 14 sq.). uerbis autem (opus temto) locorum, in quibus gesta res est nosque agimus, dispara- tione peregrinum (ib.5sq.) non significat — ut Marx opinatur — tantum oppida Galliae uelut Arelatum uel Biterras et Mediolanum, sed potius opponuntur Aegyptus et Oriens terris, in quibus ipse Hilarius agit, i. e. Galliis seu Occidenti. ea porro, quae in synodo Arelatensi a. 353 facta erant, dicit Hilarius proxime gesta (p. 102, 8) et ea, quae in concilio Mediolanensi a. 355 acciderant, dicit in Appendice ad Collectanea, quae primitus fragmentum II insequebatur (cf. infra p. LXII) recens gesta: uenio nunc ad id, quod recens gestum est (p. 186, 19). quodsi praeterea in memoriam reuocauerimus disceptationes synodi Mediolanensis ex parte in palatio imperatoris habitas esse — quod Athanasius in Historia Arianorum 31 narrat — et officiales iussu imperatoris multis in oppidis episcopos coegisse ad subscribendum decretis synodi Mediolanensis, optime intellegemus haec quoque uerba fragmenti I Seriei B: hocque, quo etiam in Romani imperii negotiis quies carpitur, rex angitur, palatium feruet, episcopi circumcursant, officiales magistri uolitant, aduersus apostolicos uiros officiorum omnium festinatione turbatur (p. 101, 9—12). comperimus deinde ex Libro c. Constantium 2 Hilarium Biterris frustra ab aduersariis suis Saturnino, Ursacio et Ualente publicam disputationem petiuisse illosque eum loquentem mox interrupisse: qui postea per factionem eorum pseudoapostolorum ad Biterrensem synodum compulsus cognitionem demonstrandae huius haereseos obtuli: sed hi timentes publicae conscientiae audire ingesta a me noluerunt (cf. de syn. 2: post Biterrensis synodi professionem, in qua patronos huius haereseos — denuntiaueram). quibus uerbis lumen affertur alicui loco fragmenti I Seriei B, ex quo uiri docti olim coniciebant opus Hilarianum conscriptum esse Constantinopoli a. 359 uel 360: p. 102, 1—7 propensiore cura rem omnem hoc uolumine placuit exponere. raptim enim tunc (cf. supra ad Biterrensem synodum compulsus) haec per nos ingerebantur (cf. supra ingesta a me), corruptio euangeliorum, deprauatio fidei et simulata Christi nominis blasphema confessio. et necesse fuit in eo sermone (cf. supra cognitionem obtuli) omnia esse praepropera, inconposita, confusa, quia, quanto nos inpensiore cura audientiam quaereremus, tanto illi pertinaciore studio audientiae contrairent (cf. supra audire noluerunt). haec igitur uerba non multo post synodum Biterrensem, in qua spes Hilarium tam infeliciter frustrata est, scripta sunt. quae uerba etiam hoc ostendunt Hilarium suo opere materias, quas in synodo Biterrensi in medium proferre statuerat, sed proponere prohibitus erat, in unum congestas edidisse. opus hoc polemicum ante a. 357 compositum esse sequitur ex iis quoque, quae Hilarius de Paulino episcopo Treuirensi exsule dicit; is enim appellatur frater et comminister meus (p. 102, 9), cum anno 360 in Libro c. Constantium 11 eundem episcopum, qui in exsilio a. 357 e uiuis decessit, nuncupet beatae passionis uirum.

Documenta, quae in altero fragmento continentur, pertinent quidem ad tempora anno 356 multo superiora, sed optime tamen illustrant consilium, quod Hilarius in conscribendo opere secutus est, dico defensionem Athanasii et ceterorum propugnatorum symboli Nicaeni. talia autem documenta se libro suo inserturum esse Hilarius ipse prooemio indicauerat, cum diceret: incipiam igitur ab his, quae proxime (sc. in synodis Arelatensi et Mediolanensi) gesta sunt (p. 102, 8) et cum adderet se in his non sequi rerum ordinem, sed rationem ex praesentibus petitam, qua melius consequeretur id, quod spectaret. textus quoque narratiuus documentis fragmenti II adnexus indicat opus Hilarianum scriptum esse tempore, quo damnatione in Athanasium a synodo Arelatensi pronuntiata animi catholicorum adhuc maxime commouebantur et perturbabantur. uehementer enim increpat Hilarius episcopos, qui in illa synodo suum assensum dederant consiliis Ualentis, Ursacii, Saturnini: respicite in caelum et astra, uos sacerdotes — Athanasium quo iudicio condemnastis? (p. 141, 8 sqq.). praeterea opponit Hilarius condemnationem, quae facta est contra Photinum in synodo Mediolanensi a. 347, condemnationi, qua Athanasius in eadem urbe a. 355 damnatus est, ut patet ex his uerbis: de Fotino — ad Orientales epistulae fiunt, non iniuria extorquendi, ut nunc agitur, adsensum, sed instruendae uniuersorum scientiae consuetudine (p. 147, 6—9).

Opus illud polemicum, cuius partes erant Seriei B fragmenta I et II, ab Hilario confectum est tempore, quod intercessit inter synodum Biterrensem et exsilium. hoc autem non statim post synodum in Hilarium decretum esse comperimus ex iis, quae ipse de calumniis synodi, quibus motus imperator eum exsilio affecit, in Libro ad Constantium dicit: exulo autem non crimine, sed factione et falsis nuntiis synodi ad te imperatorem pium, non ob aliquam criminum meorum conscientiam per impios homines delatus (infra p. 198, 2 sqq.). ex itinerario autem Iuliani Caesaris conici potest decretum exsilii ante mensem Iunium factum esse[1]. opus Hilarianum iam anno 357 (358) in Aquitania et Hispania notum fuisse testes sunt

2. Ad opus illud polemicum anni 356 pertinebat procul dubio etiam fragmentum IV Seriei A, quod gesta synodi Sardicensis Orientalium continet et intime cohaeret cum fragmento II Seriei B.

3. Hieronymi et Rufini testimonia confirmantur inscriptione, quae praemittitur in codicibus Seriei B (u. p. 98 n. 3) et eiusdem Seriei fragmento VIII, scilicet textu narratiuo, qui epistulae legatorum Seleuciensium adnexus est. ex sermone autem uiuaci, quo auctor alloquitur episcopos synodi Ariminensis (post synodum enim Seleuciensem Constantinopolim uenientes, quid est, quod statim dampnatis hereticis uos iungitis? etc. p. 175, 17—19) perspicuum est Hilarium libellum conscripsisse his ipsis diebus, quibus asseclae diuersarum partium inter se de pace religiosa disputabant, et quidem eo consilio, ut moueret legatos Ariminenses ad consensum, quem dederant, retractandum. huius textus narratiui auctorem esse ipsum Hilarium Pictauiensem minime in dubium uocabit, qui illud fragmentum in collectione inueniri, quae Hilario et inscriptione et subscriptione (infra p. 177 n. 20) tribuitur et quae certo fragmenta operis Hilariani continet, deinde plane concordare cum stilo et sermone Hilarii, denique eius argumentum optime consentire cum iis, quae de rebus in Constantinopoli urbe illis diebus gestis historia enarrat, considerauerit. Hilarius enim post synodum Seleuciensem finitam Constantinopolim profectus est, ut legatos huius synodi deterreret, ne assentirent formulae Acacianae, quae Nicaeae in Thracia accepta et Arimini comprobata erat[2]. nec dubium est, quin multum operae dederit, ut etiam legatos Ariminenses ab assensu dato reuocaret. sed operam frustra consumpsit Hilarius. non solum legati Ariminenses persistebant in suis decretis, sed etiam legati Seleucienses formulam illam Acacianam subscriptione acceperunt. quod cum factum sit ultimo die mensis decembris anni 359[3], Hilarium ante hunc diem libellum suum iam edidisse manifestum est.

Quodsi inquirimus, quaenam ex reliquis fragmentis Collectaneorum ad hunc libellum pertinuerint, imprimis illa fragmenta Seriei B ei tribuenda sunt, quae — ut dicitur inscriptione — ostendunt uel quomodo, quibusnam causis, quibus instantibus sub imperatore Constantio factum est Ariminense concilium i. e. fragmenta III. VII.

VIII, quae omnia constant et documentis et textibus narratiuis et ita partes operis alicuius polemici declarantur. cum fine et natura eiusdem operis concordant etiam Seriei A fragmenta V—IX, ex quibus fragmenta V et IX pariter complectuntur et documenta et textus narratiuos. quare etiam haec fragmenta quin partes operis Hilariani fuerint, non dubitamus. titulus, quo inscriptus erat hic libellus, traditus esse uidetur per Hieronymum, a quo dicitur Liber aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium. cum uero in inscriptione Seriei B, quae eam ut libellum de synodi Ariminensi tractantem inducit, hic libellus 'liber secondus' nuncupetur et cum eadem Series simul fragmenta aliqua contineat, quae certo pertinebant ad opus Hilarii polemicum anno 356 scriptum, ualde uerisimile est cum libellum anni 356 tum libellum anni 359 eundem titulum Aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium habuisse eosque postea ut librum primum et secundum distinctos fuisse. subscriptionem autem, quae in codicibus post ultimum fragmentum Seriei B inuenitur, librario alicui uel potius redactori ipsi Collectaneorum attribuendam esse putamus.

4. Serie B tradita sunt aliqua fragmenta, quae ad librum alterum operis Aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium pertinere nequeunt eo, quod annis 362, 363, 366 exeunte uel 367 ineunte scripta sunt i. e. fragmenta IV. V. VI. quoniam autem Hilarius non ante finem anni 367 e uiuis decessit (cf. Studien I 126), nihil obstat, quominus illa fragmenta ex libro tertio operis Aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium ipso anno 367 scripto et ab Hilario ipso aut breui post eius mortem edito exscripta esse arbitremur. nam eadem collectione continentur, qua cetera fragmenta ex illo opere desumpta, et a natura huius operis minime differunt, immo multum conferunt ad illustrandam historiam Arianorum. cum Seriei prioris fragmentum III cum alterius Seriei fragmentis V et VI intime cohaereat, id quoque ad librum tertium totius operis, quod Hieronymus Aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium nuncupauit, pertinuisse coniectamus.

5. Formam, quam nunc praebent Collectanea, casu ortam esse putamus, et quidem hac ratione. collector quidam anonymus, qui materias ad impugnandos Arianos uel ad eorum historiam componendam congessit, Libros tres aduersum Ualentem et Ursacium excerpsit. quae excerpta librarius quidam, in cuius manus uenerant, eo ordine, quo ea repperit, descripsit. ad illa excerpta primitus etiam Oratio synodi Sardicensis ad Constantium imperatorem cum textu narratiuo Hilarii, quae duae partes cohaerentes uulgo dicuntur

Liber ad Constantium primus, pertinebant (cf. infra p. LXII). existimamus autem inscriptionem, quae alteri Seriei in codicibus praemittitur, folium unum implesse et hoc folium fortuito locum obtinuisse ante folia, quae complectebantur priora excerpta ex libro primo totius operis polemici desumpta. quoniam complures collectiones canonum, quae saeculo quinto compositae sunt, locos uel mendosos uel lacunosos aliquos eosdem continent atque Collectanea, haec saeculo IV exeunte uel saltem saeculo V ineunte exorta esse dicendum est. horum Collectaneorum aliquo exemplari usus esse uidetur Sulpicius Seuerus, cum conscriberet Chronicon circa a. 403. Italiam autem fuisse patriam istius collectoris anonymi indicant cum collectiones illae canonum in Italia exortae tum uetustissimus testis libri, qui dicitur ad Constantium I, scilicet cod. Uaticanus Basilicanus S. Petri D. 182 ineunte saeculo VI in Italia conscriptus.

6. Restat, ut pauca disseramus de nostrae editionis ratione. ac primum quidem nobis utile uisum est immutatum retinere ordinem, quo Collectanea codice A tradita sunt. reliquimus igitur diuisionem in duas partes, quas, ut melior modus afferendi singulos locos praebeatur, nuncupauimus Seriem A et Seriem B. deinde singulis fragmentis, quae ex Hilariano opere desumpta sunt et quodam unitatis uinculo cohaerere uidentur, praemisimus numeros romanos, horum autem fragmentorum singulis partibus numeros arabicos. in margine addidimus eos numeros romanos, qui in Coustantii editione fragmentis adiecti sunt. eiusdem editionis retinuimus, quantum fieri potuit, partitionem capitum; ubi autem ab hac diuisione recessimus, adiunximus numeros editionis Coustantii uncinis rotundis inclusos. ad dilucidiorem ipsorum capitum conspectum addidimus praeterea in margine numeros paragraphorum, in quas diuisimus singula capita. quod ad singulas subdiuisiones utriusque Seriei Collectaneorum attinet, quae ipsis singulis documentis et textibus narratiuis efficiuntur, eae in codice A plerumque nouis inscriptionibus uel litteris maiusculis satis clare indicantur; aliquoties tamen per errorem librarii traduntur scriptione continua partes, quae ex natura sua separandae sunt, id quod in apparatu critico semper notauimus. ita in A scriptura continua coniuncti sunt numeri hi: Series A IV 1. 2. 3. V 1 et 2. 3 et 4. IX 1 et 2. Series B II 6 et 7. 10 et 11. III 1 et 2. VII 4. 5. 6. 8 et 9.

. Inscriptiones et subscriptiones in A litteris maiusculis colore rubro exaratae sunt, litteris maiusculis siue rubro siue nigro atramento scriptae sunt saepius etiam formulae salutandi et initia nonnullorum capitum. hac autem editione scripsimus litteris maiusculis solas inscriptiones et subscriptiones, reliqua litteris minusculis. si quis autem accuratius scire uelit, quae praeter inscriptiones et subscriptiones in A exarata sint litteris maiusculis, habeat ea hic omnia indicata:

II. B.

DE APPENDICE AD COLLECT. ANTIAR. PAR. (LIBER I AD CONSTANTIUM).

1. De huius libri natura et origine. — 2. De codicibus. — 3. De editionibus.

1. Usque ad ultimos annos libellus, qui uulgo dicitur 'Liber I ad Constantium', epistula esse putabatur, quam Hilarius nomine synodi cuiusdam in Galliis habitae circa annum 355 ad Constantium imperatorem dedisset. huic tamen sententiae olim iam nonnullas difficultates obiectas esse animaduertit Coustantius in editionis praefatione; aliqui enim dubitarunt, an illi epistulae Benignifica aliunde adiuncta essent, quae inde a capite quinto superessent et quae neque cum superioribus neque inter se satis cohaerere uiderentur. mirum imprimis uideri, quod nusquam abhinc oratio conuerteretur ad imperatorem, rationem autem tractandi habere magnam affinitatem cum iis, quae in fragmentis Ariminensis concilii dissererentur. opinabantur deinde periisse nonnulla in epistula, quae litterae ipsae significarent. ita ex uerbis moueret enim absolutionem eius etc. (p. 186, 7), quae ad Athanasium referri deberent, manifestum fieri de hoc episcopo iam antea sermonem habitum esse. dicebant denique capite octauo memorari mentionem Nicaenae fidei iam factam, quamuis nullum in superioribus de ipsa uestigium occurreret. quae difficultates omnes dilucide solutae sunt thesi Andreae Wilmart[1], qui statuit libellum constare duabus partibus, epistula scilicet a synodo Occidentalium Sardicensi ad Constantium imperatorem missa et textu aliquo narratiuo, quae partes pertinuissent ad opus Hilarii polemicum anno 356 scriptum et locum obtinuissent post textum narratiuum nunc in Collectaneis Serie B II 11 traditum.

Rationes uero, quibus haec sententia probatur atque confirmatur, sumi possunt cum ex epistula et textu narratiuo ipsis tum ex testimoniis, quae eiusdem aetatis de epistula a synodo Sardicensi ad imperatores missa exstant, denique ex consensu, qui inter hanc epistulam et alias ab eadem synodo scriptas litteras adesse cognoscitur[2].

Epistulam autem Benignifica et textum narratiuum a fragmento II Seriei B, quocum primitus coniuncta erant, iam ante initium saeculi VI dissoluta esse ex eo liquet, quod uetustissimus codex, Uaticanus Basilicanus S. Petri D. 182 saec. VI in., illa tradit inscripta lib. I. s̄c̄i hilari ad constantium im̄p et quod eodem fere tempore i. e. ineunte saeculo VI Fulgentio Ferrando scribenti ad Pelagium et Anatolium epistulam noti erant 'Liber I' et 'Liber II ad Constantium'; dicit enim in hac epistula c. 2: beati Hilarii in secundo libro, quem ad Constantium imperatorem scribit (LXVII 922 M). neque in errore uersari putamus, si quis opinatur Sulpicium Seuerum, qui circa annum 403 mentionem facit de tribus libellis publice datis, quibus Hilarius audientiam regis poposcisset (chron. II 45), tribus his libellis significasse 'Librum I' et 'Librum II ad Constantium' et Librum contra Constantium. neque uero ulla dubitatio est, quin Sulpicius libri, qui dicitur 'I ad Constantium', argumentum nouerit eoque usus sit in enarrandis actis synodi Mediolanensis anni 355 (cf. Studien I 136 sq.). Hieronymo autem, qui non multo post Hilarium floruit, anno 392 in manibus non erant nisi eius et ad Constantium libellus, quem uiuenti Constantinopoli porrexerat, et alius in Constantium, quem post mortem eius scripsit (de uiris inl. 100). quodsi concedimus Sulpicio Seuero epistulam Benignifica et textum narratiuum ut peculiarem libellum (Liber I ad Constantium) usui fuisse, ea inter annos 392 et 403 a Collectaneis casu uel aliquo errore separata esse dicere necesse est. Hilarius ipse epistulae Sardicensi titulum Oratio synodi Sardicensis ad Constantium imperatorem dedisse uidetur; ita enim ipse appellauit litteras synodicas in textu narratiuo, qui praecedebat epistulam. librarius autem quidam, cui notus erat liber Hilarii ad Constantium missus quique in manibus habebat illam epistulam Benignifica simul cum textu adiuncto, quorum naturam ignorabat, illas quoque litteras synodicas putabat esse aliquam epistulam ad imperatorem directam ideoque huic epistulae et libro Hilariano re uera ad imperatorem misso falsos adiecit titulos 'Liber I' et 'Liber II ad Constantium'. quo errore fortasse effectum est, ut illa synodica epistula simul cum textu Hilariano eadem ratione atque genuinus liber Hilarii ad Constantium non paucis libris manu scriptis nobis traditus sit.

2. Codices, quibus 'Liber I ad Constantium' continetur, non sunt pauci atque sunt fere iidem, quibus nobis transmissi sunt etiam 'Liber II ad Constantium' et Liber contra Constantium. quo apparet hos tres libros unitatis quodam uinculo cohaerere fuisse opinionem communem. attamen Liber c. Constantium in quibusdam codicibus etiam solus absque duobus aliis inuenitur, uelut in cod. Monacensi 6311 saec. X, cod. Turonensi 313 saec. X (—XIII), cod. Parisino 1687 saec. XI, cod. Basileensi O. II. 24 saec. XIII, cod. Uaticano 555 saec. XV (cf. Studien I 137 sq.). sed transeamus iam ad singulos codices enumerandos (cf. Studien I 138 sqq., III 3 sqq.).

1. Cod. Uaticanus Basilicanus S. Petri D. 182 (= B), fol. 311, saec. VI in. scriptus est liber litteris partim semiuncialibus, partim uncialibus. libri duo ad Constantium exarati sunt characteribus uncialibus et quidem tribus diuersis manibus (cf. Studien III 3). ex subscriptione, quae f. 288^r litteris cursiuis addita est (contuli in nomine dn̄i ih̄u χp̄i aput karalis constitutus anno quarto decimo transamundi regis), statui potest librum in oppido Calari anno 509 uel 510 correctum esse; nam Transamundus rex Uandalorum regnauit ab anno 496 usque ad annum 523. Caralis autem, plerumque 'Calaris' appellata (sed cf. Sulp. Seuer. chron. II 39: Lucifer a Carali), fuit metropolis episcopalis Sardiniae, tunc temporis pertinens ad regnum Uandalorum Africanum. hoc in oppido uiuebant inter annos 508 et 523 exsules Fulgentius Ruspensis eiusque socii, ex quibus Fulgentium Ferrandum duorum Hilarii ad Constantium librorum mentionem facere supra diximus. eum autem notitiam hanc ex cod. B, forte in Sardinia ipsa scripto, hausisse ueri simile est. incipit uero 'Liber I ad Constantium' f. 288^r his uerbis: INC̄ EIUSDEM AD CONSTANTIUM | BENIGNIFICA et finit f. 292^r ita: de se loquitur ipsa | EXP̄L. LIB̄. I. SC̄I. HILARI. AD CONSTANTIUM IM̄P.

XV.

Coustantius in editionis usum contulit octo codices, quos appellat Uatic. bas., Theoderic., Remig., Michaelin., Sorbon., Carnut., Silu., Elnon. (1402). ex quibus recognosci possunt hi: Uatic. bas. = cod. Basilicanus S. Petri D. 182 saec. VI, Theoderic. = cod. Remensis 372 saec. XIII, Remig. = cod. Remensis 371 saec. XIII, Michaelin. = cod. Uindocinensis 189 saec. XIII, Silu. = cod. Burdegalensis 112 saec. XII, Elnon. = cod. Parisinus 1699 saec. XIV. codices Sorbonensis et Carnutensis (= T) secundum ea, quae de illis dicit Coustantius, pertinebant ad saec. XIV. Coustantii autem codices gallici fuere membra unius eiusdemque familiae; omnes enim initio epistulae Benigna pro Benignifica et nonnullas alias lectiones singulares pari modo praebebant; cf. supra sub n. 5.

3. Ut refert Robertus Fortunatus Maclouiensis in editione Badii, quae prodiit Parisiis anno 1510 (Opera complura S. Hylarii episcopi hac serie coimpressa, enumerantur deinde singula opera), libri ad Constantium et contra Constantium primum in lucem prodierunt cura G. Cribelli (sc. Mediolani 1489) eiusque textus in illam editionem Badii est receptus. qui textus inuenitur uix mutatus uel emendatus etiam in editione Erasmi (Diui Hilarii Pictauorum episcopi Lucubrationes [Basileae anno 1523] I 274—277). haec editio Erasmi denuo prodiit Basileae anno 1535 (I 273—275). Erasmi Lucubrationes recognouit atque emendauit Martinus Lypsius editione, quam uulgauit Basileae anno 1550, sed paucis tantum differt huius nouae editionis textus a textu Erasmi. neque multum emendatus est textus in editione Iohannis Gillot (D. Hilarii Pictau. ep., quotquot extant Opera etc. [Parisiis anno 1572] p. 118—119). quae editio Gillotii postea recusa est Parisiis anno 1605 (p. 302—306) paulum emendata et praesertim Fragmentorum ex opere historico accessione locupletata. tertio atque iterum typis mandata est Coloniae Agrippinae anno 1617 (p. 98 sq.) et Parisiis annis 1631 et 1652 (p. 337—341). Baronius uulgauit epistulam Benignifica et textum narratiuum ad a. 355 n. LXXII sqq. textum uere emendatiorem curauit Coustantius in magna editione anni 1693 (col. 1217—1224). qui textus receptus est etiam in editiones posteriores Ueronensem (a. 1730, p. 535—540), Uenetam II (a. 1750, p. 422—427), Wirceburgensem II (a. 1785, p. 1—6), Mignianam (X 557—564).

DE LIBRO AD CONSTANTIUM (LIBER II AD CONSTANTIUM).

Liber hic ab editoribus generatim uocatur Sancti Hilarii ad Constantium Augustum liber secundus, quem et Constantinopoli eidem ipsi tradidit. uerba autem liber secundus per errorem alicuius librarii fortasse iam saeculo IV exeunte introducta esse, certe autem saec. V in libris usitata fuisse supra p. LXIII uidimus. primum nobis occurrunt illa uerba secundus liber in Fulgentii Ferrandi epistula ad Pelagium et Anatolium missa: beati Hilarii in secundo libro, quem ad Constantium imperatorem scribit (cf. supra p. LXIII). ab Hieronymo autem dicitur liber ille Ad Constantium libellus, quem uiuenti Constantinopoli porrexerat (de uiris inl. 100). quibus uerbis clare efficitur Hieronymo, cum illa scriberet, nostrum librum ante mentem uersatum esse. Hilarium uero librum imperatori Constantinopoli anno 359 exeunte dedisse concludimus ex uerbis Sulpicii Seueri dicentis: ubi (sc. Hilarius) extremum fidei periculum animaduertit Occidentalibus deceptis Orientales per scelus uinci, — audientiam regis poposcit, ut de fide coram aduersariis disceptaret (chron. II 45). cum autem Occidentales decepti sint conuentu, qui habitus est mense decembri ineunte Nicaeae Thraciae, Orientales uero formulae Nicaenae subscriberent ultimo die decembris[1], libellus ille Hilarianus scriptus est ipso decembri medio uel exeunte. quod confirmatur iis, quae ex ipsa epistula comperimus (cf. Studien III 12 sq.).

DE HYMNIS.

1. De hymnis codicis Aretini. — 2. De hymno dubio Hymnum dicat.

1. Hilarium Librum hymnorum composuisse testatur Hieronymus[1] et confirmat Isidorus Hispalensis († 636) dicens eum hymnorum carmine floruisse primum[2]. uidetur autem Hilarius Librum hymnorum confecisse, postquam reuertit ex exsilio. in Oriente enim hymni liturgici maxime colebantur et Ariani talibus cantibus utebantur ad mentes hominum sibi conciliandas. Hilarius igitur exsul, quam uim cantus liturgici in animos fidelium exercerent, procul dubio haud semel expertus est. putamus igitur eum iam tum animum induxisse in sua quoque patria hymnos in liturgiam ecclesiasticam introducere. eius autem populares nouo usui difficultates non paucas obstruxisse indicat idem Hieronymus, cum dicit: Hilarius — in hymnorum carmine Gallos indociles uocat[3]. quodsi genus sermonis hymnorum Hilarii genuinorum temperatum atque siccum, nonnumquam sublime atque reconditum consideramus, facile intellegimus Gallis permagnum et arduum fuisse hymnos Hilarianos et cogitatione comprehendere et memoria tenere[4]. hymnos Hilarii etiam in Hispania in usu fuisse comperimus ex actis synodi quartae Toletanae anni 633. cum enim nonnulli nimii in defendendis ueteribus traditionibus sacrae scripturae hymnos et carmina in liturgia non admitterent, ceteros autem hymnos omnes ex officiis ecclesiasticis expellerent, illa synodus laudauit hymnos Hilarianos hisce uerbis: nonnulli hymni humano studio in laudem dei atque apostolorum et martyrum triumphos compositi esse noscuntur sicut hi, quos beatissimi doctores Hilarius atque Ambrosius ediderunt[5].

Idem cod. Aretinus VI 3, quo nobis traditi sunt Tractatus mysteriorum Hilarii, continet etiam tres hymnos uel potius eorum fragmenta, quae sequuntur subscriptionem Tractatuum inscripta: Incipiunt hymni eiusdem (i. e. Hilarii). praemittuntur autem primo hymno tamquam praefatiuncula duo uersus senarii iambici, qui in cod. A stropham quattuor uersuum conficiunt. ipse primus hymnus conscriptus est in folio 14^r bipartitis uersibus in antica parte 25 + 25, in auersa autem parte 33 + 33. unaquaeque autem stropha hymni metro asclepiadeo compositi in codice dissoluta est in sex lineas, quarum prima et quarta constant glyconeis, altera uero simul cum tertia et quinta cum sexta comprehendunt uersus asclepiadeos. deest in codice finis hymni, qui periit cum foliis quattuor internis quaternionis, cuius folia primum et octauum pari modo exciderunt (cf. p. XIX), ita ut praeter folium secundum nihil nisi septimum huius quaternionis folium exstet. quoniam hymnus primus est abecedarius, numerum uersuum perditorum facile definire possumus; pleno enim hymno abecedario desunt 13 uersus. deinde folium nunc quintum decimum continet hymnum alterum abecedarium senariis iambicis compositum, cuius initium complectens 10 uersus periit, et tertium hymnum Adae carnis senariis trochaicis confectum, cuius pars ultima incertae magnitudinis deperdita est. uterque autem hymnus in codice pariter ac primus dissolutus est in uersus curtos. si talem dissolutionem uersuum supponamus etiam in hymnis cum foliis quaternionis nunc truncati deperditis, hunc quaternionem integrum mille circiter uersus curtos complexum esse intellegemus. an quaternionem quartum integri codicis adhuc alius quaternio uersus Hilarianos continens secutus sit, plane nescimus. quodsi perpendimus hymnos Ambrosii genuinos uix quingentos uersus curtos complecti, librum hymnorum Hilarii haud ita paruum fuisse facile admittemus.

Librum hymnorum Hilario certo tribuendum esse nemo fuit post Adolphum Ebert[1], qui serio negaret. originem enim Hilarianam complura argumenta confirmant atque euincunt. testimonio ipsius libri Aretini addendum est testimonium Petri diaconi sine dubio codicem A integrum simul cum subscriptione in manibus habentis, qui Desiderium abbatem Casinensem Hilarium mysteriorum et hymnorum describendum curasse confirmat[2]. cum porro Hieronymus in enumerandis operibus Hilarii intime conectat librum hymnorum et mysteriorum alium[3] in errore eum non uersari putamus, qui Hieronymo duos libros in uno corpore sociatos in manibus fuisse existimauerit. originem Hilarianam quam maxime comprobari etiam stilo, sermone, cogitationibus ipsorum hymnorum fusius ostendimus in Studien III 88—90[4].

Ponitur e pro ae: I 39 nate, II 22 seuus, II 35 prestat, II 42 mee, III 12 optime, III 17 querit, III 13. 19. 23 predic-. — ę pro e: I 12 sc̄ę, I 53 fęlix, I 54 quę, III 7 sanię. — ę pro oe: III 13 cętus. — h falso additur in II 16 hictus, II 35 perhenne, II 43 perhennes. — p deest inter m et t in II 23 peremtam. — aliquoties etiam litterae confunduntur; scribitur u. g. a pro e: II 13 carnis. — e pro i: II 22 tremet, II 32 suscepit. — m pro n: I 72 carmenque. — t pro c: III 17 et quis. — abbreuiationes sunt eaedem atque in Tractatibus mysteriorum; addimus nōis = nominis, pat̄ = pater, popł̄s = populus.

De metris hymnorum optime disseruit G. Meyer l. c. 404 sqq. 414 sqq., 418 sqq. cf. etiam Studien III 84 sqq. nonnullas peculiaritates metricas maioris momenti adnotauimus in apparatu critico.

Hymni Aretini compluries typis impressi sunt. ac primum quidem Gamurrini a. 1887 eos uulgauit in Biblioteca dell' Academia storico-giuridica IV (28—30). nonnulli huius primae editionis errores emendati sunt a Guidone Dreves, qui usus est noua collatione ab I. Gamurrini sibi missa et bis textum edidit (Zeitschrift für kath. Theologie. XII [1888] 358—368 et Analecta hymnica L [1907] 3—9). textum emendatiorem curauit etiam A. I. Mason usus noua collatione ab A. S. Walpole facta in The Journal of Theological Studies V (1904) 636. optime meritus est de textu recensendo G. Meyer, qui multum de tribus hymnis disseruit in Nachrichten von der k. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen. Philos.-hist. Klasse 1909, 373—433. textum Meyeri paucis mutatum receperunt etiam I. Lietzmann, Lateinische altkirchliche Poesie (1910) 3—7 et U. Buzna l. c. 38 sqq. tabulas photographicas hymnorum mihi suppeditauit Gamurrini.

2. Hymnus Hymnum dicat a non paucis uiris doctis Hilario Pictauiensi tribuitur. rationes autem, quae hanc opinionem suadent, etsi non plane comprobant, exposuimus in Studien III 75 sqq. hic liceat codices enumerare, qui hymnum continent[1].

10. Cod. Bruxellensis 3132 (207—8) (= X), fol. 271, saec. XIII (Passionale)[2]. hymnus insequitur in X epistulam ad Abram, quam praecedit uita Hilarii. codicem contulit Hippolytus Delehaye S. I.

11. Cassander, qui primus hymnum edidit, usus est codice, qui hodie desideratur[3]. de quo codice ipse in Epistula introductoria ad Hymnos ecclesiasticos, scripta Coloniae Agrippinae postridie Kal. Mart. 1556, haec uberius enarrat: cum superiori aestate in Flandria commorantes in uetustissimum uolumen inciderimus, quod praeter regulam beati Benedicti et epistolas aliquot Theodemaris abbatis monasterii S. Benedicti in Casino monte ad explicationem regulae pertinentes etiam libellum hymnorum continebat: ex quo non solum aliquos ex uulgatis nostris hymnis recognouimus, uerum etiam nonnullos hymnos uulgo ignotos, sed tamen uenustate et uetustate iis, qui extant, pares adiecimus[4]. Cassandri igitur lectiones propter huius libri, si Cassandro fides habenda est, uetustatem non spernendas esse putauimus.

Hi libri manu scripti differunt inter se non paucis lectionibus, ita ut affinitas proxima minime statui possit, nisi excipias codices L et X, quorum posteriorem ex priore fluxisse pro certo habemus. praeterea id affirmare licet magis inter se affines esse T et A, T et P, D et F et complura menda, quae omnibus libris communia sunt, iam in archetypo eorum, id est in aliquo codice ante saec. FRAGMENTA MINORA.

1. Ex Libro contra Constantium. — 2. Ex Tractatibus in Iob. — 3. Ex Commentario in Matthaeum. — 4. De Expositione epistulae ad Timotheum. — 5. Ex opere incerto.

1. In opere, quod inscribi solet Conflictus Arnobii catholici et Serapionis (LIII 239 M), commemorantur aliqua uerba Hilarii, quae Coelestinus I in concilio anno 430 Romae habito laudasse dicitur (inc.: Filius dei, factus homo; expl.: quia dominus Iesus Christus in gloria est dei patris). hoc autem fragmentum a Coelestino hisce uerbis Hilario ascribitur: Hilarius quoque uir acris ingenii scribens ad Constantium imperatorem — inquit. in Studien I 138 iam monuimus inscriptionem libri Hilariani contra Constantium in codicibus non uniformem esse, cum liber dicatur modo ad Constantium (Constantinum), modo in Constantium, modo contra Constantium; ad Constantium imperatorem dicitur liber (uel 'epistula') in codd. Turonensi 313 saec. X, Monacensi 6311 saec. X, Parisino Nouv. acq. 1454 saec. X (in subscriptione), Salisburgensi S. Petri a. XI. 2 saec. XI/XII etc. unde concludere licet etiam uerba illa a Coelestino laudata deprompta esse ex Libro c. Constantium idque eo magis, quod ex capite 27 huius libri effici uidetur ei nonnulla documenta, saltem fidem Nicaenam seu expositionem huius fidei, inserta fuisse. tali autem expositioni illa uerba plane congruunt, quae etiam ipsa ab Hilarii ingenio non aliena esse facile quis intelleget, si ea comparauerit cum Hilario de trin. IX 5 et in ps. 143, 7[1].

Codices, quorum lectiones uariantes in textu recensendo adhibui, sunt hi: cod. Barberinianus 505 (= B) saec. IX; cod. Parisinus 12269 (= P) saec. IX; cod. Augustanus 13 (= A) saec. IX; cod. Uaticanus Reg. 238 (= R) saec. IX/X; cod. Abrincensis 72 (= F) saec. XI/XII; cod. Carnotensis 88 (= C) saec. XII; cod. Sarisberiensis 61 (= S) saec. XII. imagines photographicas codicum B et R suppeditauit Fr. Ehrle S. I., lectiones uariantes ceterorum codicum Ioh. Scharnagl.

2. Hilarium Pictauiensem scripsisse Tractatus in Iob testatur Hieronymus (de uiris inl. 100) addens eum hos Tractatus de graeco Origenis ad sensum transtulisse. deinde in Apologia aduersus libros Rufini I 2 (XXIII 399 M) laudat Hilarium ut exemplar interpretis dicens eum quadraginta ferme milia uersuum Origenis in Iob et psalmos transtulisse. idem Hieronymus in epistula (57) ad Pammachium (CSEL LIV 512) illos Tractatus in Iob uocat Homilias in Iob. an Licinianus, episcopus Carthaginis Nouae, qui circa finem saeculi VI homilias Hilarii ut libellos sex sancti Hilarii episcopi Pictauiensis, quos de graeco Origenis in latinum uertit, commemorat[1], illas genuinas homilias in manibus habuerit, non liquet; uidetur potius deceptus esse adulterinis homiliis, de quibus u. Studien III 96.

[1] De fragmento cf. etiam A. Wilmart in Revue Bénéd. XXIV (1907) 149.

Duo illa priora fragmenta, quae repraesentamus infra p. 229 sq., excerpta esse ex genuinis Tractatibus in Iob testatur Augustinus in Libris c. Iulianum II 8 (27) et in Libro de natura et gratia 62 (72); prius enim fragmentum dicit desumptum esse ex quadam homilia Hilarii de libro sancti Iob (cf. infra p. 229, 4), alterum uero, quod idem manifesto ex tractatu quodam in Iob scripto deriuatum est, diserte tribuit Hilario (cf. infra p. 230 n. 14). in duobus autem illis fragmentis nihil inuenitur, quod cum sermone et stilo Hilarii non concordet. immo sententia illa prioris fragmenti de generositate primae creationis in Adae offensa amissa et rursum obtenta saepius apud eum inuenitur, uelut in Commentario in Matth. 8, 5. 10, 4 etc. de codicibus a nobis adhibitis cf. infra p. 229.

Tertium quoque fragmentum, quod infra p. 231 damus et quod actis (cap. 10) synodi quartae Toletanae anni 633 traditum est, ex Tractatibus in Iob excerptum esse iam suspicatus est Coustantius nixus Ambrosio (?) de sacr. V 25, qui simili ratione atque Hilarius locum Lucae (11, 3) coniungit cum sacrificio sancti Iob: qui non meretur quotidie accipere, non meretur post annum accipere. quomodo Iob sanctus pro filiis suis offerebat quotidie sacrificium etc.

Acta synodi Toletanae tradita sunt aliquibus collectionibus canonum, quas uocant Hispanam, collectionem cod. Nouariensis, collectionem cod. S. Amandi[2]. ad textum recensendum collati sunt libri hi: ex collectione Hispana cod. Uindobonensis 411 (= U) saec. X (f. 118^{v}); cod. Escurialensis d. I. 1 (= E^{1}) saec. X ex. (f. 142^{v}); cod. Escurialensis d. I. 2 (= E^{2}) saec. X (f. 154); cod. Uaticanus Palatinus 575 (= R) saec. X (f. 17^{r}); cod. Matritensis P. 21 (ol. Toletanus) (= M) saec. X/XI (f. 147); ex collectione codicis S. Amandi cod. Parisinus 3846 (ol. S. Amandi) (= P) saec. IX (f. 203^{v}); cod. Parisinus 1455

3. Tria illa fragmenta Hilariana, quae Cassianus in opere Contra Nestorium VII 24 (CSEL XVII 383, 1—8) tradidit, sunt excerpta ex Prooemio expositionis euangelii secundum Matthaeum nunc deperdito. pertinent igitur ad Commentarium in Matthaeum. eorum autem textum pariter atque textum fragmentorum sub n. 1 laudatorum repraesentamus etiam in nostra editione p. 232 secuti hac in re exemplum Petri Coustantii.

4. Fragmentum de Expositione epistulae ad Timotheum (infra p. 233) Hilarii nomine traditum laudatur in canone tertio decimo synodi Hispalensis II, quae die 13 nouembris anno 619 praesidente Isidoro episcopo Hispalensi habita est. illud autem fragmentum Hilarii nostri esse recte iudicat Coustantius dicens neminem ambigere, qui in ipsius lectione prorsus peregrinus non sit aut etiam qui cum illis uerbis alia ipsius uerba de trin. X 66 comparauerit. Hilarium uero epistulas Paulinas exposuisse aut de eis homilias conscripsisse confirmant uaria testimonia, de quibus u. Studien III 93 sq. fragmentum iisdem codicibus traditum est atque fragmentum Tractatuum in Iob tertium et quidem in U f. 200ᵛ, in E¹ f. 209ᵛ, in E² f. 225ᵛ, in R f. 157ʳ, in M f. 243, in P f. 252ᵛ, in N f. 182ᵛ sq.

5. In Libris contra Iulianum I 3 (9) laudat Augustinus uerba aliqua Hilarii, quae unde desumpserit, non indicat praemisso tantum hoc elogio auctoris: ecclesiae catholicae aduersus hereticos acerrimum defensorem uenerandum quis ignoret Hilarium episcopum Gallum? qui cum de Christi carne ageret, attende quid dixerit. Hilarium autem Pictauiensem ab Augustino celebrari patet ex eo, quod simul commemorantur eiusdem Hilarii uerba ex Tractatibus super psalmos exscripta. iuuat praeterea conferre illud fragmentum cum Hilario de trin. X 25. idem fragmentum designat Augustinus etiam in Libris contra Iulianum I 7 (32) et II 4 (8) (cf. p. 234 n. 1). uerbis autem Augustini qui cum de Christi carne ageret non librum aliquem indicari, cui titulus De carne Christi fuerit, sed lectorem tantum admoneri Hilario eo loco de carnis Christi praerogatiua esse sermonem animaduertit recte Coustantius. libris manu scriptis usi sumus iisdem atque in fragmento Tractatuum in Iob primo.

SPURIA.

1. De Epistula ad Abram filiam. — 2. De hymno Lucis largitor. — 3. De hymno Ad caeli clara.

1. Incipit epistula sancti Hilarii episcopi ad filiam suam Abram uel similiter inscripta continetur in multis codicibus uitarum Sanctorum epistula quaedam Accepi, quam Hilarium episcopum exsulem ad Abram suam filiam scripsisse plerique putant. adnexa est haec epistula saepissime uitae Hilarii a Fortunato compositae. aliqui autem codices, uelut cod. Parisinus Nouv. acq. 1455 saec. XI, cod. Parisinus 2403 saec. XII, cod. Guelferbytanus 2934 saec. XIII/XIV, cod. Parisinus 2565 saec. XIV tradunt epistulam sine uita. inuenimus epistulam etiam in quibusdam libris opera Hilariana continentibus. ad textum restituendum collati sunt libri hi (cf. Studien III 42 sqq.):

1. Cod. Sangallensis 567 (= A), pag. 200, saec. VIII/IX[1]. epistula sequitur uitam Hilarii p. 128—133: INCIBIT EPLĀ SC̄I HILARII EPĪ. AD FILIAM SUAM ABRAM.

2. Cod. Sangallensis 577 (= B), pag. 754, saec. IX/X. epistula habetur p. 155 sqq. post uitam Hilarii eodem titulo inscripta atque in cod. A. in Fortunati editione p. VIII statuerat Krusch librarium cod. B uitam Hilarii ex A descripsisse. idem dicendum est de epistula Accepi. ac primum quidem omittit B uerba, quae in A totam unam lineam explent: 239, 16 non usu atteritur, non sorde afficitur, non ui scinditur. habentur deinde in A et B (sicuti etiam in cod. C apographo codicis B) aliquae lectiones uariantes, quae in aliis libris non inueniuntur, uelut 237, 4. 238, 13. 239, 4. 240, 5. 9. 241, 7. 10. 11. 242, 14. 243, 12. interpunctio denique est fere eadem in utroque codice. ex eo autem, quod correcturae codicis A in B iam in ipsum textum receptae sunt, conficitur codicem B ex cod. A descriptum esse, postquam hic correctus erat.

3. Cod. Bruxellensis 3183 (7666—71) (= C), fol. 149, saec. X[2]. traditur epistula f. 112—114 post uitam Hilarii: Epistola beati Ilarii quam misit Abrae filiae suae. sicut uita Hilarii (cf. Krusch l. c.), ita etiam epistula Accepi descripta est ex cod. B.

Uulgata est epistula in his editionibus operum Hilarii: in Parisiensi anni 1510 p. XCVII sq., in editionibus Erasmi I (Basileae 1523) 322—325, I (1535) 320—322, Lypsii (Basileae 1550) 337 sq., Gillotii (in Praefatione, Parisiis 1572, Coloniae Agrippinae 1617, Parisiis 1605, 1652), Coustantii (Parisiis 1693) 1209—1212, Scipionis Maffei II (Ueronae 1730) 525—528, Uenetae II (1750) 412—415, Wirceburgensis IV (1788) 3—7, Mignianae X 549—552. in editione principe Parisiensi anni 1510 epistula uulgata est, ut indicat in Praefatione Robertus Fortunatus Maclouiensis, a Guilelmo Paruo secundum codicem monasterii Dibionensis S. Benigni. reliqui editores ante Coustantium receperunt hunc textum nihil fere immutantes, Coustantii autem textum suum fecerunt editores posteriores.

Primus, qui epistulam ad Abram scriptam pro adulterina habebat, fuit Erasmus; in sua enim editione uocat eam merum nugamentum hominis otiose indocti. Gillotius autem epistulam a Fortunato confictam esse putabat; enarrat enim Fortunatus in uita S. Hilarii a se composita illam epistulam manu propria Hilarii sub-scriptam sua aetate Pictauis pro munere conseruari[1]. at Fortunato, qui epistulae se non auctorem, sed testem faciat, fidem non detrectandam esse censet cum aliis Coustantius addens longe minus ueritati consentaneum esse eum, cum genuinam Hilarii epistulam prae manibus haberet, ea suppressa adulterinam supposuisse; nihil autem in illa epistula aduerti pio ac prudente indignum parente, qui carissimam filiam simul et puellam tenerrimam uerbis ad ipsius captum accommodatis a saeculi uanitate auocet, ut eam caelesti sponso bonisque melioribus praeparet.

Rationes autem a Coustantio allatae nobis persuadere nequeunt, immo cum Huberto Reinkens[2] aliisque litteras illas genuinas esse negamus. ac primum quidem stilus epistulae totus discrepat a stilo Hilariano. sermo enim epistulae rudis idemque puerilis est, sententiis inanis et ieiunus. saepe eaedem sententiae et uerba redeunt; sit unum tantum exemplum: hanc uestem 238, 10. 14. 239, 13, hac ueste 239, 1, uestem hanc 239, 2, hanc primum uestem 239, 3, haec uestis 239, 15, uestis haec 239, 15. sententiae deinde saepe sine ullis coniunctionibus conectuntur; cf. u. g. 237, 4. 238, 8. 240, 11. 243, 3. minime porro ueri simile est Abram filiam — si re uera Hilarius ante episcopatum matrimonio iunctus fuit — eo tempore, quo pater epistulam complures iam annos in exsilio degens (c. a. 359) scripsisse fingitur, tam tenera aetate fuisse, ut supponitur in epistula. ex summa autem, quam Fortunatus l. c. ex epistula illa Pictauiensi exprimit — si eius uerbis fides habenda est —, hanc epistulam aliam fuisse suspicamur quam quae nobis tradita est; dicit enim Fortunatus Hilarium indicasse filiae se talem ei sponsum prouidisse, cuius nobilitas caelos ascenderet, pulchritudo rosarum et lilii comparationem praecederet, oculi gemmarum lumina luminarent, uestis candorem niuis opprimeret, ornamenta inaestimabili fulgore uernarent, diuitiae intra se regna concluderent, sapientia incomprehensibilis emineret, dulcedo faui mella postponeret, pudicitia incontaminata persisteret, odor suauitate flagraret, thesauri sine defectione constarent. propterea monere se Abram, ut nulli se coniungeret, sed ut patrem et sponsum pariter uenturum exspectaret. hoc igitur argumentum epistulae Hilarianae Pictauis conseruatae, quod Fortunatus nobis reliquit — siue illa epistula fuit genuina siue non fuit — auctori cuidam ansam praebuisse uidetur ad epistulam Accepi componendam et Hilario attribuendam. nec tamen multum contradicere uelimus, si quis putet Fortunatum in describenda epistula Hilariana ipsas spurias litteras Accepi prae manibus habuisse et ita ipsum deceptum esse.

[1] c. 6 M G h, Auct. antiq. IV 2 p. 3. [2] Hilarius von Poitiers 227—233.

2. In epistula ad Abram spuria Hilarius promiserat se hymnum matutinum pariterque serotinum ipsi missurum esse (cf. infra p. 243, 15). epistulae igitur illi adulterinae re uera duo tales hymni adnexi fuisse uidentur. hos autem hymnos ex suo pristino loco mox excidisse inde concludere licet, quod desunt in uetustissimis libris, qui tradunt epistulam Accepi, sc. in cod. Sangallensi 567 saec. VIII/IX et in cod. Rotomagensi 758 saec. X; desiderantur hymni etiam in compluribus libris saec. XI, uelut in codicibus Rotomagensi 1400, Casinensibus 139. 144. 145, Spinaliensi 67, Montepessulano (Ecole de Médecine) 48; pariter desunt in multis libris aetatis posterioris.

Sed iam a saeculo XI inuenimus cum ipsa epistula coniunctum hymnum quendam matutinum Lucis largitor, uelut in codicibus Trecensi 1171 et Salisburgensi S. Petri a. XI. 2 atque in plurimis libris saeculorum XII et insequentium. aliquoties autem in eius locum alius hymnus suppositus est, ut in cod. Sangallensi 577 saec. IX/X et in cod. Bruxellensi 3132 (206—8) saec. XII hymnus Hymnum dicat turba fratrum, in cod. Trecensi 852 saec. XII/XIII et in cod. Parisino 2565 saec. XIV hymnus Iubilus rythmicus de nomine Iesu 'Dulcis Ihesu memoria', in cod. Trecensi 2269 saec. XII Ymnus de paradiso 'Ciues celestis patriae regi regum concinentes'. nomine ipsius Hilarii inscriptus habetur hymnus Lucis largitor primum in cod. Leidensi 100 saec. X/XI, qui tradit eum inscriptum Hymnus de sancto Hylario.

Hymnum autem hunc minime Hilario ascribi posse, sed saeculo V cum aliis quibusdam hymnis in usum liturgicum compositum esse uberrime et diserte ostendit Cl. Blume[1]. codices, quos adhibuimus in textu recensendo, enumeratos habes infra p. 245. addimus id tantum hymnum in cod. A postea manu quadam saec. X exeuntis uel XI ineuntis simul cum alio hymno adiectum esse praefixa inscriptione Hymni de pio Hilario pontifice et similiter in cod. N postea manu saec. 3. Hymnum Ad caeli clara esse hymnum serotinum, de quo est sermo in epistula Accepi, arbitratus est Coustantius, quoniam hymnus in cod. Uaticano Ottoboniano 757 saec. XIV una cum hymno Lucis largitor tradatur. Hilario diserte ascribitur hymnus in cod. Salisburgensi S. Petri a. XI. 2 saec. XI/XII et in cod. Bernensi 100 saec. XII hisce uerbis: Uersus sancti Hylarii episcopi, almi confessoris, quos composuit in nouissimis diebus suis flendo atque fideliter penitendo peccata sua.

Hunc autem hymnum non esse serotinum illum hymnum, quem Hilarius suae ad Abram epistulae addidisse fertur — supposito hoc facto, non concesso — conficitur non solum eo, quod hymnus in paucis tantum recentioribus libris Hilario tribuitur et omnino deest in plerisque codicibus illam epistulam continentibus, sed etiam, quod hymnus auctoris innumera uitae suae peccata confitentis minime conueniens erat filiae adulescentulae stilusque et sermo leuis hymni differt multum a sermone graui Hilariano et quod eius strophae sapphicae formatae sunt secundum accentum uocabulorum, non secundum quantitatem, ut Hilarii hymni genuini. hymnum autem non ante finem saec. IV compositum esse patere putamus ex u. 66, quo redemptor mundi dicitur aequalis patri sanctoque spiritui. G. Dreves[1], nixus imprimis similitudine, quae intercedit inter stropham 14 hymni praesentis et stropham 2 hymni Paulini Aquileiensis, cui titulus In resurrectione domini[2], secutus est opinionem Madrisii, qui etiam nostrum hymnum huic poetae attribuit[3]. quae similitudo etsi illam opinionem probabilem reddit, tamen etiam eo explicari potest, quod auctor alter alterum illis uersibus imitatus est. textui recensendo inseruierunt codices hi:

DE ADAM.

2. Adam ipso nomine natiuitatem domini praeformat; nam secundum linguam Hebraicam 'Adam', quod Graece 'gepyrra', id
Latine 'terra flammea' est et scriptura humani corporis carnem
2 'terram' solita est nuncupare. quae per spiritum in domino nata de uirgine, in nouam et alienam a se speciem mutata, conformis effecta est gloriae spiritali [est] secundum apostolum: secundus homo de caelo et Adam caelestis, quia Adam terrestris imago est futuri. tuto ergo auctore tanto etiam Adae nomen non sine aliqua futuri meditatione suscipimus.

3. Sequitur, quod obsopito Adam ex latere eius atque osse mea. haec uocabitur mulier, quia de uiro suo sumpta est, et erunt duo in carne una. hic nihil mihi laboris est; apostolus enim, cum huius ipsius prophetiae meminisset, ait: hoc mysterium magnum est,

2 ego autem dico in Christo et in ecclesia. sed Adae os tantum detractum legimus; et quomodo dicitur 'caro de carne mea'? referri quidem ad praesentium gestorum fidem res ista poterit, ut, quia os, quod ex latere eius in muliebre corpus per eum, qui omnia potest, deum carne uestitum sit, quia os ex carne detractum [est] et rursum carne indutum in corpus extiterit, ut os ex osse, ita etiam caro sit ex carne. sed dominus in euangeliis, cum repudio dando a Iudaeis temptatus esset, per se potius quam per Adam hoc ita dictum fuisse demonstrat dicens: non legistis, quia, qui fecit ab initio, masculum et feminam fecit et dixit: propter hoc di-mittet homo patrem et matrem et erunt duo in carne una? hoc enim post id, quod dictum est caro de carne mea, sequitur. ergo rem, quae in Adam perficiebatur, 3 consecuta est prophetia. cum enim haec dominus, qui fecit masculum et femi⌊nam⌋, dixerit, quod ex osse eius os et ex carne ipsius caro ⌊est⌋, locutus ipse per Adam id, quod totum in ipso Adam erat ⌊fac⌋tum, nec detraxit fidem rebus et praeformari eius et per aquam nata et uiuificata per sanguinem sit, rursum caro, in qua uerbum ante saecula manens, quod est filius dei, natum sit, per sacramentum maneat in nobis, absolute docuit in Adam atque Eua suam et ecclesiae speciem contineri, quam post mortis suae somnum sanctificatam esse carnis suae communione significet.

rint. ecclesia igitur ex publicanis et peccatoribus et gentibus est; solo suo secundo et caelesti Adam non peccante ipsa peccatrix per 6 generationem filiorum in fide manentium erit salua. ceterum intellegi ita non conuenit, quod mulier non sit a peccato suo redempta per dominum, et superflue baptizabitur, si magis merito partus sit liberanda. sed ne per ipsam quidem filiorum generationem erit tuta, cum salua non sit, nisi, qui geniti sunt, fideles perstiterint. et nescio, qua aequum sit alieno aut peccato reum effici aut merito innocentem.

4. Sed tuto spiritalibus spiritalia comparantes ita sentiemus maxime apostolum gesta magni in Adam atque Eua mysterii referre se iam ad Christum atque ecclesiam praedicantem. et haec quidem ita nos conuenit ab eo spiritaliter dicta existimare, ut non minus ad praesentem doctrinam et ad eorum, quos monebat, insti- 2 tutionem sermo referendus sit. namque multiplicem misericordiam dei in ea, quae ad Corinthios prima est, in sanctificandis per coniugia fidelium infidelibus praedicans hic quoque per procreationem credentium tamen filiorum istiusmodi sanctificationem docuit largiendam, ut, quemadmodum unius fidelis societas prodesset per coniugium infideli, ita fidelium procreatio infidelibus subueniret.

5. Contuendum etiam illud est in Adae somno atque Euae corporatione occulti in Christo et in ecclesia mysterii sacramentum; 2 in eo enim corporeae resurrectionis fides et ratio continetur. namque in creatione mulieris non iam limus adprehenditur neque terra in formam describitur neque dei inspiratione in animam uiuentem materies inanimis commouetur, sed ossi caro adcrescit et carni perfectio corporis datur et perfectionem corporis uigor spiritalis in- 3 sequitur. hunc resurrectionis ordinem per Ezechielem deus locutus

10. Haec non transcursim audienda sunt, sed in his futurorum figuratio scrutanda est. Lamech principis sacerdotum habet speciem, 2 qui consentientibus sibi Iudaeis et gentibus cruci dominum subductus est plebe credentium a sceleris communione secreta et idcirco duabus tamquam sociis sibi et uxoribus caedem iuuenis gloriatur. et quia nullus de eo sensus est poenae, in se et uulnera et 3

DE NOE.

Noe enim, quem ex uirgine dominus adsumpsit, hominem praefigurat atque, ut id ipsum ex scripturae ipsius uerbis cognitum fiat, cuiusmodi de eo prophetia Lamech patris eius fuerit, noscendum est: et Lamech genuit filium et uocauit nomen eius Noe dicens: hic requiescere faciet nos ab operibus nostris et a tristitiis manuum nostrarum et a terra, cui maledixit dominus deus. sed haec, ut arbitror, in eum Noe, de quo 3 sermo est, ad perfectum conuenire non possunt. quam enim requiem humano generi adtulit uel a quibus fecit operibus desisti? quin etiam sub eo uniuersitas hominum deletur, diluuium infunditur; terra conspectui eius uiri redditur, in grauioribus etiam postea uirtutibus uiuitur. et ubi requies per Noe erit reddita? in eo autem, qui

f. 5r facturus sit requiem, potestas est designata faciendi. | porro autem 4 nec naturae hominis conuenit nec scriptum legitur nec re ipsa intellegitur Noe horum aliquid fecisse, sed plera, quae Noe erant propria, scriptura planissime edidit: cum deo probabilis est, cum iustus inuenitur, cum arcam facere iubetur, cum in eam ingreditur, cum coruum emittit, cum columbam et recipit et remittit, cum egreditur ex arca, cum uineam plantat, cum ex fructu eius ebrius nudatur, cum a Cham inridetur, cum a Sem et Iafeth contegitur, cum in unum maledictionem et in duos benedictionis ordinem modumque constituit. haec, ab eo ut sunt gesta, intellegenda sunt.

13. Sed magnum in his futuri sacramentum continetur ac de singulis suo loco tractabimus, tum cum oporteat sibi inuicem res populi infidelis Esau ob carnalia desideria uendebat, non utique de praesenti primitiuorum honore desperat dicens: ecce ego morior, et quo mihi hos primatus? — nam ante mortem primatus ille, qui hominum est, percipiebatur —, sed quia, formam populi in se gerens, primitiuus ipse per legem — prior enim hic populus in dei hereditatem fuerat electus — de spe resurrectionis et gloriae dei excidit, desideriis corporis occupatus suum honorem desperasse se proferebat, quem primogenitum conuenerat sperare post mortem.

21. Desperante itaque Esau de primitiis suis cetera et secundum facti fidem et secundum praefigurationis uirtutem geruntur.

uitae non molestiis suis, quae utique nullae sunt, sed arbitrii nostri iure difficile est. ad consequendam enim dei misericordiam humanae uoluntatis est mora, quod ex hoc ipso, quia de Esau est, sermone fit cognitum. benedici enim se poposcerat, sed pater spiritali motu

DE MOYSE.

27. Editio rerum in Moyse gestarum coeptae quoque iam ab Adam praefigurationis ordinem tenuit. et dignum hoc misericordia dei, ut omnium patriarcharum suorum gesta in aliquantum per-fectionem eorum, quae in domino nostro consummanda erant, 2 imitarentur. ea enim, quae in uno illo et per unum illum expleta sunt, per species et tempora et generationes praeformantur ex aliquo.
neque enim tot saeculorum imitatio consequi potuit id, quod in uno illo est ueritatis, sed tamen nihil ita in singulis uel per singulos gestum est, ut non ea, quae deinceps aut per eum aut in eo con-summata sunt, prope ipsam gestorum praesentium imitationem loquerentur.

28. Moyses etenim natus eo tempore, quo omnes masculini

2 dux populo reseruatur. odium et metus regis numquid non par atque idem tempore eo, quo dominus noster secundum hominem est natus, exarsit in eundem nobis hominem, quem adsumpsit per sacramentum ligni atque aquae in se, ac sibi ad caelestem gloriam 3 deputatum et regem gentium constitutum? hunc deinde abluenda fluuio Pharaonis filia suscepit Moysen. soror cum adesset, nutricem ex Hebreis optulit. matrem deinde exhibuit, alendum illa suscepit et Pharao filiae retulit, quae receptum adsumpsit in filium.

29. Iunge personas, compara effectus, gesta intuere, inuenies in praesentium imitatione consequentium ueritatem. sub Moysi enim sorore lex usque ad sacramentum ligni atque aquae Christum prosecuta est. in Pharaonis uero filia gentium forma est, quae, 2 quamuis secundum historiae fidem paruolum uiderit, tamen effectu ipso uirtutem prophetiae retinuit. lex enim ecclesiae tamquam Pharaonis filiae synagogam et nutriculam et matrem infantis exhibuit ac sic spiritalis ordo conseruatus in gestis est. ab hac enim lege id docente nutriri secundum carnem Christum conuenit, ab illa oportuit adoptari. magnus factus Moyses detentos in seruitio fratres 3 requirit. deinde dominantem et iniuriam uni eorum inferentem Aegyptium prosternit ac postea ab eo ipso, quem de Aegyptio erat ultus, arguitur. nonne Christus consummatae et perfectae aetatis cum esset, populum suum, qui secundum carnem ei fratres sunt, uisitat? uenit enim ad oues perditas domus Israhel.
nonne dominantem eorum diabolum prostrauit et uicit? nemo 4 enim uasa fortis diripiet, nisi prius fortem alligauerit. nonne ab his ipsis, quibus et de diabolo ultionem et de seruitio libertatem reddebat, arguitur? ita consummationem in deo gratiae consequitur ea, quae in latore legis imitatio est.

30. Rubus in conspectu Moysi conflagrat nec tamen uritur:
ecclesia uidelicet ex peccatorum persecutionum et temptationum flammis succenditur apostolo dicente: angustiam sustinentes, uirga est magos uincens, Pharaonem terrens, Aegyptum conterens,

DE OSEE.

1. Et in libro prophetarum ad Osee et alius domini sermo legitur: uade, accipe tibi uxorem fornicationis, quoniam fornicando fornicabitur terra a domino. 2 et post multa, quae media sunt plena maledictionis in eam, et post partum Israhel et Non-dilectae et Non-populi-mei haec cognoscuntur: disponam autem illis ea die testamentum cum bestiis agri et uolatilibus caeli et serpentibus terrae et arcum et frameam et bellum conteram de terra et conlocabo te in spe ⟨et sponsabo te mihi⟩ ipsi in aeternum. sponsabo te mihi in iustitia et fide et cognosces dominum. et erit in illa die, dicit dominus: exaudiam caelo et caelum ⟨exaudiet⟩ terrae et terra exaudiet frumentum et uinum et oleum eaque audiet Israhel. et seminabo eam mihi super terram et diligam Non-dilectam et dicam Non-populo-meo: Populus-meus tu. 3 et quantum arbitror, nullus cunctandi locus est, quin praefiguratam hic ecclesiae praefigurationem intellegamus, cum quando apostolus id, quod superius de huius fornicariae filiis ad

Osee erat dictum, referendum esse ad fidelium populum existimauerit dicens ad Corinthios: uocauit nos non tantum ex Iudeis, sed etiam ex nationibus, sicut et in Osee dicit: uocabo eum, qui Non-populus-meus, Populus-meus et Non-dilectam Dilectam. et erit in loco, quocumque uocabuntur Non-populus-meus, illic uocabuntur filii dei uiui.

2. Quod igitur in propheta corporaliter gerebatur, id est coniugium atque generatio — nam ex fornicaria tres geniti sunt, quorum primus ex praecepto dei Israhel nuncupatus est, sequens nata Dilecta dicta est, tertius Non-populus-meus uocitatus —, id per deum ad spiritalem intellegentiam et confirmatur et geritur. hanc enim fornicariam 2 iunctam prophetae sponsam sibi dominus in iustitia et fide effecit testamentum disponens cum bestiis agri, id est cum homibestiarum, iacula uolantium, uenena serpentium.

3. Exaudiens quoque caelo caelum et terrae terra significat in eo, qui audiat et qui audiatur, diuersitatem in numero, id ipsum tamen, quod audiat audiaturque, esse demonstrans, cum caelo caelum exaudiat et terrae terra, significatio uero et demutationis impertiens, ut, qui non populus suus erat, Populus suus sit et, quae non erat dilecta, Dilecta sit.

4. Israhel namque in Abraham patre suo electus ex gentibus est, ut in Psalmis dictum est: domus Iacob de populo barbaro. sed peccatis immorans et uanis religionibus deditus et promissis dei infidelis promissorum effectus capere non meruit fornicaria in sponsam deo fidei et iustitiae electa; dehinc qui non dilecti, qui non sui, qui de fornicariae partu, hi uiuentis dei uxorem accipere fornicariam iubetur, idcirco commemorandus fuit, ut, quia praeformari omnia per gesta ueteris testamenti eaque in domino et per dominum gerenda esse docemur, hoc ipso, quod pro-de Raab sermo esset, per quem praeformari in ea ecclesiam ostenderemus, tuto comparationem hanc ecclesiae atque meretricis pro sensus nostri intellegentia poneremus, cum quando fornicaria prophetae iuncta ad ecclesiae praeformationem in spem aeternam iustitiae et fidei et cognitionis dei repperiretur esse desponsa. et 2 in eo quidem, quod sub Hiesu omnia in ea gesta sunt, maxima uirtus est prophetiae. in Hiesu enim cognominato absoluta futuri sacramenti ratio monstrata est. namque post multum dei ad Moysen sermonem, cum dictum ei esset, ut omnia secundum speciem, quam in monte uidisset, faceret in terra, Hiesum, qui Auses antea uocitabatur, cognominauit ducem populo ad terram repromissionis pergenti futurum. ad speciem caelestis uisionis iussus Moyses uniuersa disponere illud duci futuro nomen adiecit, quod erat aeterno duci iam in caelestibus praeparatum.

6. Nam ut hic synagogae princeps, ita ille ecclesiae. ut ⟨hic⟩ dux promissae terrae optinendae, ita ille dux terrae hereditandae, de qua dominus ait: beati mites, quoniam ipsi hereditabunt terram. ut hic post Moysen, ita ille post 2

f. 90ʳ | Domino merito gloriosissimo ac uictoriosissimo Augusto Constantio synodus Ariminensis Orientalibus consentiens [id est Migdonius, Megasius, Ualens, Epictetus et ceteri, qui haeresi consenserunt].

1. Inlustrati pietatis tuae scriptis maximas deo rettulimus et referimus gratias, quod nos beaueris intimans nobis illa, quae cum discursione pietatis tuae facere deberemus, ne quis
'usiae' uel 'omousii' nomina ecclesiae dei ignota aliquando

INCIPIT EPISTULA LEGATORUM MISSA AD CONSTANTIUM IMPERATOREM A LIBERIO EPISCOPO URBIS ROMAE PER LUCIFERUM EPISCOPUM.

Gloriosissimo Constantio Augusto Liberius episcopus.

1. Obsecro, tranquillissime imperator, ut mihi benignas aures clementia tua tribuat, quo possit mansuetudini tuae mentis meae propositum apparere. de Christiano enim imperatore et sanctae memoriae filio Constantini hoc ipsud sine cunctatione mereor impetrare; sed in eo me laborare intellego, quia repetita satisfactione placabilem etiam circa reos animum tuum in gratiam meam reuocare non possum. sermo enim pietatis tuae iam dudum ad populum 2 missus me quidem, quem patienter omnia ferre necesse est, plurimum lacerat, sed animum tuum, qui lenitati semper uacat, qui numquam, ut scriptum est, in occasum diei iracundiam seruat, retinere circa me indignationem miraculo mihi est. ego enim, religiosissime imperator, tecum ueram pacem requiro, quae non sit uerbis conposita interna dispositione fallaciae, sed praeceptis euangeliorum rationabiliter confirmata. non Athanasi tantum negotium, sed multa 3 1^r alia in medium | uenerunt, propter quae concilium fieri mansue-tudinem tuam fueram deprecatus, ut, ante omnia — quod specialiter optat mentis tuae erga deum sincera deuotio — cum fidei causa, in qua prima nobis spes est ad deum, diligenter fuisset tractata, negotia eorum, qui nostram circa deum obseruantiam mirari debent, possent finiri. et dignum fuerat dei cultore, dignum imperio tuo, quod Christi pietate regitur et augetur, specialiter hoc ipsum pro reuerentia sanctae religionis, cui prudenter intentus es, clementiam tuam nobis ad haec inpetranda praestare.

2. Sed multi ecclesiae membra lacerare festinant, qui confinxerunt simulationique non miscuit. et qualis fuit illa sententia, exponam, a qua referens uoluntatem indignus ecclesiae ab episcopis, dignus 2 exilio a rege est iudicatus. atque hoc ita fieri non rerum ordo, sed ratio ex praesentibus petita demonstrat, ut ex his primum confessio potius fidei quam fauor in hominem intellegatur, ex quibus in eum, qui adsensus his non est, coepit iniuria.

7. Atque hoc etiam non inutiliter admonebo, ut ad omne hoc uolumen diligens intentio adhibeatur. omnia enim sunt et separanda temporibus et distinguenda iudiciis et secernenda personis et uerborum diiudicanda uirtutibus, ne forte tot epistulis, tot synodis tunc frequenter ingestis pernicioso ante finem fastidio expleatur.
2 agitur autem in his, quae cognitio dei expetenda sit, quae spes aeternitatis, in quo perfecta ueritas statu haereat. et cum tam grauis rei negotium tractetur, oportet et unumquemque his modo curam cognoscendis rebus inpendere, ut iudicio deinceps proprio consistens opinionem non sequatur alienam. EXPLICIT.

1. Superioribus igitur litteris datis uenia indulgetur orantibus, reditus ad catholicam fidem cum communione donatur, maxime cum Sardicensis synodi ueritatem ipsae orantium ueniam litterae continerent. (21) uerum inter haec Syrmium conuenitur. Fotinus hereticus deprehensus, olim reus pronuntiatus et a communione iam pridem unitatis abscisus, ne tum quidem per factionem per Fotini damnationem Marcelli nomen inueheret. extat autem in superioris epistulae corpore Marcellum ab Arrianis occasione libri, quem de subiectione domini Christi ediderat, una cum Athanasio fuisse damnatum. docetur etiam recitatione eiusdem libri innocentem deprehendi. falsitatem quoque iudicii Arriani extantis adhuc libri fides arguit. de Fotino autem tantum, sicuti mos poscebat, ad Orientales epistulae fiunt non iniuria extorquendi, ut nunc agitur, adsensum, sed instruendae uniuersorum scientiae consuetudine.
2 populi potuit ammoueri. * * * * * sed idem Athanasius Marcellum, qui post recitationem libri, quem scriptum ediderat — nam hunc nos quoque habemus — sententia synodi Sardicensis episcopatui erat redditus, ubi quaedam alia noua miscere sensit et ambiguis praedicationibus eius, in quam Fotinus erupit, doctrinae uiam quaerere, a communione sua separat anteriore tempore, quam Fotinus arguitur, praeuentam iudicio meditationem corruptae uoluntatis ostendens et non ex libri editione condemnans. sed quia promptum est ex bono malum effici, praebuit non illis, quae in Marcellum gesta antea fuerant, sed his, quae in Fotinum gerenda erant, auctoritatem.

3 (23). Sed cur abnegatae Marcello communionis Athanasius reus esse rescribitur? numquid propter libri uitium Marcellus abstentus est? testes ipsi sunt ex institutis eius Fotinum peruersitatis istius initia sumsisse. nam negata sibi ab Athanasio communione ingressu sese ecclesiae Marcellus abstinuit. ita communio cum eo inita fidem de subiectione ⟨et⟩ traditione regni docet, negata rursum prauitatem doctrinae alterius ostendit. ac sic utrumque uiri istius iudicium caret culpa, cum in data communione synodi sit secutus adsensum, in abnegata uero ipso se Marcello abdicante solo sine ulla synodi auctoritate. uerum omnis ista alterius causae et doloris est quaestio. et quamquam conceptis iam diu in Athanasium odiis suis satisfiat, in maiorem tamen sceleris gradum molitio tanta procedit.

4 (24). Nam tertius mihi locus praestat, ut fidem, quam epistulae primordio condiderunt, fraudulentam, hereticam et uerbis blandientibus ueneno interiore suffusam esse demonstrem. | profitemur enim ita: unum quidem ingenitum esse deum patrem et unum unicum eius filium, deum ex deo, lumen ex lumine, primogenitum omnis creaturae, et tertium addentes spiritum sanctum paracletum, ut, cum securitas legentium uel indoctorum simplicitas

1 (28). Fides fidei conparata falsitatem intentionis exponit.
nam quae apud Nicheam ordinata est, plena atque perfecta est et omnibus undique, quibus inrepere heretici solent, aditibus obseratis inuiolabili inter patrem et filium aeternae unitatis soliditate connectitur; haec uero simplicitate blanditur primum adserens nos ita credere, quod absit a quoquam. ceterum Occidentalium fides euan- 2 gelicis instituta doctrinis patrem in filio, filium confitetur in patre, patrem ingenitum, filium substantia aeternitatis aeternum, id est ut patrem semper, ita et filium semper in patre et natum de deo deum esse, non conceptum, scilicet in eo semper, de quo est.

2 (29). At uero haec perfidia, non fides, 'deum ex deo' dicens et 'primogenitum' commendans et trinitatis nomen instituens uirus suum sub modestia religiosae moderationis obscurat dicens 'deum ex deo', 'lumen ex lumine', ut per occasionem confessionis istius ex deo ac lumine deus ac lumen factus a deo, non genitus de deo, id est non de substantia paternae aeternitatis, extiterit ac sic contumelia patris uilescat et filius, si deus ortus ex nihilo est, in 'primogeniti' uero confessione ordinem quendam ab eius ortu creandis mundi rebus assignent, ut, quia mundus ex tempore est, tamen, licet mundo prior sit, Christus ex tempore sit et non aeternitas in eo ⟨ante⟩ tempora, sed ordo in tempore sit creatis ac per hoc aliquid, quod ante eum sit, relinquatur, qui esse coepit ex tempore, ⟨et⟩ dissoluatur in Christo omne, quod deus est, cum in eo non extantis aliquando Mariae ortus a tempore sit.

3 (30). Quin etiam homines spe omni bona uacui ad occasionem tanti periculi auctoritatem apostolicam pertendunt, quia de eo dictum sit 'primogenitus omnis creaturae', sed subtrahentes antecedentem consequentemque sententiam aptam doctrinis suis sub apostoli nomine perstruunt facultatem. nam talis est ordo dictorum:
qui est imago dei inuisibilis, primoge|nitus f.105v omnis creaturae, quia in ipso constituta sunt omnia in caelis et in terra, uisibilia et inuisibilia siue troni siue dominationes siue principatus siue potestates; omnia per ipsum et in ipso condita sunt et ipse est ante 2 omnes. 'imago' ergo 'dei inuisibilis' ex nihilo, credo, est et coepit a tempore! aut quia 'primogenitus omnis creaturae' est ordo quidam in eo conexae ⟨et⟩ congenitae creationis exprimitur!
sed non sequitur 'primogenitum omnis creaturae': 'quia in ipso constituta sunt omnia in caelis et in terra', id est in ipso uniuersorum elementorum uisibilium et inuisibilium condita et constituta materia est et idcirco 'omnia per ipsum et in ipso'? idcirco
'primogenitus omnis creaturae', quia in eodem iam a principio omnium, quae effecturus erat, omnia generationum initia constiterunt.
atque ita non in ordine creaturarum, quae in ordine constitutae sunt, primus in numero est, sed ipse 'imago dei inuisibilis', manens per uirtutem efficiendi semper in ipso, se primogenitum habuerit eorum, quae per ipsum in caelo et in terra uisibilia et inuisibilia crearentur extantia.

4 (31). Quin etiam haud dissimilis in trinitatis nuncupatione falsitatis eorum contextus est. ubi enim diuersis substantiis filium a patre impio et maledico ore disciderint et in separatis duobus adsistat auctoritas, tertia dinumeratur in spiritu, ut, cum sint pater in filio et filius in patre et spiritus sanctus accipiat ex utroque, in eo, quod spiritus exprimitur sanctae huius ⟨trinitatis⟩ inuiolabilis unitas, heretica parte parturiat trinitas pronuntiata discidium.

5 (32). Sed diligens Nicheni tractatus perfectusque sermo artissimo ueritatis praescripto omnia hereticorum ingenia conclusit ita ponens: credimus in unum deum patrem et in unum filium eius Iesum Christum. 'unum' ambo et uterque 'unum': et in personali nomine patris et in filii 'unum', quia unus est de utroque. 'deum uerum de deo uero' docet et uirtutem et nuncupationem pari in utroque ueritate communem neque aliud in alio opinandum, cum deus de deo et uerus de uero sit uterque unum. cum uero sit in utroque ⟨unum⟩, 2 'natum uero, non factum' ad proprietatem ortus et originis refert, quia fieri ex nullo subiaceat, nasci autem de patre proprium neque alia nascentibus quam originis suae forma uel uirtus est.
06ʳ quod autem fit, ex ope|re existit, ut fiat. atque ita non factura in eo coepit ex nihilo, sed est natiuitas ⟨a⟩ parente. 'unius' autem 3 'cum patre substantiae', quod Graeci dicunt 'omousion', ita est: aeternitas sola sui similis est et, quod est semper, in deo est. ne qua igitur labes in dominum Iesum Christum hereticae prauitatis incideret, idcirco in eo essentiae ueritas explicatur. essentia enim ex eo, quod semper est, nuncupatur. quae quia

Epist. ipsa (357).

106r Dilectissimis fratribus et coepiscopis nostris uniuersis per Orientem constitutis Liberius episcopus urbis Romae aeternam salutem.

Studens paci et concordiae ecclesiarum, posteaquam litteras caritatis uestrae de nomine Athanasi et ceterorum factas ad nomen Iulii bonae memoriae episcopi accepi, secutus traditionem maiorum presbyteros urbis Romae Lucium, Paulum et Helianum e latere meo ad Alexandriam ad supradictum Athanasium direxi, ut ad urbem Romam ueniret, ut in praesenti id, quod de ecclesiae disciplina extitit, in eum statueretur. litteras etiam ad eundem per supradictos 2 presbyteros dedi, quibus continebatur, quod, si non ueniret, sciret se alienum esse ab ecclesiae Romanae communione. reuersi igitur presbyteri nuntiauerunt eum uenire noluisse. secutus denique 3 litteras caritatis uestrae, quas de nomine supradicti Athanasii ad nos dedistis, sciatis his litteris, quas ad unanimitatem uestram dedi, me cum omnibus uobis et cum uniuersis episcopis ecclesiae catholicae pacem habere, supradictum autem Athanasium alienum esse a communione mea siue ecclesiae Romanae et a consortio litterarum et ecclesiasticarum.

EXEMPLUM EPISTULAE ORIENTALIUM EPISCOPORUM, QUAM REUERSIS AB ARIMINO LEGATIS DEDERUNT.

Epist. ipsa.

Dilectissimis fratribus Ursatio, Ualenti, Magdonio, Megasio, Germinio, Gaio, Iustino, Optato, Marciali et ceteris Ariminensis synodi legatis Siluanus, Sofronius, Neo, Erodianus, Patritius, Helpidius, Theophilus, Theodorus, Eumatius, Didimion, Ecdicius, Arsenius, Passinicus, Ualentinus, Eucarpius, Leontius, Eortasius et Macarius in domino salutem.

(1) Unitati nos et uerae paci studentes et ex synodi mandato heresi renitentes manifesta fieri uobis ea, quae circa ecclesiam aguntur, iustum putauimus, ne ignoratio uos socios tantae impietatis efficeret [et], quamquam non nescire uos arbitremur non sine causa totius synodi legatos, episcoporum scilicet numero fere multo amplius centum, nunc usque ingressu huius ecclesiae nosmet ipsos abstinere. 2 ob quod instructos etiam uos esse uolumus, ne penitus dominans iam intra ecclesiam heresis inualescat, quae dominum nostrum Iesum Christum uere filium dei unigenitum, deum de deo, patri similem ausa est denegare, ita ⟨ut⟩, quae praedicationes blasphemiae de unigenito deo et sentiantur ab his et praedicentur, cognitum haberetis. nam et piissimo imperatori Constantio hoc ipsum probauimus et anatematizari haec omnia commotus religiosissime uoluit. dolus autem hic nunc praeparatur, ut Aetius auctor huius haeresis ipse potius, quam haec impietatis dicta damnentur, magis in hominem, quam in doctrinam sententia lata esse uideatur.

Textus narratiuus.

1 (2). His itaque sumptis, quibus et commemoratae superius blasphemiae subnexae erant, calumnia in eum, qui suscepit, intenditur. et tantus detectae fraudulentiae suae hypocritas furor subiit, ut periculum depositionis in eo constituerent. qui conuictae conscientiae dolor est deterreri quemquam agnitione ueritatis! si liber iste Ualentis et Ursacii non est fidei uestrae, quid eius dampnationi non adquiescitis! anne non publico humani generis assensu inter omnes conuenit uenenum malum esse et caedem innocentis crimen esse et impietatem in dominum horrorem esse?
sed quisque haec delata non dampnat, necesse est eorum se studii socium profiteatur, quia nemo est, qui non et, quae oderit, coarguat, et, quae non coarguit, probet. post synodum enim Seleuciensem Con- 2 stantinopolim uenientes, quid est, quod statim dampnatis hereticis uos iungitis, non differtis in aliquo tempus adeundi neque de prudentis ratione consilii aliquam uobis moram ad percunctandum impenditis? adeunt deinde uos non communicantes episcopis legati synodi Orientales, gesta omnia edocent, dominantem quoque haeresim demonstrant. nonne oportuisset uos saltem uel nunc adsistere et cunctarum disceptionum arbitros reseruari? sed 3 nescio cuius uoluntatis uestrae conscientia recti iudicium non recepistis. uestris enim statim adgregamini et blasphemiarum ue-strarum communionem initis. nec id saltem consilii sumitis, sin pudor aliquos fefellisset, Ariminensem synodum aestimari. dolum enim uestrum in non anathematizandis uestris statim prodidistis.

2 (3). Nam in conuentu multorum uos arguentium, cur etiam non creaturam dei filium diceretis, respondistis sanctis Ariminensibus non Christum creaturam negatum fuisse, sed dissimilem ceteris creaturis, | quia in eo, quod dictum sit 'non esse creatum f. 117
uelut ceteras facturas', non ⟨dictum sit⟩, quia creatio non sit, sed excipiatur a ceteris, ut, licet omnino dissimilis ceteris sit, tamen ut ipse aliud non sit, quasi uero ulla creatura aliis sit similis, ut angelus homini, homo aui, auis pecudi. haec si mentior, testes sunt, qui audierunt. quodsi et ipsi tacebunt, loquitur mecum defensus a uobis impiissime liber uester, in quo ut uitrum hyacinto, ita filius 2 patri et deo Christus alienus est. deinde, in quo audientes fefellistis, ut 'non de nullis extantibus sit, sed ex deo', numquid, quia et hoc a uobis dictum sit, simulatio non patuit, cum ideo 'non de nullis extantibus, sed ex deo' secundum uestram professionem sit, quia eidem uoluntas ad id, quod subsistat, exordium fuerit? mentior plane, si non coniuentibus per conuentionem libelli sui Orientalibus dampnastis eos, qui non de substantia habere eum id, quod natus 3 est, sed de uoluntate dixissent. 'aeternum' quoque 'cum patre' esse profitemini. uere sane dixeritis, si non reclamatum mihi esset, cur ante tempora aeterna de uero patre deo uerum unigenitum deum natum praedicassent, ut aeternitas ei cum patre angelorum obstrepentibus. parum istud est. ex biblioteca etiam uestra ad praedicationem impietatis arma sumuntur et bellum aduersus deum

Thraciae, qua dixistis omnes hereses dampnatas esse? in lumen falsitas uestra protracta est; professionis uestrae noctem sol iustitiae praedicatoribus suis prodidit. probatis enim haec et dampnatis et ⟨ad⟩ haereticos transitis. ita, quod antea ad fraudem hominum

TEXTUS NARRATIUUS S. HILARII.

(LIBER I AD CONSTANTIUM).

I.

Epistula syn. Sardicensis (343/4).

1. Benignifica natura tua, domine beatissime Auguste, cum benigna uoluntate concordat et, quoniam de fonte paternae pietatis tuae misericordia largiter profluit, quod rogamus, facile nos impetrare posse confidimus. non solum uerbis, sed etiam lacrimis deprecamur, ne diutius catholicae ecclesiae grauissimis iniuriis afficiantur et intolerabiles sustineant persecutiones et contumelias et, quod est nefarium, a fratribus nostris. prouideat et decernat clementia tua, 2 ut omnes ubique iudices, quibus prouinciarum amministrationes creditae sunt, ad quos sola cura et sollicitudo publicorum negotiorum pertinere debet, a religiosa se obseruantia abstineant neque posthac praesumant atque usurpent et putent se causas cognoscere cleripost Arelatensem synodum, cum Paulinus episcopus tantis istorum sceleribus contraisset, uenire Mediolanium praecipitur. collecta iam illic malignantium synagoga decem diebus ad ecclesiam est uetitus accedere, dum aduersus tam sanctum uirum malitia se peruersa consumit. soporatis deinde consiliis omnibus, ubi libitum est, aduocatur. adest una cum Romanis clericis et Lucifero Sardiniae episcopo. conuentus, ut in Athanasium subscriberet, ait: de sacerdotali 2 fide prius oportere constare; compertos sibi quosdam ex his, qui adessent, heretica labe pollutos. expositam fidem apud Niceam, cuius superius meminimus, posuit in medio spondens omnia se, quae postularent, esse facturum, si fidei professionem scripsissent.

Dionisius Mediolanensis episcopus cartam primus accepit. ubi profitenda scribere coepit, Ualens calamum et cartam e manibus eius uiolenter extorsit clamans non posse fieri, ut aliquid inde gereretur.
res post clamorem multum deducta in conscientiam plebis 3 est, grauis omnium dolor ortus est, inpugnata est a sacerdotibus fides. uerentes igitur illi populi iudicium e dominico ad palatium transeunt. cuiusmodi sententiam in Eusebium longe, antequam ecclesiam ingrederentur, scripserint, de se loquitur ipsa sententia.

9. Sed memento tamen neminem hereticorum esse, qui se nunc non secundum scripturas praedicare ea, quibus blasphemat, mentiatur. hinc enim Marcellus 'uerbum dei' cum legit, nescit. hinc Fotinus 'hominem Iesum Christum' cum loquitur, ignorat. hinc et Sabellius, dum quod et ego et pater unum sumus non intellegit, sine deo patre et sine deo filio est. hinc et Montanus per insanas feminas

EX LIBRO HYMNORUM
SANCTI HILARII QUAE RESTANT.

Felix propheta Dauid primus organi in carne Christum ymnis mundo nuntians.

I.

De Christo deo.

Ante saecula qui manes semperque nate, semper ut est pater! — namque te sine quomodo dici, ni pater est, quod pater sit, potest? —

Bis nobis genite deus, Christe! dum innato nasceris a deo uel dum corporeum et deum mundo te genuit uirgo puerpera:

Credens te populus rogat, hymnorum resonas mitis ut audias uoces, quas tibi concinit aetas omnigena, sancte, gregis tui.

Dum te fida rogat, sibi clemens ut maneas, plebs tui nominis in te innascibilem deum orat, quod maneat alter in altero.

Extra quam capere potest mens humana, manet filius in patre; rursum, quem penes sit pater, dignus, qui genitus est filius in deum.

Felix, qui potuit fide res tantas penitus credulus assequi, ut incorporeo ex deo perfectus fuerit progenitus dei.

Grande loquimur et deum uerum: ut genitor, quicquid inest sibi, aeternae decus gloriae totum in unigenam ediderit deum,

Hinc unus merito bonus ipsum, quod deus est, extra inuidiam sui gigni uellet in alterum
|transformans se, ut est, uiuam in imaginem. f. 14v

Istis uera patet dei uirtus: cum dederit omnia, non tamen ipsis, quae dederit, caret cuncta, quae sua sunt, cum dederit, habens.

Kara progenies dei, connatum cui sit omne decus patris!
nil natae eguit dari, sed natum simul est, quicquid erat dei.

EX TRACTATIBUS IN IOB.

I.

In quadam uero homilia de libro sancti Iob attende, quid dicat, quemadmodum ipsius diaboli aduersus nos indesinens bellum ex hoc fieri asserat, cum ea mala, quae in nobis sunt, excitat contra nos, quod in nostram fieri utilitatem uult docere, conuertente scilicet diuina misericordia malitiam diaboli ad purgationem nostram:

Tanta enim et tam admirabilis, inquit, in nos misericordiae dei bonitas est, ut, per quem in Adae offensa generositatem primae et beatae illius creationis amisimus, per eum rursum id, quod amisimus, obtinere mereamur. tunc enim diabolus inuidens nocuit, nunc autem, cum nocere nititur, uincitur. mouet enim per infirmitatem carnis nostrae omnia potestatis suae tela, cum ad lasciuiam accendit, cum ad ebrietatem illicit, cum ad odia stimulat, cum ad auaritiam prouocat, cum ad caedes instruit, cum ad maledicta exacerbat. sed 2

Panem cotidianum da nobis hodie. quid enim tam uult deus, quam ut cotidie Christus habitet in nobis, qui est panis uitae et panis e caelo? et quia cotidiana oratio est, cotidie quoque ut detur, oratur.

DE EXPOSITIONE EPISTULAE AD TIMOTHEUM.

Sanctus igitur Hilarius in expositione epistolae ad Timotheum sic loquitur:

Nam et cum dicit scriptura: homo Christus et cum dicit:
Christus mortuus est et cum dicit: uerbum caro factum est, non spoliandus est per fraudulentiam legentis expositionibus suis sermo. namque ubi 'homo Christus' est, prae- 2 cedit: mediator dei atque hominum: ex deo homo, utrumque unum et inter hominem et deum medius confessione in se utriusque naturae. ubi 'Christus mortuus', subicitur: qui resurrexit, qui est in dextera dei. in morte eius carnis nostrae infirmitas est, in resurrectione uirtus eius, in con-sessu dei dignitas.

EX OPERE INCERTO.

Ecclesiae catholicae aduersus hereticos acerrimum defensorem uenerandum quis ignoret Hilarium episcopum Gallum? qui cum de Christi carne ageret, attende quid dixerit:

Ergo cum missus est, inquit, in similitudine carnis peccati, non sicut carnem habuit, ita habuit et peccatum. sed quia ex peccato omnis caro est, a peccato scilicet Adam parente deducta, in similitudine peccati carnis est missus existente in eo non peccato, sed peccati carnis similitudine.

EPISTULA AD ABRAM FILIAM.

Dilectissimae filiae Abrae Hilarius in domino salutem.

1. Accepi litteras tuas. intellego desiderantem te mei esse et certe ita habeo. sentio enim, quantum praesentia eorum, qui amantur, optabilis sit. et quia grauem tibi esse absentiam meam scirem, ne me forte impium esse erga te existimares, qui tam diu a te abessem, excusare tibi et profectionem meam et moras uolui, ut intellegeres me non impie tibi, sed utiliter deesse. namque 2 cum te, filia, ut unicam, ita, quantum a me est, et unanimem habeam et uellem te pulcherrimam omnium et sanissimam uiuere, (2) nuntiatum mihi est esse quendam iuuenem habentem ut ante conspectum eius nemo audeat consistere. qui ubi procidisse diligerem, cui hanc uestem atque margaritam quaererem. et inter haec prostratus in faciem fleo plurimum et noctibus ac diebus salus uera est hac ueste uti et hac margarita ornari’. et statim ministris 2 suis praecepit, ut mihi et uestem hanc et margaritam ostenderent.

et confestim ita fit. hanc primum uestem uidi; uidi, filia, uidi, quod eloqui non possum. numquid non sericum secundum subtilitatem eius spartum erat? numquid candori eius niues comparatae colorem. nam nec caeli nec lucis nec maris nec terrae species pulchritudini eius poterat comparari.

De Heptarchia Mystica

Editor's Introduction

This book consists of detailed instructions for communicating with angels and employing their aid for practical purposes. It consists of excerpts, in Grimoire form, from Dr. Dee's detailed records of his "mystical exercises".

This is a transcription from the original in Dee's own handwriting, now found in the British Library under the catalog number Sloane 3191. There have been two other published editions of this text, one by Robert Turner, 1983 revised 1986, and another by Geoffrey James, 1984 and 1994. While I can recommend both of these editions, if one is able to find them, I believe the present edition reflects Dee's manuscript more accurately, as may be seen for example by comparing them with the photograph shown on pg. 28 of Turner's revised edition.

Compare this with Dee's Compendium Heptarchiae Mysticae, an earlier version but with some interesting additions and variations.

This work shall haue relation to tyme present, and present use. To mysteries far exceading it: And finally to a purpose & Intent: whereby the Maiestie and Name of God, shall and may, and, of force, must appeare with the Apparition of his wunders, and mervayles yet unhard of. Dixi	K. Camara, Nouemb. 19, (Sl.3188, pp. 92)
D: Note, As Michael and Uriel, at the begynning of these revealed mysteries, were present, and gaue Authority to Carmara, to order the whole Heptarchicall Reuelation; so, at the Conclusion, they appeared agayn and Raphael with them; and Michael concluded the second boke (of this particular Reuelation Heptarchicall,) with these words following:
Mercifull is our God, and Glorious is his Name: which Chuseth his Creatures, according to his owne secret Iudgment: This Art is the first part of a Threefold Art, Joyning Man, (with the knowledg of 1. the world, 2. the Government of his Creatures, and 3. the Sight of his Maiestie) unto him (O I say unto him,) which is Strength, Medicine, and Mercy to those that feare him.	Michael, Nouemb. 19.
Amen.
Thow hast a work of three proportions in Esse: of Seuen in forme, which is (of it self) diuided by a Number Septenarie. Of the Course, estate, and detemination of things 1. Above, things 2. Next, and Things 3. Below. which of it self, is pure, perfect, and withoute blemish. &c.	Carmara, Nouemb. 21. in appendix of the second boke.

O God, how easy is this first understanding? Thow hast byn told perfectly, plainly, and absolutely, Not onely, the Condition, dignitie, and estate of All things that God hath framed: But allso, withall, Thow wart deliuered, the most pfect forme & use of them. &c.

Carmara, Nouemb. 21.

Euen as God is iust; his Judgments true; his Mercies unspeakable; So are we the True messangers of God: and our words are true in his Mercies for eu.

King Carmara, Nouemb. 17. (Sl.3188, pp. 85)

Glory, (Ô Glory) be to thee, O most high God.

Now you towche the world, and the doings uppon Earth. Now we shew unto you the lower world. The Governors that work and Rule under God. By whome you may haue powre, to work such things, as shalbe to Gods Glory, profyt of your Cuntry, and the knowledg of his Creatures &c. We procede to One God, one knowledg, One Operation. Venite filiae.

Behold these Tables. Herein lye theyr Names, that work under God uppon earth. Not of the wycked, but of the Angels of Light. The whole Government doth consist in the hands of 49(in God his powre, strength, Mercy, and Justice) whose Names are here evydent, excellent, and glorious. Mark these Tables: Mark them, Record them to yor Cumfort. This is the first knowledge. here shall you haue wisdome. Halleluyah. Mighty and Omnipotent art thow, Ô God, God, God, Amongst thy Creatures. Thow fillest all things, with thy excellent foresight. Thy Glory be amongst us, for euer. - D. Amen.

Michael, Aprilis 29, 1582. ".49." (Sl.3188, pp 55-56)

The fowntayne of wisdome is opened: Nature shalbe knowne. Erth with her Secrets discloased. The Elements with their powres iudged &c.

Uriel [Apr 29]

Behold, I teache: There are 4, Angels glorious and excellent: appointed for the Government of all erthly Actions: which 4, do work and dispose the will of the Creator: Limited from the begynning, in strength powre and glory. These shalbe Subject unto you. In the Name and by Invocating uppon the Name of God: who doth lighten, dispose and cumfort you. &c.

Uriel, Aprilis 29, Anno 1582 (Sl.3188, pp 62)

What doth the heaven behold, or the Earth conteyne, that is not, or may be subdued, formed and made by these? What lerning grownded uppon wisdome, with the excellencies in Nature, can not they manifest?
One in heaven they know:
One, and all in Man they know:
One, and all in earth they know.

King Carmara, Novemb. 19, of King Bobogel, his princis Ministers (Sl.3188, pp 91-92)

Measure heaven by a part (my meaning is, by these few). Let God be glorified: his name praised, his CREATION well taken: and his Creatures well used.

He that standeth in the myddst of the Globe signifieth NATURE: whereuppon in the first point, is the use and practise of this work: That is to say, as concerning the first part, for it is sayde: The boke conteyneth Three kinds of knowledges.

Uriel, May 5, Anno 1583. (Sl. 3188, pp 180)

- The knowledge of God truely
- The Number and doing of his Angells pfectly
- The begynning and ending of Nature Substantially.

Cap. 2

Of John Dee, his principall, and in manner peculier Interest, to exercise the Doctrine Heptarchicall.

Ultima est haec aetas vram, quae tibi revelata erit.	Anno 1582 [Uri]el, Nouemb. [15.]
The Mysteries of God haue a tyme: And Behold, Thow art provyded for that tyme.	Michael
The Sonnes of light, and their Sonnes, are Subiect unto my commanndement: This is a Mysterie: I haue spoken of it: Note it thorowghly: They are my Servants. By them, Thow shalt work Marvayles.	Prince Hagonel, Nouemb. 16.
There are kings fals, and uniust, whose powre, as I haue subuerted and destroyed, So shallt Thow. D.	Prince Hagonel, Nouemb. 16.
The second Assembly were the Governors of the earth whose Glory, (Yf they be good) the weapons we haue towght thee (D), will augment, And, Consequently, (yf they be euyll,) pervert.	..em, eodem, tempore.
I am BORNOGO. This is my Seale. This my true Character. What thow desyrest in me, shalbe fullfilled. Glory to God.	Prince Bornogo, Nouemb. 16.
Behold, Behold, lo Behold my mighty powre consisteth in this. Lerne wisdome by my words. This is wrowght for thy erudition what I entrust thee from God. Loke unto thy Chardg truely: Thow art yet dead. Thow shalt be revyved. But oh blesse God truely. The blessing, that God giueth me: I will bestow uppon thee, by omission. Ô how mighty is our God: which walked on the waters: which sealed me with his name: whose Glory is withoute ende. Thow hast written me, but yet dost not know me. Use me in the Name of God: I shall at the tyme appointed be ready. I will Manifest the	Prince Befafes, ...die works of the Seas: And the Miracles of the depe, shall be known.

Behold, thow desyrest, and art syck with desyre: I am the disposer thowgh not the Composer of Gods medicines. Thow desyrest to be cumforted and strengthened in thy labors: I mynister unto thee the Strength of God. What I say is not of my self: Neither that which is sayde to me, is of them selves: but it is sayde of him wch liueth for euer. These Mysteries hath God lastly, and of his great Mercyes grannted unto thee. I haue answered thy dowting mynde. Thow shailt be glutted, yea filled: yea thow shalt swell and be puffed up with the perfect knowing of Gods mysteries in his Mercies.

Carmara, 17. Nouemb.

Abuse them not. Be faithfull: Use Mercy: God shall enriche the: Banish wrath: yt was the first* and greatest Commanndment. I Rayngne by him, and lyve by him, which rayneth and liueth for euer.

* Annael gaue me that commanndement Anno 1581: in the preface, as it were, of all those Actions.

I haue shewed thee perfectly: Behold I teach thee againe: O how mercifull is god, that revealeth so great Secrets to flesh and blud. Thow hast 42 letters. Thy Tables last, conteyne so many &c.

King Carmara. die 17 Nouemb.

King Carm. eodem temp.

In owtward sense, my words are true: I speak now of the use of one of the first, that I spake of, or Manifested yesterday. Sayd I not, And shewed I not, which had the government of princes for as it is a Mysterie to a farder matter, So is it a purpose to a present use. Yf it Rule worldly princis: how much more shall it work, with the princis of Creation? Thow desyrest use. I teach use. And yet the Art is to the farder understanding of all Sciences, that are past, present or yet to come. frute hath farder vertue, then onely in the eating: Gold his farder condition, property and quality, then in melting, or common use. Kings there are in Nature, with Nature, and above Nature. Thow art Dignified. &c.

One thing I answer thee, for all offycis. Thow hast in subiection all officis. Use them whan it pleas thee, and as thy Instruction hath byn.

The Lord sayeth, I haue hardened the hart of One of you.

Uriel, Aprilis 23. Anno

yea I haue hardened him, as the flynt, and burnt him togither with the ashes of a Cedar. To the intent he may be proved Just in my work: and great in the Strength of my Glory. Neyther shall his mynde consent to the wyckednes of Iniquity. for, from Iniquitie I haue Chosen him to be a first Erthly witnes of my Dignitie. 1583.

D - Uriel cam-in agayne, and an other with him, and lointly they two sayde togither, Glorify God for euer. And now Uriel stode behynde and the other sat down in the chayr , with a sword in his right hand. All his hed glistred like the sonne: the heare of his hed was long. he had wyngs: and all his lower partes seamed to be with feathers. He had a robe over his body, and a great light in his left hand. he sayd We are blessed from the begynning and blessed be the Name of God for euer.

D - An innumerable Cumpany of Angels were abowt him: And Uriel did leane on the square table by. he that sat in the Chayre, sayde then Go forward. God hath blessed thee.

Michael, his manner of apparition.

I will be thy Gwyde.

Michael, Marty 11. Anno 1582.

The Angels under my powre shalbe at thy Commanndement

Thow shalt see me

I wilbe seen of thee

And I will direct thy liuing and Conversation

Put up thy penne.

D - Now Michael thrust out his right arme, with the sworde. And bad the Skryer to loke. Then the Sword did seame to cleave in two. And a great fyre flamed out of it vehemently. Then he tok a Ring out of the flame of his sworde, and gave it to Uriel, and sayde, The strength of God is unspeakable. Praysed be God for euer, and euer: D - Then Uriel did make cursy to him.

Michael, Marty 14.

The Ring

Mich. - After this sort must thy ring be: Note it. &c.

I will reveale the thys Ring: which was never revealed since the death of Salomon with whome I was present. I was present with him, in strength, and Mercy. Lo this it is. This it is, wherewith, All Miracles and diuine works and wonders were wrowght by SALOMON. This it is which I haue revealed unto thee. This it is, which Philosophie dreameth of. This it is which the Angels skarse know. This it is: and blessed be his name: yea his name be blessed for euer. &c.

D - Then he layd the Ring down uppon the Table: and sayd, Note.

D - I noted the manner of the Ring in all points.

D - After that he threw the Ring down uppon the Table and it seamed to fall throwgh the Table.

Michael - So shall it do at thy Commanndement. Without this, Thow shalt do Nothing. Blessed be his Name, that cumpasseth all things. Wonders are in him, and his Name is wonderfull. His Name worketh wonders, from Generation, to Generation:

Michael

Nothing to be done without the Ring.

Mich - Note - D Then he browght-in the seale, which he shewed the other day: And opened his Sword: and bad the Skryer, Reade: and he Red, EMETH - D - Then the Sworde cloased up againe: and Michael sayd - This I do open unto thee; bycause, Thow Marvayldst at Sigillum Dei, This is the Name of the seale: which be blessed for euer. This is the seale self. This is holy: This is pure. This is for euer. Amen.

ende. All the rest thow mayst use to Gods glory. for euery one of them, shall minister to thy Necessities.

Moreover whan thow workest, thy feete must be placed uppon these Tablets, which thow seest wrytten last, comprehending 42 letters and Names. But with this Consideration: that the first Character (which is the first of the 7, in thy former boke), be placed uppon the top of the Table; which thow wast, and art, and shalt be commannded to haue, and use.

The Table

Last of all the Ryng: which was appointed thee: with the Lamine comprehending the forme of thy own name: which is to be made in perfect Gold: as is afforesayd.

The Characters of the kings are in the Globe; And of the Princis, in the Heptagonon.

K. Carmara, Nouemb. 21.

The Sonns of light, and their Sonns, are Subiect unto my Commanndement. This is a mysterie. I haue spoken of it. Note it throwghly. They are my Servants. By them, thow shalt work mervayles. My tyme is yet to come. The Operation of the earth is Subiect to my powre. And I am the first of the twelve. My Seale is called Barees: and here it is.

Prince Hagonel, Nouemb. 16.

In his Name, with my Name, by my Character, & the rest of my Ministers, are these things browght to passe. These that lye heare are witches, enchanters, deceyvers & blasphemers. And finally all they that use Nature with Abuse: and dishonor him which raigneth for euer.

P. Hagonel, eodem tempore

Note. Prince Butmono sayd this: but the office is under king Bnaspol, whose prince is Blisdon. The Mystery of this I know not yet: For Blisdon will be fownd to be the proper minister of king Bnaspol. Vide Anno 1583 May 5, of the Making of Mensa faeders, and my Golden Lamine.

The Second Assembly, were the Governers of the earth whose Glory yf they be good, the weapons which we haue towght thee will augment: And Consequently, (yf they be evyll,) will pervert.

The Third Assembly are those, which taste of Gods Mysteries, and drink of the Juyce of Nature: whose myndes are diuided: Some with eyes looking toward Heaven: The rest to the Center of the Erth. Vbi non Gloria, nec Bonitas, nec Bonum est. It is wrowght, (I say) it is wrowght (for thy understanding) by the Seven of the Seven, which were the Sonns of Sempiternitie. whose Names thow hast written, and Recorded to Gods glory.

Mark this: All Spirits enhabiting within the Erth: where their Habitation is of force, not of wyll: (Except the Myddst of my self, which I know not) are Subiect to the Powre herof [pointing to his seale] with this, you shall Govern: Wyth this you shall unlok: with this, (in his name who raigneth) you shall discover her entrayles.

Carmara, Nouemb. 17.

Whan thow wilt work for any thing appertayning unto the estate of a good king. Thow must call uppon him, which is theyr Prince. Secondly the Ministers of his Powre are Six: whose Names conteyn 7 letters apece. As thy Tables do manifest. By whome in generalty, or by any one of them, in particularitie: Thow shalt work for any Intent or purpose. As concerning the letters, particularly, They do concerne, the Names of 42. which 42, in generally or One of them, do and can work, the destruction, hindrance or annoyance, of the estate, Condition, or degree (as well for body as government) of any wicked, or yll liuing Prince. &c.

the liuing and semp adherent Minister to K. Baligon: and his name is exprest in his Character, vide Novemb. 21. Anno 1582.

Leave oute the Bees of the 7 names of the 7 kings, and 7 Princis And place them in a Table diuided by 12 and 7, The 7 spaces being uppermost. And therin write in the upper lyne, the letters of the king, with the letters of his Prince following next after his name. And so of the Six other, and theyr Princis. And read them on the right hand, from the upper part to the lowest. And thow shalt fynde, then, the Composition of this Table.

Therin, they are all comprehendedi saving certayne letters, :which are not to be put-in here: By reason that the Kings & Princis do spring from God: And Not God from the Kings and Princis. Which excellency is comprehended: and is allso manifest, in that Third and fowrth Number.

Rownd abowte the sides [of this square Table] is every letter of the 14 Names, of the 7 kings and princis.

Hereafter, Shall you perceiue, that the Glory of this Table surmownteth the Glory of the Sonne. All things els that appertayne unto it, are all ready prescribed by yor former Instruction.

God is the begynning of all things, but not after One soft: Nor to euery one alike. But it is Three manner of works with his Name.

- The one, in respect of Dignification
- The Second, in respect of Conciliation
- The Third, in respect of an ende, and determined Operation.

Aprilis 29. 1583: dignification.

Now Sir, to what ende wold you weare yor Character? &c. But how do I teach? The Character is an Instrument appliable Onely to dignification. But there is no Dignification (Syr) but that which doth procede, and hath his perfect Composition Centrally, in the Square Number of 3 and 4. The Centre wherof shall be equall to the greatest. Hereby you may gather, Not onely to what ende, the Blessed Character (wherewith thow shalt be dignified) is Prepared: But allso the Nature of all other Characters.

To the Second - D - Conciliation, you meane.

Conciliation

Il - The Table is an Instrument of Conciliation. And so are the other 7 Characters, which you call by the Name of Tables:

Squared out into the forme of Armes: which are propre to euery King and Prince, according to theyr order.

Now to the last - D - As concerning the ende & determyned Operation - Il - It onely consisteth in the Mercy of God, & the Characters of these* bokes. &c.

Set downe the Kings, and theyr Princis, in a Table, as thow Knowest them: with theyr letters backward (excepting theyr Bees) from the right hand to the left. Let Bobogel be the first, and Bornogo his Prince. &c.

D - Note, here, it may appere that Butmono is Prince to Bynepor, and Blisdon prince to King Bnaspol.

D Note.

D - So, on my Character or lamyne of signification: are all the names of the 7 kings, and of the 7 Princis, perfectly: as in the great Table, (called often tymes Mensa Faederis) the Bees, onely, (being the first letter common to them all) kept bak, in memory.

De sigillo AEmeth; alr, vocato Sigillo Dei.

Michael, 1582, Marty 19.

Michael - I will shew thee, in the mighty hand and strength of God, what his Mysteries are: The true Circle of his Æternitie: comprehending all Vertue: The whole and Sacred Trinitie: Oh holy be he: Oh Holy be he: Oh holy be he.

D - Uriel answered, Amen.

Mich - Now, what wilt thow? - D - I wold full fayne procede according to the Matter in hand.

Mich - Diuide this owtward Circle into 40 equall partes: whose greatest numbers are 4. See thow do it presently - D: I did so. diuiding it first into 4; and then every of them, into 10.

D - he called one by name Semiel. One came in, and kneled down: and great fyre, came out of his mowth, Michael sayd, To him are the Mysteries of these Tables known. Michael sayd, Semiel, (againe) and by & by he annexed, O God thow hast sayde, and thow liuest for euer. &c. Semiel stode up and flaming fyre cam out of his mowth, and than he saide, as followeth.

Semiel - Mighty Lord, what woldst thow with the Tables?

Michael - It is the will of God, thow fatch them hither.

Sem - I am his Tables. Behold, these are his Tables, Lo where they are.

There cam-in 40 white Creatures, all in white Silk long robes; And they like Children. And all they, falling on their knees, sayde:

Thow onely, art Holy among the Highest: O God, thy Name be blessed for euer.

D - Michael stode up out of his Chayre: and by & by, All his leggs to be like two great Pillers of Brasse: & he as high, as half way to heven. And by and by, his Sworde was all on fyre: And he stroke or drew his sword over all these 40 their heds. The Earth quaked. And the 40 fell downe. And Michael called Semiel with a Thundring voyce: and sayde, Declare the Mysteries of the liuing God: our God: of One that liueth for euer. Michael, 1582, Marty 19.

Sem - I am ready.

D - Michael stroke ouer them with his sword: and they all fell downe (and Uriel allso) on his knees. And commonly at the striking with the sworde, flaming fyre, like lightening, did flash with all.

Michael - Note: Here is a Mysterie.

D - Then stept furth, One of the 40, from the rest: & opened his breast, which was covered with Sylk, and there appeared a great all of Gold.

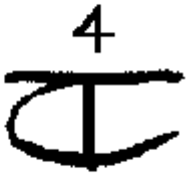
Michael - Note the number - D - over the T, stode the Number of 4, on this fashion:



D - The 40, all, cryed: Yt liueth, and Multiplyeth for euer: Blessed be his Name.

D - That Creature did shut up his bosome, and vanished away like a fyre.

Michael - Place that, in the first place: It is the Name of God.

D - Then there seamed a great Clap of thunder to be.

And so furth: And note that the whole Second boke is Nothing els but the Mysteries most Mervaylous of Sigillum Dei: otherwise called Sigillum AEmeth. wherof here I did but leave a little admonishement. Note farder, Almost all the Third boke, was of the 7 Ensignes of Creation. wherof mention was here before made.

D - The Chayre was browght-in againe: and I axed what it ment?

Uriel - This is a Seal of perfection: from which, Things shalbe shewed unto thee, which thow hast long desyred.

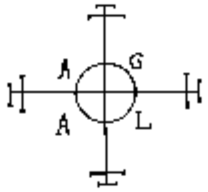
D - Than was a square Table browght into the Stone. and I demanded, what that Table betokened.

Uriel - A Mysterie not yet to be knowne. These two shall remayne in the stone, to the sight of all undefyled Creatures.

You must use a fowre-square Table; Two Cubits square. whereuppon must be set Sigillum Dei: &c. [alr Diuinitatis?]

This Seale must not be loked uppon, without great Reverence and devotion. This Seale is to be made of perfect wax.

This Seale must be , ynches square [D: or diameter.] The rowndness must be 27 ynches, and somwhat More. The thiknes of it must be, an ynch, and a half quarter. And a figure of a Crosse, must be on the backside of it, made thus:



The Table is to be made of swete wood: & of two Cubits high: with 4 fete with 4 of the former seales under the 4 feete. Under the Table did seame to be layde red sylk two yards square. And over the Seale, did seame likewise red Silk to lye fowr-square: broader then the Table, hanging down with 4 knopps or Tassels, at the 4 Corners therof.

Uppon this uppermost red Sylk, did seme the Stone with the frame, to be set: right over and uppon the Principall Seale: Saving that the red Sylk, was betwene the one, & the other.

D - There appeared the first Table covered, with a cloath of Sylk changeable cullour, Red & greene, with a white Cloth under it: all hanging very low.

Caput 4.

Some Notice of peculier formes, and attire, wherein, the Kings, Princis and Ministers Heptarchicall appeared, and of some their Actions, and gestures at their apperance. &c.

King CARMARA

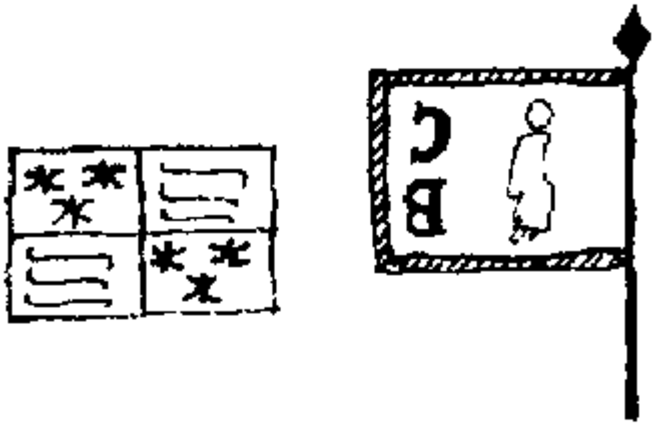
This king, (being called first by Uriel,) appeared, as a Man, very well proportioned: clad in a long purple Robe: and with a Triple Crowne of Gold on his hed.

At his first coming he had 7 (like men) wayting on him: which afterwarde declared them selves to be the 7 Princis Heptarchicall. Uriel deliuered unto this king (at his first appearing) a rod or straight little rownd Staff of Gold: diuided into three equall distinctions, whereof, two were dark or blak: and the third bright red. This red he kept still in his hand.

This king onely, was the ordrer, or disposer, of all the doctrine, which I terme Heptarchicall. as first, by calling the 7 Princis and after that, the 7 kings: and by giving instructions for use and Practise of the whole doctrine Heptarchicall for the first purpose, and frute therof to be enjoyed by me: of the two other there was onely Mention made.

King CARMARA sayd, Ecce signum operis

King CARMARA



There appered these two letters, eversed and aversed on a white flag: and a woman standing by: whose armes did not appere. On the other side appered the armes of england. The flag old.

Prince HAGONEL

Prince HAGONEL

Note. All the Princis, seemed to be men, and to haue red Robes, but this Prince, his Robe was shorter then the others. All the Princis, had Cerclets, of Gold on theyr heds: not crowns nor Coronets. This Prince held in the palme of his right hand, as yf it had byn a rownd ring, with a prick in the mydst: hanging allso over his myddle fingers. which he affirmed to be his seale: and sayd the name of it, to be Barees: and that it is ☉.

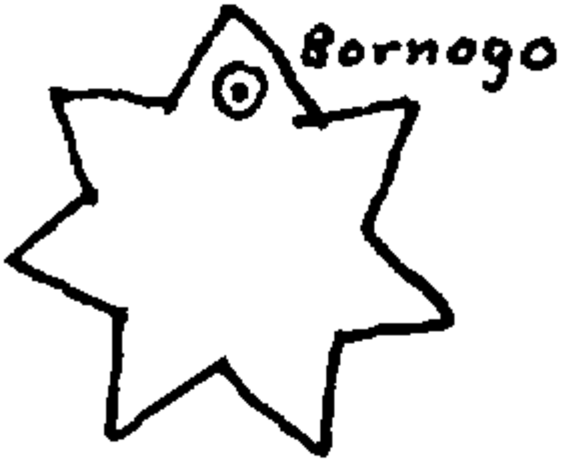
All the Princis held up to gither, Heptagonon stellare, (as I terme it) and it seamed to be of Copper.

Subiects and servants of Prince Hagonel.

The Sonnes of light and theyr Sonnes are Subiect unto his commanndement, and are his Servants.

7 Filij Lucis: I Ih Ilr Dmal Heeoa Beigia Stimcul: In Sigillo

7 Filij Fili.: El An Aue Liba Rocle Hagonel Ilemese: Emeth



Filij Lucis - Anno 1582, Marty 21.

The 7 Filij Lucis, appeared, like 7 yong men, all with bright countenances, white apparaled: with white silk on theyr heds, pendant behinde with a wreth down to the grownd. all apparayled of one sort. Euery one seamed to haue a metalline Ball in his hand: the first of Gold; the Second of Siluer; The 3 of Coper; The 4th of Tynne; The 5th of Iern; the 6th tossed betwene his two hands, a rownd thing of quick syluer; The last had a ball of lead. The first had on his brest a rownd Tablet of Gold: and on it written a great I. And the second on his golden Tablet had his name also written. And every one orderly comming furth, shewed theyr names uppon their golden Tablets: At theyr departing they made cursy & mownted up to heven ward:

Filij Filiorum - Appeared like 7 little Children, like boyes covered all with purple, with hanging sleves, like preists, or scholers gown sleves: theyr heds attyred all after the former manner with purple Sylk. They had three cornered Tablets on their brests: and the Tablets seemed to be very greene. and on them, the letters of their names written. The first had two letters, made in one thus, of E and L:
They made reverence to Michael (who had called both the first & these) and so mownted up to heven ward. At the Call of King Carmara; (in the Second handling of this Heptarchicall doctrine) whan he sayd, Venite, Repetamus Opera Dei, Appered Prince Hagonel: and after that, uppon the Globe his Convex Superficies, appeared 42: who sayd, Parati sumus servire Deo nro. Eche of these, had somewhat in theyr hands: and they stode in this order, and Hagonel seamed to embrace the Cumpany.

Six of these seamed more glorious then the rest: & theyr coates longer: and had Cerclets of Gold, abowt theyr heds: and held in theyr hands perfect Crownes of Gold. The Second Six had three quarters of Croens in theyr hands: The third six haue robes or clothes in theyr hands: All the rest seamed to haue balls of Gold: which they tosse from one to another. But at the Catching, they seame empty wynde Balls: for they gripe them cloasing theyr hands, as yf they were not solid, but empty like a blown bladder. The first six made cursy to Prince Hagonel. The second six made cursy to the first, & the Third to the Second: And they all, and Prince Hagonel made Cursy, to king CARMARA.

Eche of these uppon the place of theyr Standing, made a Table and every Table had but one letter. The first of the first Six did go away, and in his Table appered an O. & so of the rest: but note that the Third six cowred down, & was loath to shew their Tables: but at length did.

The Third row, went of lamenting: being comannded by the Prince, All parted, in fyre, falling into the Globe.

The fifth Row did Synk into the Globe, euery one in a sundry fyre by him self. The sixth fell with smoke, down into the Globe.

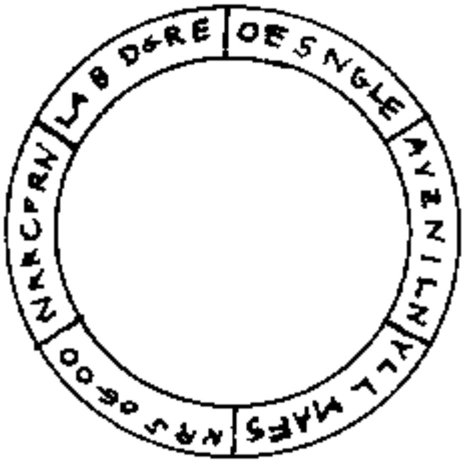
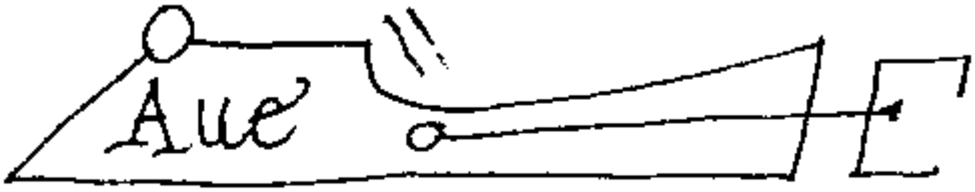
K. Carmara sayde Remember how they stode when they were secondly disposed unto thee. They stode first in Six Rowes: and next they were turned into 7. I speak of the greater Number & not of the lesser. In speaking of the greater I haue comprehended the lesser.

D - Note. K. Car. There are but 6 Names that are in Subiection unto the Prince: The first 7 next him: are those which held the fayr & bewtifull Crownes. The first 7 are called by those names that thow seest: O E S &c.

D - Note. This diversity of Reckening by 6, and by 7, I can not yet well reconcyle. ------



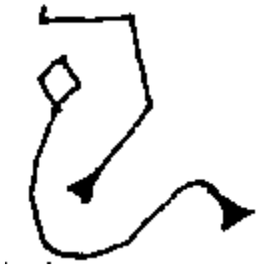
King BOBOGEL



Appeared in a black veluet coat: And his hose close rownd hose, with veluet upperstocks: overlayde with gold lace: On his hed a veluet hatcap: with a black feather in it: with a Cape hanging on one of his sholders. His purse hanging abowt his neck: and so put under his gyrdell at which hong a gylt rapier. his beard was long he had plinufles & pynsions. And he sayd, I weare these robes not in respect of my self, but of my government: &c.

Prince BORNOGO

Appeared in a red Robe, with a Gold Cerclet on his hed: he shewed his Seale, and sayde, This it is.



Ministers: 42:

Seven of the Ministers are apparayled like Bobogel the king: sagely and gravely. All the rest are allmost ruffen or roysterlike. Som are like to be men and wemen. for in the forepart they seamed wemen, and in the bakpart men, by theyr apparayle: And they were the last 7. They dannsed, lept, & kissed. They cam afterward into a Circle: the Sage & the rest: But the Sage stand all togither.

The first of the Sage lift up his hand a loft, and sayde, Faciamus secundum voluntatem Dei: Ille Deus noster, est vere Nobilis et aeternus.

He pluckt up his right fote, and under it appered an L. & of the rest in like manner, appered theyr letters or names.

1. The first 7 grew all togither in a flame of fyre, and so sonk down into the Transparent fyry Globe of the New World.

2. The second 7 fell down like drops of Mettall.

3. The Third 7 Clasp togither, & fall down in a thik smoke.

4. The 4th Seven, ioyne togither, and vanish like drops of water.

5. The fifth 7, fall down like a storme of haile.

6. The last vanished away.

At an other tyme, they cam (being called by King Carm.) all 42 bringing a rownd Table over their heds flatwise: and then they layd it down & stode abowt it: the letters being as before.

Cap. 5:

Oratio, ad Deum, singulis diebus, tribus vicibus, ter dicenda.

O Almighty, Eternall, the True and huing GOD: O King of Glory: O Lord of Hoasts: O thow, the Creator of Heaven, and Erth, and of all things visible and Invisible: Now, (euen now, at length,) Among other thy manifold mercies used, and to be used, toward me, thy simple servant John Dee, I most humbly beseche thee, in this my present petition to haue mercy uppon me, to haue pitie uppon me, to haue Compassion uppon me: Who, faithfully and sincerely, of long time, haue sowght among men, in Earth: And allso by prayer, (full oft, and pitifully,) haue made sute unto thy Diuine Maiestie for the obteyning of some convenient portion of True Knowledg and understanding of thy lawes, and Ordonances, established in the Natures and propreties of thy Creatures: By which Knowledg, Thy Diuine Wisdome, Powre and Goodnes, (on thy Creatures bestowed, and to them imparted,) being to me made manifest, might abundantly instruct, furnish, and allure me, (for the same,) incessantly to pronownce thy praises, to render unto the, most harty thanks, to avaunce thy true honor, and to wynne unto thy Name, some of thy due Maiesticall Glorie, among all people, and foe euer. And, whereas, it hath pleased the, (O God,) of thy infinite Goodnes, by thy faithfull, and holy Spirituall Messagers, to deliuer unto me, long since, (throwgh the eye, and eare of E.K.) An Orderlie forme, and manner of Exercise HEPTARCHICAL: How, (to thy Honor and Glory, and the Cumfort of my owne poore sowle, and of others thy faithfull servants,) I may, at all tymes, use very many of thy good Angels, theyr Cownsailes and helps; according to the propieties of such their Functions, and Offices, as to them, by thy Diuine Powre, wisdome and Goodnes, is assigned, and limited: (Which Orderly forme, and manner of Exercise, Untyll euen now, I never fownd so urgent Opportunitie, and extream Necessitie, to apply my self unto,) Therefore, I thy poore, and Simple Servant, do, most humbly, hartylie, and faithfully beseche thy Diuine Maistie, most lovingly and fatherly to favor: and by thy Diuine Beck to furder this my present industrie and endevour to Exercise my self, according to the foresaid Ordrely forme and manner:

And, Now, (At length, but not to late,) for thy dearly beloued Sonne IESVS CHRIST his sake, (O Heavenly Father,) to grannt allso unto me, this blessing, and portion of thy heavenly Graces: That thow wilt, furthwith, enhable me, make me apt, and Acceptable, (in body sowle, and Spirit,) to enioye allwayes the Holy and frendly Conversation, with the Sensible, playne, full, and perfect Help, (in word, and dede,) of thy Mighty, wise, and Good Spirituall Messagers and Ministers Generally: And, Namely, of Blessed Michael, Blessed Gabriel, Blessed Raphael, and Blessed Uriel; And, Allso Especially, of all those, which do appertaine, unto the HEPTARCHICAL Mysterie: Isagogically, (as yet,) and very breifly, unto me declared: under the Method of Seuen Mighty Kings, and their Seven faithfull and Princely Ministers, with their Subjects, and Servants, to them belonging. And in this thy great Mercie, and Grace, on me bestowed, and to me Confirmed, (O Almighty God,) thow shalt, (to the great cumfort of thy faithfull servants,) approve, to thy very enemies, and myne, the Truth and certaintie of thy manifold most mercifull promises, heretofore, made unto me: And that Thow, arte the True and Almighty God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, (uppon whome, I do Call: and in whome, I put all my trust,) And thy Ministers, to be the True, and faithfull Angels of light: which haue, hitherto, principally, and according to thy Diuine Providence, dealt with us: And, allso, I, thy poore, and simple Servant, shall, than, In, and By thee, be better hable to serve thee, according to thy well pleasing: to thy Honor and Glory: Yea, even in these most miserable, and lamentable Dayes. Graunt, Oh graunt, O our Heavenly father, graunt this, (I pray thee,) for thy onely begotten Sonne IESVS CHRIST, his sake: Amen, Amen, Amen.

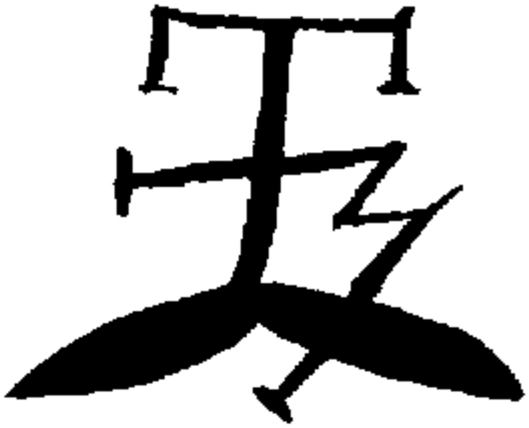
Prince BRALGES

Who saydst, The Creatures liuing in thy Dominion are subiect to thy own powre: whose subiects are Invisible: And which (to my seer) appeared, like little smokes, without any forme, Whose seale of Gouernment is this:



Who saydst, Beholde, I am Come: I will teache the Names without Numbers. The Creatures subiect unto me, shall be known unto you. Therfore, In the Name, &c.

TVESDAYE:

King BABALEL

Who art King in Waters: Mighty and wunderfull in waters: Whose Powre is in the bowells of the waters. whose Royall person with thy Noble Prince BEFAFES, and his 42 Ministers, The Triple Crowned King CARMARA bad me use to the glory, prayse, and honor of him, which created you all, to the laude and prayse of his Maiesty. Therfore, In the Name, &c.

Prince BEFAFES

Who art Prince of the Seas: Thy Powre is uppon the waters. Thow drownedst Pharao: and hast destroyed the wycked. Thy Name was known to Moyses. Thow liuedst in Israel: who hast measured the waters: who wast with King Salomon: and allso long after that with Scotus: but not known to him by thy true Name: for he called the Mares. And since thow wast with none: Except, when, thow preservedst me, (throwgh the Mercy of GOD) from the powr of the wicked: and wast with me in extremities. Thow wast with me throwghly. Who, of the Egyptians, hast byn called OBELISON: in respect of thy pleasant deliuerance. And by that Name, to me knowne: and of me Noted in Record, to be the Noble and Curteous OBELISON: Whose Noble Ministers 42, are of very great powre, dignitie and Authoritie. As some in the Measuring of the motions of the waters, and saltnes of the seas: in giving good success in battayles, reducing ships, and all manner of vessells, that fleete uppon the seas. To some, all the fishes, and Monsters of the seas, yea, all, that liueth therin, are well knowne: And Generally, are the Distributers of Gods Judgments uppon the Waters, that couer the Earth. Other do beautify Nature in her Composition. The rest are distributers and Deliuerers of the Threasores, and unknown substances of the Seas. Thow, O Noble Prince BEFAFES, badst me use thee, in the Name of GOD. Therfore, In the Name, &c.

WEDDENSDAYE:

King BNASPOL

To whome, the Earth with her bowells, and secrets whatso-euer are deliuered: and hast sayd to me, heretofore, What thow art; There, I may know. Thow art great, but, (as Thow, truely diddst confess,) He in whome Thow art, is greater than thow: Therfore, In the Name, &c.

Prince BLISDON

Unto whome, the keyes of the Mysteries of the Earth, are deliuered. Whose 42 Ministers, are Angels, that govern under thee. All which, thy Mighty King BNASPOL bad me use: and affirmed, that they are, and shall be at my Commanndement: Therfore, In the Name, &c.

THVRSDAYE:

King BYNEPOR

Uppon the distribution, and participation of whose exalted most especiall and glorified Powre, resteth onely and dependeth the generall state and condition of all things. Whose sanctification Glory and renowne, allthowgh it had begynning, yet can it not, neyther shall haue ending. He that measureth sayd, and thow wast the Ende of his workmanship. Thow art like him, and of him: yet not as partaking or adherent, but distinct in One degree. Whan he came, Thow wast Magnified by his comming: and art Sanctified, world without ende, Vita Suprema, Vita Superior, Vita Infima tuis sunt mensurata manibus.

Notwithstanding, --

Thow art not of thy self: Neyther is thy powr thyne owne: Magnified be his Name. Thow art in all: And All hath some being by the: Yet thy powre is Nothing, in respect of his powre, which hath sent thee. Thow begynnest new Worlds, new people, New Kings, and New knowledg of a New government. And hast sayd to me, Thow shalt work Mervaylous, Mervaylously, by my workmanship, in the Highest. Therfore, In the Name, &c.

Prince BVTMONO

Who art life and breath in liuing Creatures: All things liue by thee: the Image of One excepted. All the kindes of beasts of the Earth, dost thow endue with life. Thy seale is theyr glory. Of God, thow art sanctified: And thow reioysest. The liuing, the ende, and begynning of all beasts, thow knowest: and by sufferance, thow disposest them, untyll thy Vyoll be runne.

Therfore, In the Name, &c.

FRYDAYE:

King BALIGON

Who canst distribute, and bestow at pleasure, all that what-so-euer can be wrowght in æreall Actions. Who hast the government of thy self perfectly, as a Mysterie known unto thy self. Who didst aduertise me of this stone, and holy Receptacle: both nedefull to be had: and allso didst direct me to the taking of it up: being presently, and in a few minutes of tyme, browght to my light, (from the Secret of the Depth, where it was hid, in the uttermost part, of the Roman possession,) Which stone, Thow warnedst me, that No mortall hand, but myne own, shold toughe: and saydst unto me, Thow shalt prevayle with it, with Kings, and with all the Creatures of the world. whose beautie in vertue shalbe more worth then the Kingdomes of the Erth. For the which purposes, here rehersed, and other: partely, now to be exercised, and enioyed; and partely, hereafter, more abundantly, (As the Lord God of Hoasts shall dispose) And Allso bycause thow thy self art Governour of the 42 thy Mighty, faithfull and Obedient Ministers: Therfore, In the Name, &c.

The Key to SOLOMON´S KEY

SECRETS OF MAGIC AND MASONRY

LON MILO DUQUETTE

Praise for "The Key to Solomon's Key" by Lon Milo DuQuette:

"Imagine Dan Brown – on Steroids! Modern occultist and freemason Lon DuQuette reveals the most dangerous secret in the world, the blasphemous heresy that undermines millennia of superstition. This carefully guarded knowledge once caused the medieval Knights Templar to stamp upon a Crucifix to redeem fallen humanity. Learn the Masonic teaching by which the human spirit may be elevated – without ignoring either historical reality or scientific fact."
— James Wasserman author of The Templars and the Assassins: The Militia of Heaven and The Mystery Traditions: Secret Symbols and Sacred Art

"This intriguing look at intersections between Freemasonry and the Western magical traditions will be sure to evoke outrage from many quarters, but it poses crucial questions that deserve close attention from Masons, magicians, and anyone else concerned with the nature of religion and reality in a post-Christian age."
— John Michael Greer, 32° author of Inside a Magical Lodge, The New Encyclopedia of the Occult and A World Full of Gods

"A spoonful of humor helps the Mysteries go down in the most delightful way. It is a very rare treat when someone can lay out the secrets of the universe in a clear and user-friendly way and manage to make me laugh while doing it. Lon's writing spans the seeming abyss between occult education and pop entertainment, finding the dark and fascinating heart of these timeless mysteries and helping the reader transmute them into a better understanding of this arcane temple known as the universe. In The Key to Solomon's Key, Lon brings his unique insight and eerie authority to bear on what might be the most dangerous and inflammatory occult secret of all time. This book is sure to bring Lon to the forefront of an evolving new plateau of understanding about our own past, present and future. Also, I wouldn't stand next to him in any open market or public gathering places for awhile ..."
— Chance Gardner writer/producer of the Magical Egypt series and author of Cribnotes from the Invisible College: Please don't squeeze the Shaman

"Like a good friend sneaking you into the hidden crypts and showing you the secret text, Lon Milo DuQuette brings you into the mysteries of the magic. More importantly, his humor, insight and personal experiences help you understand the big picture and apply it to your life in profound ways."
— Christopher Penczak author of The Inner Temple of Witchcraft and The Instant Magick

"As the master transformer of dense esoteric literature into terrifically accessible and interesting nonfiction, author Lon Milo DuQuette in The Key to Solomon's Key: Secrets of Magic and Masonry, gives us his best offering to date. Here we are guided on a first-hand tour through the inner sanctums of so-called "Solomonic Magic." Uniquely, the view is highly trustworthy coming as it does from an actual practitioner and scholar of the subject matter involved; DuQuette just happens to be a wonderful storyteller to boot. Included are the connective tissues of early Christianity, the Knights Templars, Freemasonry, Kabbalah, Hermeticism, Alchemy, and Magic. In The Key to Solomon's Key, the reader is always treated respectfully with the reasoned insights of a modern investigator of truth and consciousness. The cheaper sort of phantasmagoria that often follows popular occult myths is exorcised out of this highly credible and readable accounting. The book, however, carries a ticking religious time-bomb of historic proportions just waiting to explode. The implications for our times are provocative."
— Arthur Rosengarten, Ph.D.
author of Tarot And Psychology: Spectrums of Possibility and Tarot Of The Nine Paths: A Guide For The Spiritual Traveler.

"For those of us lacking the resources to excavate occult secrets hidden beneath the Louvre, CIA Headquarters or Rosslyn Chapel, The Key to Solomon's Key is the next best thing. These pages reveal the true secrets of Solomon, from Masonry to magic. Lon Milo DuQuette's experience and learning make this fascinating journey through the history of the Bible, Knights Templar, Freemasons, and the Goetia all the more striking because it is real. Add Mr. DuQuette's inimitable wit and wisdom, and you have a genuine page-turner. While the reader of this book probably won't be kidnapped, shot or chased around the world, the Most Dangerous Secret in the World will be revealed. What could be more exciting than that? Read this book now … before They get to it first!"
— Richard Kaczynski, Ph.D., Yale University author of Perdurabo, The Life of Aleister Crowley

" 'Royal secrets' are revealed and the forbidden is brought into focus in this revelatory text. In The Key to Solomon's Key, Lon Milo DuQuette dares to discuss the truth behind Dan Brown's fiction."
— Brenda Knight
author of Rituals for Life

"Lon Milo DuQuette takes us on an exciting odyssey into the nefarious deeds of the medieval Church in their attempts to silence what could become the greatest revelation of the 21st century – but has been kept intentionally silenced for over a millennium. A real page-turner!"
— Brad Olsen author of Sacred Places North America, Sacred Places Around the World, Sacred Places Europe, and World Stompers: A Global Travel Manifesto

INRODUCTION

Brother Lon DuQuette is about to take us on a guided tour of Chapel Perilous. He has asked me to make the following announcement: "Will all readers please fasten their seatbelts."

Many of the concepts and questions to which you'll soon be exposed may be altogether new. Some may threaten your most closely held beliefs and childhood conditioning. We ask only that you approach with an open mind and a willingness to continue your own research when you emerge from these pages.

Lon lays out the goal fairly early on. We will be encouraged to become "a principal player, a junior partner with God in the great plan of creation." Our companions will be such luminaries as Moses, the great Qabalistic adept; King David, the poet and heroic slayer of Goliath; David's son Solomon, the greatest Magus of all time; Hiram Abiff, the slain master builder; Jacques DeMolay, the martyred Grand Master of the Knights Templar; and de Molay's avengers, the ruthless Adam Weishaupt and his Bavarian Illuminati.

We will stand with the High Priest in Jerusalem in the Holy of Holies and gaze upon the Ark of the Covenant. We will travel to the great temples of Egypt. We will be admitted to Masonic initiation chambers the world over, and be invited inside the sacred walls of Rosslyn Chapel in Scotland. We will even cavort with spooks and spies at the headquarters of the CIA in Virginia, and hobnob with the cognoscenti in Paris at the Louvre.

We will join the Knights Templar in clandestine archeological digs and discover a secret whose revelation could shatter the foundation of the world's three great monotheistic faiths. What is "the most dangerous secret in the world"? Is it true? And who were the people who discovered it, those who "dreamed greater dreams" than their European neighbors? Is the Bible real?

Frankly, Lon's statements on the historicity of the Bible exceed the scope of my own research to date. The more I know about history, the more I am aware it is written by people with agendas. I am as suspicious of those who claim one version as I am of those who advance another. As an example of the difficulty of determining fact from fiction, look at the controversy over whether Saddam Hussein did or did not possess weapons of mass destruction. (I tend to agree with Ted Koppel who quipped that we know he did because we still have the receipts!) The question of whether Moses, David, or Solomon existed is even more loaded. While Lon will raise these issues, it is the reader's task to answer them. The depth of your research will be the measure of the truth of your conclusions.

Where Lon and I are in absolute agreement is on the pernicious doctrines of Original Sin and Vicarious Atonement. How vile a slander of that most magnificent miracle of God called Man to burden him with original sin. How despicable the coward's gesture to fling an innocent life before God to die for his own redemption. I will die for my own sins, thank you. Let the crucified die for his. Like the Templar of old, I spit on the belief of the inherently evil nature of mankind and the abdication of individual responsibility on which the myth of the Dying God is anchored.

The Seven Secrets of Solomon establish the author's credentials as a lover of freedom and a believer in the inherent dignity of humanity. These principles are a celebration of our divine birthright and a wondrous affirmation of Nature and the grandeur of Creation. When Lon writes that, "All creation is a play in the mind of God," I hear a ringing endorsement for that participatory, vibratory, divine rock concert we call Life.

Lon's intimate familiarity with Masonry is one of the more delightful themes of this book. It is virtually impossible to overstate the importance of Freemasonry as a tool of the Enlightenment. It helped liberate millions and led to the founding of governments built on the principle of the consent of the governed. (Perhaps our modern task is to expand that doctrine to read "informed consent.") While Masonry has become an increasingly gray-haired fellowship in the last four to five decades, one hopes it will regain its appeal to younger generations. Some Masons feel the best way to accomplish this is to camouflage the mystical roots of the Craft. Yet anyone interested solely in charitable work can join United Way. The active core of Masonry is Initiation into the Mysteries — just like the active core of this book.

Lon's inclusion of the material from the Goetia is a stroke of genius. For here is a practical means of experiencing the states of mind and magical powers discussed throughout these pages. Myth becomes personal reality. The reader is encouraged to leave the comfort of his or her armchair and begin the work of achieving the Wisdom and Power of Solomon. Here is where it all comes home. This is not a Dan Brown/National Treasure style tale designed to stimulate and titillate. Rather it is a manual of Gnosis. Lon's step-by-step instructions and educated advice for understanding and conducting Goetic evocation are among the best I've read. Simple, clear, methodical, they are intended to be used. Here is a roadmap for the exploration of Self.

Welcome now to the wonderful world of Lon DuQuette and the real secrets of Solomon's Key.

PART ONE

SOLOMON'S SECRET

PROLOGUE
THE KRYPTOS

They will be able to read what I wrote, but what I wrote is a mystery itself.
~ James Sanborn – Creator of the Kryptos

A most unusual work of art adorns the main entrance and courtyard of the New Headquarters Building of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in Langley, Virginia near Washington D.C. It is a multi-faceted sculpture made of lodestone, polished red granite, quartz, copperplate, and petrified wood. It was commissioned in November 1988 as part of the Art in Architecture program of the General Services Administration. The task of selecting the artist fell to a joint committee of members of the CIA Fine Arts Counsel, and the National Endowment for the Arts, who chose local artist James Sanborn, a Washington D.C. native to receive the $250,000 commission to execute the design he called Kryptos (Greek for "hidden").

Mr. Sandborn certainly did his homework preparing the design and the materials for his work that is intended to serve as an elaborate example of the art of information encryption. He studied for months with retired CIA cryptographer, Ed Scheidt, before setting to work on the sculpture that incorporates a twelve-foot copper scroll punched through with thousands of letters. Since its unveiling in 1990 professional and amateur cryptographers have been obsessed with its solution, but interest in the Kryptos reached fever pitch in 2003 when best-selling author Dan Brown hid references to it on the dust jacket of his wildly popular novel, The Da Vinci Code.[1]

About seventy-five percent of the Kryptos has now been deciphered. Amid tantalizing quotes from the diary of Howard Carter (discoverer of Tutankhamen's tomb) are references that suggest that something important is buried on the grounds of CIA Headquarters. The deciphered code suggests, only "WW" (former CIA Director William Webster) knows the precise location. Unfortunately, Webster obviously doesn't think much of the secret treasure (or at least that is what he would have us believe). Since leaving the agency he told reporters, "I have zero memory of this. It was philosophical and obscure."

For those of us who are passionately interested in things "philosophical and obscure," Webster's words come as no surprise and even less a deterrent to speculation. Indeed, for anyone who cares to investigate, the entire city of Washington D.C. – the curious and precise layout of her streets, the sacred geometry of her civic buildings, and monuments that teem with Masonic and occult symbolism – all present a gigantic mystery in stone – a mystery that reaches back to the birth of our nation and principals and traditions upon which it was founded.

It is no secret that many of the founding fathers of the United States were Freemasons. Sixteen percent of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, thirty-three percent of the signers of the Constitution, George

[1] Dan Brown. The Da Vince Code. (NY: Doubleday 2003).

Washington and a full forty-six percent of the generals in the Continental Army were members of the fraternity. The cornerstone of the U.S. Capital Building was laid with full Masonic ceremony by George Washington himself arrayed in full Masonic regalia.

Masonry's influence goes far beyond the lodge room. Fourteen American Presidents were Freemasons, and so were nearly two-thirds of all the Supreme Court Justices. Our language is peppered with Masonic terms and phrases; "on the level," "square deal," "eavesdrop," "blackball," and "shibboleth." When police roughly interrogate a suspect they are said to "give him the Third Degree." When a judge or the chairman of a meeting uses a gavel, or when we are called upon to swear upon the Bible, even when we shake hands to seal a deal we are using Masonic devices. Indeed, until 1827 when a scandal tarred the fraternity's reputation, Freemasonry was for all intent and purposes America's civic religion.

Masonry is still alive in the twenty-first century, and for the time being remains the world's largest fraternal order. As a service organization it is one of the most generous charitable institutions in the world donating more than a million dollars a day to various charities. There is no question, however, that her rolls are swiftly diminishing. In a fast-paced new millennium Masonic membership is no longer considered a requirement for men of business or political ambition.

Numbers, however, can be deceiving. While it is true that Masonic lodges are closing daily and fewer and fewer men are attracted to the fraternity, a significant number of those who are joining are passionately interested in the esoteric and mystical aspects of the Craft, subjects that have been ignored, misunderstood, even ridiculed by the vast majority of their brethren who came of Masonic age in the twentieth century. These young esoteric Masons do not view the Craft as just another service club with quaint traditions and ceremonies; they do not enter her ageless and sacred doors in order to exploit opportunities for business or political networking; they come on a personal spiritual quest; to be initiated into the Western mystery tradition. Some, including myself, go so far as to view our involvement in the Craft as a magical initiation.

The term "initiation" is often misunderstood. It is not merely an ordeal of passage or a formal induction ceremony. It is a new beginning – an awakening – a step we take when we have made the conscious decision to move forward – to become more than we are. While spiritual in nature, initiation differs from religion in a very fundamental way. In my book, Angels, Demons & Gods of the New Millennium[2] I try to explain.

> "Initiation is a commencement; not a reward for achievement, not a seal of attainment, not a trophy of adeptship. Initiation is a beginning, and when we evoke a beginning we also by necessity conjure an ending. Death is the inevitable penalty we pay for allowing ourselves to be born, and the honor of life's journey between these two great pylons is the only compensation offered for this fate.

"The uninitiated invoke neither birth, nor life, nor death. Like sleep walkers our numbed steps bear us comatose from cradle to grave, our pale shadow lives pantomime but never experience the adventures of the initiate's journey. Like other mammals we are born, and live, and die. But unless we make a conscious effort to wake up, unless we harness and focus the power of our wills to take the first steps toward spiritual renewal, we will not, as Homer sang...received our share of the rite. We will not have the same lot as the initiate...once we are dead and dwell in the mold where the sun goes down.[3]

"Prostitution may be the oldest profession in the world, but the oldest spiritual institution is most certainly the initiatory society. To those who would argue that religion holds this august position I must respectfully disagree.

"Religion merely haunts the outer courts of the great initiatory temple and holds mystery at arm's length. From the occasional thread of truth, carried by the wind from the initiatory chamber, religion psychotically weaves and reweaves doctrines and dogma – tapestries of hope, hate and perpetual distraction. Religion exalts mystery as an unknowable secret that must be sealed in glass like the corpse of an enchanted princess and fearfully worshipped from afar. Initiation, on the other hand, requires direct participation and demands each of > us to smash the casket and press mad lips to mystery, wooing her as a lover who will offer up her treasurers in a succession of sweet surrenders. This she will do, but only in exact ratio to our evolving ability and worthiness to receive them."

For this new generation of Masonic initiates the secrets of the Craft are not the steps, signs, tokens and secret passwords of a quaint service organization, but concern a fundamentally more profound secret concerning the history of civilization and the nature of the human soul – a treasure hidden for centuries – a mystery waiting to be brought to light by anyone bold enough to draw the veil.

The partially decoded Kryptos teases us with a thrilling and poignant taste of the ecstasy of such a discovery by quoting from the diary of archeologist Howard Carter, the discoverer of tomb of Tutankhamen.

> "At first I could see nothing, the hot air escaping from the chamber caused the candle to flicker, but as my eyes grew accustomed to the gloom, presently details of the room within emerged slowly from the mist, strange statues and animals and gold, everywhere the glint of gold. For the moment, an eternity it must have seemed to those standing by, I was struck dumb with amazement, and when Lord Carnavon, unable to stand the suspense any longer, inquired anxiously, 'Can you see anything?' it was all I could do to get out the words, 'Yes. Wonderful things!'"

Masonry's rituals, symbols and traditions stand like the Kryptos, a partially decoded multi-layered mystery that offers the magical promise of "wonderful things" and a supreme spiritual treasure for those brave souls who are not only willing to dig but sufficiently prepared to understand and appreciate the full impact of a great secret.

CHAPTER ONE
I CONFESS – I AM A FREEMASON

Masonry is a progressive moral science, divided into different degrees; and, as its principles and mystic ceremonies are regularly developed and illustrated, it is intended and hoped that they will make a deep and lasting impression upon your mind.
~ From The Fellow Craft Degree
Free & Accepted Masons[4]

I am a Freemason. In 1998, at the age of fifty, I was raised[5] in the same lodge that raised my father fifty years earlier. Masonry claims to make good men better, and although my father had many shortcomings, when all is said and done he was the most noble and ethical man I have ever known. His morality, as much as I observed, was almost entirely self-imposed. He was not a religious man (confessing only that he believed in a Supreme Being), but he was good for goodness' sake; not in obedience to divine commandments; not out of fear of some deity.

[4] All monitorial excerpts from Masonic Degree work are drawn from the California Cipher, Grand Lodge of California, F. & A.M. (Richmond: Allen Publishing Company, 1990).

[5] A Mason is first Initiated into First Degree as an Entered Apprentice, Passed to the Second Degree of Fellow Craft, and Raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason (the Third Degree).

He was extremely proud to be a Mason and, although he didn't remain an active member of his lodge, he always wore his Blue Lodge[6] and Scottish Rite[7] rings and kept his dues scrupulously up-to-date. When I was a child, he enjoyed teasing me about the secret nature of the Craft and would rattle off his titles; Secret Master, Perfect Master, Elu of the Twelve, Prince of Jerusalem, Knight Rose Croix, Knight of the Brazen Serpent, Master of the Royal Secret.

Master of the Royal Secret – That sounded interesting. I had to ask, "What's the Royal Secret?"

"I can't tell you. It's a secret."

"Please?"

"No"

"Did you tell Mom?"

"No. I can never tell your mother."[8]

[6] The term Blue Lodge is used to describe the three primary and fundamental Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason. Once a Mason has been raised to the Degree of Master Mason, he may then go on to affiliate with other Masonic concordant rites such as the York Rite, the Scottish Rite, and the Shrine.

[7] The Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite is one of the most popular Masonic concordant bodies in the United States.

[8] One of the Ancient Landmarks of the Craft (going back as far as the medieval cathedral builder's guilds) is that Freemasonry is exclusively a men's organization. Regular Masonry remains so today (for no other reason that I can see but the reluctance to abrogate an official Ancient Landmark). There are, however, lodges of Co-Masons (men and women), and other organizations such as Aletheia that are exclusively women.

I liked that idea. We both laughed, and I felt like I was already sharing a Masonic secret.

Once when I was about five, he showed me his lambskin apron. He put it on, carefully centering the knot in front so it was concealed by the apron's triangular flap. He gently smoothed it down with both hands, stood at attention and recited from memory;

> "A lambskin apron. It is an emblem of innocence and the badge of a Mason; more ancient than the Golden Fleece or the Roman Eagle; more honorable than the Star and Garter, or any distinction that could be conferred upon me, at that or any future period by King, Prince, Potentate, or any other person, and which it was hoped that I would wear with pleasure to myself and honor to the Fraternity."

I was very impressed.

He then smiled and made the most curious announcement, "The next time you see me wearing this apron I'll be dead and lying in a casket at my funeral."

Those were strange words, and a little hard for a five year old to hear. But Dad was a pretty strange guy. He was right. The next time I saw him in his Masonic apron was at his funeral less than twenty years later. He lived long enough to see my son born, but not long enough to see me become a Mason. We never became Brothers. We never had the opportunity to discuss the Royal Secret.

A snafu of some sort prevented his lodge brothers from showing up at the funeral to give him the fraternal send off. We were assured a few days later by the Master that the oversight caused 'heads to roll' down at the lodge. Twenty-six years later, when I finally became a Mason, I was appointed Chaplain of that same lodge. One of my first official acts was to arrange a proper Masonic graveside service.

I have to confess I knew quite a lot about the Craft before I joined. For the previous quarter-century I had enmeshed myself in the studies, practices and intrigues of several initiatory orders and magical societies. Because many of the founders of these esoteric groups were Freemasons I took it upon myself to become familiar with the history, doctrines and rituals of the Craft, especially those of the York and Scottish Rites. I learned many other very interesting things along the way as well.

By the time I finally joined I wasn't seeking the same sort of esoteric titillation that spiced my initiatory adventures in these other more secret secret societies. I knew from the beginning that I was entering an organization of mostly elderly men with whom I would have little in common except the bonds of fidelity that for centuries have united the fraternity – men who, if they really got to know me, would most likely consider my interests too strange, my studies too occult, my politics too liberal, my morals too permissive, my writings too weird, and my spiritual world-view downright heretical – men who, like my father, choose not to delve too deeply into mysteries that lie beneath the symbols and ceremonies that they and those that came before them so dutifully preserved.

My expectations were low, and so I wasn't at all disappointed. I was welcomed into a lodge that boasted nearly a thousand members whose average age was seventy-two – a lodge whose tiny library contained only a handful of books relating to the esoteric foundations of Masonry, few of which, according to the sign-out sheet, had ever been checked out.

It didn't really bother me. As a matter of fact, it felt kind of good. For the first time in many years I was the youngster in a group. I quickly grew to love my new brothers and enjoy their company. I came to the comfortable realization that (no matter what else Masonry might be) it was a very big tent, and that if I behaved myself there was a place in that tent for me.

It didn't matter to me that most of the old fellows could care less about the Eleusinian Mysteries, or the magic of the Babylonians, Egyptians, and Arabs, or the Kabbalah, or Gnosticism, or alchemy, or the suppressed history of Christendom. It didn't bother me when my new Brothers answered my questions by saying things like…"Oh, that doesn't mean anything…It's just symbolic."

So what if the Royal Secret was still a mystery to these Princes of the Royal Secret. I was just grateful for the fact that these gentlemen and generations of other dedicated souls had faithfully preserved and guarded the treasure of the Craft; and were now, with shaking hands, delivering it safely to me across the centuries as if it were sealed in a locked casket for which they had no key.

I was very grateful indeed – because I had the key.

CHAPTER TWO
I CONFESS – I AM A MAGICIAN

Much light, it must be confessed, is thrown on many of the mystical names in the higher degrees by the dogmas of magic; and hence magic furnishes a curious and interesting study for the Freemason.
~ Albert G. Mackey, M.D. 33° [9]

Nobody speaks for Masonry. Nobody. Indeed, even though I am an active member of my Blue Lodge, Scottish Rite bodies and various Masonic research societies, everything I say in the present work concerning the Craft is based entirely on my own observations and conjectures. So please don't misunderstand me when I make the apparently presumptuous statement that I possess the key to the mysteries of Freemasonry. I'm not claiming that, like some investigative reporter, I have uncovered the true history behind every political, religious, and social intrigue that has (or hasn't) taken place on earth in the last five thousand years. Neither am I suggesting that I've mastered the history, meanings or lessons of every degree of every rite of the Craft. I am saying, however, that regardless the circumstances surrounding Masonry's creation and development – regardless of the past or present motives and activities of its individual leaders and members – the Craft is indeed the custodian of a profound and fundamental secret.

I'm by no means saying that I'm the only person on earth who believes they understand the central mystery of this august fraternity. Nor am I certain that, with key in hand, I possess the courage, wit or wisdom to properly apply this understanding to my own efforts towards spiritual liberation and for the benefit of my fellow human beings.

Whether or not they realized it, millions of men and women, Masons and non-Masons alike, possess this key. It's not a matter of what organization we belong to; it's not a matter of what we know. Rather, it is a matter of what we are that places the key in our hands. As no two people are (or ever can be) the same it follows that no two individuals become what they are by the same paths. The pathway I happen to have taken is one that has had for centuries a close (if at times, uncomfortable) relationship with Freemasonry. I have chosen the path of magic.[10]

Now, please don't immediately dismiss me as a crackpot, or worse, some kind of devil worshipper. Magic is in the broadest sense of the term simply the Science and Art of causing Change to occur in conformity with Will. The Will I'm talking about is both the Will of God (as is commonly understood) and the true Will of each of individual, which, if properly realized, can be nothing other than the perfect reflection of the divine Will. In other words, if I seek and discover my true Will – what my place in the universe is – what I came to earth to be and do – then I've discovered (in the only way meaningful and comprehendible to me) God's will for my life.

[10] To differentiate the spiritual art form from that of the stage illusionist, modern magicians, including myself, prefer to spell the word magick. However, to avoid undo confusion in the mind of the reader, I have decided to revert to the more recognizable magic throughout the present work.

As a magician, I have for the last thirty-five years, by means both traditional and forbidden, endeavored to cause change to occur in my life in conformity with what I have perceived to be my Will. I say, "perceived to be my Will" because it is not until we have developed a significant level of illumination that we can with any degree of certainty know what our Will truly is.

For me, the ultimate change I would like to effect is my own enlightenment and spiritual liberation. Call it what you like – salvation, redemption, return to Godhead, absorption in the infinite, nirvana, heaven – it's the supreme goal of every spiritual seeker. However, the magician goes about this Great Work very differently than the average Western religious devotee or the Eastern mystic.

The disciplines of the East encourage the aspirant to still the body and mind and go within to deal subjectively with the subtle obstacles that stand in the way of his or her perfect illumination. This approach requires quiet patience and a subtle underlying confidence that all spiritual answers can ultimately be found inside oneself.

Western magic springs from the myths and rich traditions of Babylon, Egypt, Arabia, and Israel. It is a spiritual art form that seems particularly suited to the way the Western psyche is hardwired. Traditionally, the Western mystic's approach has not been as subtle as that of his or her Eastern counterpart. Until relatively recent times, most Western seekers hadn't developed the confidence to explore the possibility that all spiritual answers lie within. For centuries we've preferred to objectify our subjective issues – deal outwardly with internal matters. For the less adventurous, this has meant submitting to the dictates of a deity that we perceive as existing outside ourselves – outside of nature. Instead of closing our eyes and searching for our own answers, the majority of Westerners have preferred the path of vicarious illumination – relying exclusively upon faith in the outward, visible reality of the authoritative words of some person or scripture.

To a certain degree, this outward introspection is the foundation of the Western magical tradition as well. But the focus of the magician is a little bolder and more personally challenging. The magician dares view himself or herself as being an important and integral link in the divine chain of command of spiritual beings – not a mere observer or helpless victim in need of rescue, but a principal player, a junior partner with God in the great plan of creation.

The modern magician is certainly not alone in holding this point of view. In fact, according to recent statistics[11] nearly one third of the earth's population currently shares to some degree this spiritual self-image. Prior to the advent of Christianity and Islam it was a near universally accepted fact of life. But magic is a science and an art form, not a belief system or a religion. Like Freemasonry, magic cares little what one's religious beliefs or opinions are.

[11] National & World Religion Statistics. Adherents.com:

That being said, the fact remains that very few Masons are card-carrying magicians, or even have an interest in such things. While in theory, Masonry opens her doors to anyone professing a belief in a Supreme Being, the overwhelming majority of Masons worldwide are Christians or Jews. Bible passages are recited during the Degree ceremonies, and (unless the candidate requests otherwise) the Christian version of the Holy Bible is the default Volume of the Sacred Law upon which candidates for initiation place their hands when swearing their solemn oaths to the fraternity.

Lodge meetings have an overtly religious feel to them. They are opened and closed with prayer, but the prayers are addressed generically to the *Great Architect of the Univers*e, or to the Supreme Grand Master. This custom creates a unique spiritual atmosphere in which the Supreme Deity is elevated above sectarian divisions. We are no longer Methodists praying like Methodists, or Jews praying like Jews, or Moslems praying like Moslems, or Pagans praying the Pagan way. Within the tiled lodge room we are simply human beings praying to God because it is the human thing to do.

When you think about it, this seemingly simple custom is in-and-of itself a radical and revolutionary statement of spiritual liberation. It transforms each member into a religion of one – answerable to no one but God – and that is precisely what a magician is.

It is eminently appropriate that the person of King Solomon rises as a central figure in the traditions of both magic and Masonry, for it is written that Solomon was not only a great and wise man of God, he was also the most powerful magician the world had ever known.

CHAPTER THREE
SOLOMON THE KING

> We read in the Holy Writings that it was decreed in the wisdom and counsels of Deity aforetime, that a house should be built, erected to God and dedicated to His holy name. We also learn from the same sacred source that David, King of Israel, desired to build the house, but that, in consequence of his reign having been one of many wars and much bloodshed, that distinguished privilege was denied him. He was not, however left without hope, for God promised him that out of his loins there should come a man who would be adequate to the performance of so great and glorious an undertaking. That promise was verified in the person and character of Solomon, his son, who ascended the throne…

> ~ From The Master's Lecture
> Free & Accepted Masons

Everything we know about King Solomon comes to us from the pages of the Bible (primarily the *First Book of the King*s, the Second Book of the Chronicles) and other Jewish, Islamic, Coptic, and Ethiopian religious literature. The Bible tells us that Solomon came to the throne of Israel after the death of his father, Israel's great warrior-king David.

The story of David, as outlined in the Books of Samuel, could rightly be called the world's first real biography. Never before in literature had a character been so thoroughly exposed, warts and all. The biblical narratives of David and Solomon read like colorful and titillating novels, and represent a remarkable departure in style from other books of the Bible.

The Bible tells us that Solomon inherited a huge and enormously wealthy nation with a massive, well-equipped army.[12] Solomon's Israel was said to be so rich and mighty that none of its powerful neighbors, including its archenemy Egypt, dared remain hostile. Scripture recounts that the rulers of the world courted Solomon's favor and lavished opulent tribute upon the Hebrew King, filling his granaries and treasure houses with riches the like of which the world had never witnessed before. In a submissive act, unprecedented in biblical lore, Egypt's Pharaoh sent his own daughter to become one of the many wives of the wise and powerful Solomon.

It was within this glorious atmosphere of peace and unparalleled prosperity Solomon fulfilled his father's dream of building a temple worthy to house the tangible presence of the True and Living God Most High. This great temple would be the exclusive center of worship and sacrifice for the children of Israel, and would replace the portable tabernacle that had served to house the sacred Ark of the Covenant since the wilderness-wandering days of Moses.

In order to complete this undertaking, the Bible tells us that Solomon pressed into service thirty thousand men to cut timber in Lebanon, seventy thousand men to bear burdens, and eighty thousand hewers of stone in the mountain, and three thousand overseers of the work. The temple was completed in a little over seven years.[13] The biblical account[14] is rich with details about the dimensions and ornamentation of the Phoenician style edifice – so many in fact, modern architects have been able to develop satisfactory drawings, and models.

[12] 1 Kings 4, 21-26 and 1 Kings 9, 17-23, 2 Chronicles 9, 25-26.

Solomon died after reigning over Israel for 40 years.[15] Like his father before him, he had his share of troubles (much of it women trouble). Throughout it all he succeeded in keeping the country united. After his death, however, a string of mostly despicable kings immediately set to work to make a mess of things. The nation split up into Judah in the south (where Jerusalem and the temple were located), and Israel in the north.

The Temple stood in its pristine condition for only thirty-three years. Bible scholars reckon, however, that it remained intact (if in decay) for an additional three hundred seventy-four years before being completely destroyed by the armies of King Nebuchanezzar of Babylon around 586 BCE. Nebuchanezzar also ordered that the fittest members of the Hebrew nobility be taken captive and brought back to Babylon to serve in his palace and receive Babylonian educations. Seventy years later, after the death of Nebuchanezzar and the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus of Persia, the descendants of the Hebrew captives were allowed to return to Jerusalem to build a second temple.

[13] Bible scholars estimate 959 BCE.

[14] First Kings (Chapters 5-8) and Second Chronicles (Chapters 1-7).

[15] Bible scholars estimate 930 BCE.

The moral lessons of Masonry draw heavily from these tales. As we will soon see, the Master Mason Degree focuses particularly on the story of the murder of Solomon's master builder, Hiram Abiff, and several degrees of the Scottish and York Rites illustrate tales of the Babylonian captivity and events surrounding the return of the children of Israel to Jerusalem. It would not be an exaggeration to say that the heart and soul of Masonry is found in the sections of the Bible that tell the story of King Solomon, and the fate of the magnificent Temple of God.

The Bible, however, tells us precious little about Solomon the magician. For these accounts we must look to the traditions and literature of Judaism and Islam, and from the Alf Laylah wa Laylah, a true magical text better known to us as A Thousand and One Arabian Nights.[16]

CHAPTER FOUR
SOLOMON THE MAGICIAN

Thereupon quoth the Jinni: "Know that I am one among the heretical Jann, and I sinned against Solomon … whereupon the Prophet sent his Minister to seize me. And this Wazir brought me against my will and led me in bonds to him … and he placed me standing before him like a supplicant. When Solomon saw me, he took refuge with Allah and bade me embrace the True Faith and obey his behests. But I refused, so, sending for this cucurbit, he shut me up therein and stopped it over with lead, whereon he impressed the Most High Name, and gave his orders to the Jann, who carried me off and cast me into the midmost of the ocean. There I abode a hundred years, during which I said in my heart, 'Whoso shall release me, him will I enrich forever and ever.' "

~ From The Fisherman and the Jinni

King Solomon is arguably one of the most colorful figures in the Old Testament, but the biblical Solomon is downright dull when compared to Solomon the magician of other traditions. Judaism and Islam seem to meld into a magical mist of fable and fantasy in the person of Solomon. He is at once a Hebrew king, a Prophet of Allah, and an audacious oriental wizard. Solomon the magician could talk with animals, fly through the air on a magic carpet, and cause others to fly through the air to him.[17] He could control the powers of nature and was master of the denizens of the spirit world, the demons, the afrites, and genii of Shahrazad's A Thousand and One Arabian Nights. A recurring theme in these tales is the assertion that Solomon enlisted the services of genii and other maleficent spirits to construct the Temple of God.

The ancients apparently didn't see any conflict of interest in this arrangement at all. To them devils, genii, and demons were the spirit representatives of the blind forces of nature that create and destroy everything in the universe. Solomon was God's instrument on earth and if he could control the infernal spirits to help him build the Temple of God then all power to him.

Much like the thundering, smoke-belching heavy equipment used by today's construction workers, these potentially dangerous forces can be instruments of death and destruction when not controlled and directed by a higher intelligence. But in the masterful hands of a skilled operator the same fearful tools can be used for righteous and constructive purposes – including the erection of the House of God.

Recall how in *First Kin*gs we are told that in order to build the Temple, Solomon employed seventy thousand men to bear burdens, and eighty thousand hewers of stone in the mountain, and three thousand overseers of the work? The legendary version is a little more interesting. Here's how Moslem religious historian Sheikh al-Siuti tells the tale:

[17] The Koran: Sura 38 verses 33-35, Sura 27 verses 38 to 40.

> "When God revealed unto Solomon that he should build him a Temple, Solomon assembled all the wisest men, genii and Afrites of the earth, and the mightiest of the devils, and appointed one division of them to build, another to cut blocks and columns from the marble mines, and others to dive into ocean-depths, and fetch therefrom pearls and coral. Now some of these pearls were like ostrich's or hen's eggs. So he began to build the Temple… the devils cut quarries of jacinth and emerald. Also the devils made highly-polished cemented blocks of marble."[18]

The Jewish Talmud relates a remarkable story of Solomon's dealings with the archdemon Ashmodai in an attempt to procure a magical worm called the Shamir. The Shamir had the power to silently cut through solid stone with astounding speed and precision. Although Solomon's control of the elements and his possession of the silent stone-cutting Shamir are not mentioned directly in the teachings of Masonry, we still hear echoes of the story in the Master's lecture of the Third Degree:

> "…although more than seven years were occupied in its [the Temple] building, yet during the whole term it did not rain in the day time, but in the night season only, that the workmen might not be obstructed from their labors …we also learn that > there was not heard the sound of axe, hammer, or any tool of iron in the house while it was building…"

The concept of a magical partnership between a masterful servant of God and otherwise destructive and evil spirits will very shortly become a very important factor in our understanding of Solomon's Key. But before we discuss that subject further, we need to take a brief detour through space and time: The place is the lodge room of Lebanon Lodge No. 58, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons in Columbus, Nebraska. The year is 1962 CE.

CHAPTER FIVE
A SECRET SOCIETY OF BOYS

I promise that I will be faithful to every trust committed to me, to every promise I shall make so far as is humanly possible; and that will hold ever before me as a glorious example, the heroic fidelity of Jacques DeMolay and that of every other martyr who gave his life rather than betray a friend or be false to a trust.
~ From The Oath of a DeMolay

When I was fourteen years old I was gently pressured by my father and several of my schoolmates to join the Order of DeMolay. Created in 1919 by Frank S. Land, a Kansas City businessman and high-degree Freemason, DeMolay is a Masonic organization for young men between the ages of twelve and twenty-one. At first I thought the whole thing a little corny and would have much preferred spending my time practicing my guitar and misbehaving. I confess I didn't take much of it seriously. There were, however, certain elements of the experience that appealed to me very much.

I loved the feel of the Masonic lodge room. After meetings, when the rest of the boys were in the social hall enjoying refreshments, I would sit alone in the semidarkness of the temple and try to imagine the secret goings on of grown-up Masons. The lodge room felt more sacred than church. It was rectangular and smelled like old wood and cigars. There were big thrones positioned in the east, south, and west, and two ornate pillars with globes on their capitals flanked the double doors in the west. There was an altar in the middle of the floor. It seemed like everything – every chair, every podium, every mounted symbol knew its place and was perfectly situated where it belonged. Is this where the Royal Secret is revealed?

One evening after our Chapter meeting, I remained in the lodge room to drink in the atmosphere and daydream about rituals. That night I chose to sit in the big throne in the south. I knew it was an important officer's chair because it was behind an ornate podium that looked like a shortened pillar. The top of the podium was covered by a square of black marble. For some reason I felt drawn to rest my hands on the marble and feel its cool heaviness. To my surprise it moved a little. I stood up and discovered that it was secured to the top of the podium only at one corner and the whole piece could be moved aside revealing a secret compartment under the marble top.

My heart felt like it was going to explode as I quickly looked around to make sure I was alone in the lodge room. Then, I looked inside. There, about six inches deep inside, rested a little blue book. I carefully picked it up. There was nothing written on the cover. I opened it up and discovered it was written entirely in a strange code that used Latin letters and symbols (U wr cd t # cn % # :: @ cs t kn fr # bn % pr…etc). I remember thinking, “This is so cool!” I debated whether or not I should tell my father of my forbidden discovery. I opted not to fearing in the back of my mind that he might have to kill me.

I was particularly impressed by DeMolay’s Second Degree[19] initiation ceremony. The ritual is really a play staged in the Chapter room by the boys themselves.[20] It exemplifies the trial and martyrdom in 1314 of Jacques DeMolay, the last Grand Master of the Knights Templar who was burned at the stake in Paris at the hands of the Inquisition. It’s a remarkably elaborate drama full of off-stage torture and screaming – just the kind of thing adolescent boys enjoy. In a way, the ceremony is a diluted preview of elements of several degrees of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry that treat on the same subject.

As presented, the story is a classic example of good versus evil – the noble Grand Master of a band of virtuous Knights resisting an envious and greedy King of France and a corrupt and superstitious Pope. Even though in this case evil temporarily triumphs (DeMolay is executed and his Order apparently destroyed), the moral lessons are clear. Our hero remains true to his conscience and loyal to his comrades throughout the ordeals of false accusations, torture, an unjust trial, and finally the stake.

[19] The DeMolay Degree was written by Frank A. Marshall, a Masonic colleague of Frank Land and passionate admirer of Jacques DeMolay and the Knights Templar.

[20] In larger Chapters, the DeMolay Degree is presented on stage instead of in the Chapter room.

The ceremony did not focus too clearly about what precisely the charges against the Templars and DeMolay were. In the ritual the Master Inquisitor accuses DeMolay of being the head of an order that "practiced many abominations," and charges him with:

- Hypocrisy and treachery in conducting the Crusades in the Holy Land;
- Betraying the King of France (Phillip IV, Le Bel);
- Heresy toward the Church;
- Living in wealth while the poor starved, and;
- Conniving with the infidel to make the Crusades fail of their holy purpose.

I have to admit I was pretty awed by the whole thing. In my adolescent eyes Jacques DeMolay seemed like a pretty cool guy, and his death was an object lesson in virtue and loyalty – qualities I hoped I would always be able to emulate. But, besides teaching me what I was for, DeMolay's story also taught me about things I should be against – the forces of intolerance, superstition, and tyranny.

Phillip IV (Le Bel) King of France &

After my DeMolay Degree initiation I joined my Brothers in the social hall for refreshments and listened to a short talk delivered by our Dad (the term used for the Chapter's adult Masonic supervisor). In this more informal setting we learned a handful of curious footnotes to the DeMolay story. Our Dad obviously enjoyed this part of the evening, and delivered his talk extempore. First he told us that some Masonic historians believe that Masonry was started by former Knights Templars who fled to Scotland when the Order was outlawed. With a most endearing twinkle in his eye he dramatically hinted that secrets of the Templars are still hidden in the symbols and rituals of Masonry. He then went on to tell a tale that sounded as if it came right out of a horror movie.

It seems that as the coals and flames were roasting him alive, the doomed DeMolay uttered a prophetic curse for all to hear. He vowed that within one year he would (from beyond the grave or wherever ashes go) summon the souls of King Philip and Pope Clement to stand with him before the bar of heaven. There DeMolay would ask God to judge who was guilty in this matter. And it came to pass that less than a year after that awful utterance the King and Pope did indeed join the martyred Grandmaster in the afterlife.

I was very impressed!

Still, it was pretty strong stuff for a boy of fourteen in small-town Nebraska, and I confess I didn't meditate too deeply about DeMolay and his comrades until many years later when the ghosts of the Knights Templar would again ride into my life.

This time the focus of my attention would not be upon the death of Jacques DeMolay, but the heresies and abominations he and his fellow knights were accused of practicing.

CHAPTER SIX
THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

SIGILLVM MILITVM XPISTI

The Templars have something to do with everything.
~ Umberto Eco, Foucault's Pendulum[21]

There is a story that is often repeated by secret society and conspiracy buffs that in 1792 during the French Revolution (nearly 500 years after the martyrdom of Jacques DeMolay), at the moment the guillotine severed the head of King Louis XVI an unnamed man leapt upon the scaffolding, plunged his hand in the king's blood, and shouted, Jacques De Molay, tu es vengé! or "Jacques DeMolay, thou art avenged!" Another unsubstantiated legend holds that upon hearing the news of the king's execution, the same words were reportedly uttered by Adam Weishaupt, the founder of the notorious (and for a brief time, Masonically connected) Bavarian Illuminati.

Whether accurate or not, it is certainly true that these stories were widely circulated almost immediately after Louis' death and the phrase continues to this day to be the watchword for revolutionary acts that resist and strike back at superstition, tyranny, and the oppression of human thought and freedom, especially those perceived to be perpetrated by the Roman Catholic Church and the "divinely chosen" monarchies of Europe.

For the better part of two centuries Masonic scholars have passionately debated what, if anything, the Knights Templars have to do with Freemasonry. There is certainly no hard evidence or documents we can refer to that informs us in so many words that on such-and-such a date the Knights Templar went underground and set up a secret benevolent society that employs building tools as esoteric symbols and Bible stories as moral lessons. However, many influential Masons of the past, especially those in eighteenth century France,[22] enthusiastically embraced the Templars as their own predecessors.

Still, supporters of an historic Templar-Mason connection can only point to the most generic elements within the rituals and liturgies of the Craft that demonstrate at most a harmony of anticlerical goals and attitudes shared by the two organizations. However, in the philosophical arena (where traditional history is more important than history history) this in-and-of itself can have profound significance. As Coil's Masonic Encyclopedia affirms, even the most conservative Masonic commentators admit the connection has become inextricably fixed.

[22] The hypothesis that Masonry originated with the crusading Knights Templar was originally advanced in 1737 by Chevalier Andrew Michael Ramsey, a noted educator and Freemason, in an address supposedly delivered to the Grand Lodge of France.

> "This theory of Templar origin which, mythical as it is and wholly unsubstantiated by the authority of history, has exercised a vast influence in the fabrication of advanced Degrees and the invention of Continental Rites."[23]

As an adult I became interested in the Templars not because of their possible connection with Freemasonry, but because I was acutely interested in the accusations leveled against them. The charges were many but the ones that most caught my attention were those that alleged that:

- new initiates were required to spit upon and trample a crucifix underfoot;
- that they were forbidden to worship the crucifix;
- that new knights were told that Jesus was a man who died like all men die;
- that in the higher degrees Templars worshipped a bearded human head or an ass-headed statue called Baphomet; and (something that interested me very much);
- that they practiced magic.

What a curious assortment of accusations to be leveled at a group of Christian knights – yet there was a certain constancy in many of the "confessions" voiced by the tortured members of the order that might lead us to conclude there was perhaps an iota of truth in these accusations. But before we open that can of worms, let's take a very brief look at what we know about this colorful band of brothers.

On Christmas Day in the year 1118 CE[24] a group of nine French knights, including Hughes de Payen, (cousin of the Comte de Champayne, and husband of Catherine St Clair of Roslin) stood before the Patriarch of Jerusalem and King Baldwin II of Palestine, and vowed themselves to poverty, chastity, and obedience. They said they wished to form a Holy Order of warriors, and requested they be given as their headquarters the area adjacent to the eastern sector of the King's Palace in Jerusalem – a place we know today as the Temple Mount.

For reasons that no historian can properly explain, the Patriarch immediately accepted their vows and the King summarily surrendered the area to the knights.

This area of Mount Moriah had a rich legendary past that reached deep into Semitic mythology. It was said that an exposed boulder at the summit of the mount first issued at the dawn of time from the mouth of the mythical serpent Tahum, and would serve as the portal connecting the upper world and the infernal regions. It is also where tradition informs us Abraham built an altar of stones upon which he prepared his son Isaac for sacrifice. From that altar Jacob (the son of Isaac) took a stone to be his pillow as he slept and dreamed of a ladder reaching to heaven. Upon awaking from his vision, Jacob anointed the stone with oil and it supposedly sank into the ground to form the foundation of what would be the three great Jewish Temples:

- King Solomon's Temple (959 BCE);
- a larger but less ornate Second Temple (535 BCE)

[24] This exact date, as almost everything connected to the story of the Templars, is the subject of debate and conjecture.

built by the children of Israel upon their return from captivity in Babylon;

- and the magnificent Third Temple (20 BCE) built by Herod the Great and destroyed by the Romans in 70 CE.

Herod's Temple was the largest of them all. It was the Temple that stood during Jesus' lifetime – where the second chapter of the Book of John tells us he was taken as a child, and where he scourged the moneychangers.

The knights called themselves Pauvres Chevaliers du Temple – Poor Knights of the Temple, or the Knights Templar, and it appears they traveled to Jerusalem for the singular purpose of establishing the order and securing the Temple Mount as their headquarters. Their expressed official raison d'être was to protect the increasing number of Christian pilgrims who traveled the dangerous roads to the newly conquered Holy Land (a job that was already being handled by the Knights of Saint John). It is highly unlikely, however, that this was truly their intention – at least not at first. In fact, it is doubtful the nine Pauvres Chevaliers du Temple did any soldiering at all for the first nine years, during which time it appears they kept to themselves and remained at the site of the Temple Mount.

Modern Templar buffs speculate that this tiny group of knights were engaged in an aggressive excavation of the ruins of the Temple Mount, searching for the Ark of the Covenant, or King Solomon's gold, or other priceless relics. Much as many of us would like to have solid archeological evidence to support these speculations, there appears to be none. Nevertheless, it is hard to imagine that nine men billeted for nine years in the closed confines of the most legendary and mystical spot on earth wouldn't eventually want to have a look around.

What, if anything in particular, they might have been looking for we can only guess, but conspiracy enthusiasts (and modern novelists) certainly think they found (or learned) something – something very important – something that in a few short years drew to them the goodwill and deference of the Church of Rome and the princes of Europe.

The story of the Templars' meteoric rise to power is unique in the history of Western civilization, and is the subject of many well-researched and well-documented books and essays. Still, it is frequently hard to separate fact from legend. Curiously, for our purposes, legend is as important and relevant as fact, for religious and political movements are shaped by what people believe to be true rather than what may actually be factual. I implore the reader to keep this fact firmly in mind as we delve deeper into this subject.

For nine years after their formation, the Pauvres Chevaliers du Temple initiated no new members and remained doing something at the temple site. Then, in 1126, two of them, Hugues de Payen and André de Montbard, returned to France to confer with Montbard's nephew the Abbot of Clairvaux. The Abbot was no ordinary churchman. He was the senior advisor to Pope Honarius II and the most brilliant and charismatic figure in twelfth century Christendom. We know him today as Saint Bernard of Clairvaux.

Whatever it was he learned from his uncle André, Bernard immediately threw his undiluted energies and influence behind the Templars. He convinced the Pope to give the Pauvres Chevaliers du Temple full Church recognition, and volunteered to create the order's constitution. Oddly enough, the Rule of Order that Bernard composed contained no reference whatsoever to protecting pilgrims. What it did do was unite the two most powerful forces in the Western world; the Church of Rome and the ruthless brutality of the feudal warrior.

The Knights Templar were to become the first truly disciplined army since the Roman legionnaires – fighting men who lived like monks – Christian soldiers whose bloody occupation did not jeopardize their prospects of going to heaven because they had a license to kill evil. Unlike other knights who owed allegiance to a specific king, duke, baron, or nobleman, the Templars were to be holy warriors answerable only to the Pope.

They were not, however, to be a Papal army. Indeed, from the very beginning of their existence and for the next two hundred years, Popes treated the Knights Templar as if they were too hot to handle. They were allowed freedoms and privileges enjoyed by no other body in Christendom. They had their own priests and confessors. They were allowed to build their own, uniquely-styled churches. They were freed from countless other Papal restrictions and supervisions. Europe's noble families soon began to lavish gifts of land and money upon the new order, and their privileged sons raced each other to join the Poor Knights of the Temple.

In 1128, before returning to Jerusalem, Hughes de Payen (a relative by marriage to the St Clairs of Rosslyn Chapel fame) travelled to Scotland and paid a visit to his in-laws. The St Clairs were obviously impressed with what they learned from de Payen and immediately granted the new order a tract of land at Ballontrodoch (now the town of Temple) to be their headquarters in Scotland.

Almost overnight a new class of citizen was introduced into the feudal system of the world – a new kind of man – a free man, unencumbered by the restrictions of Church and state – a free man who needed no pass from bishop or king or baron or lord or magistrate to move as he will on the face of the earth, from town to town, province to province, country to country. (This freedom of movement is one of the privileges of a modern Mason as well, and is echoed in the Masonic ritual. When asked, "What induced you to become a Mason?" the proper answer begins with the words, "That I might travel in foreign countries…")

After the Crusades, the Templars' international structure and organizational skills turned them into a super economic entity, a world army, a country without borders. Because they could skirt Church laws that forbade the borrowing and lending of money with interest they set to work to become the world's first international/multinational megabank. They invented checking. They maintained an army of fierce and highly-trained soldiers and a fleet of sailing ships. Kings borrowed money from them, and (even though they were technically answerable to Papal authority) for two hundred years popes let them do whatever they wanted. It was as if the Templars (as movie gangsters would say) "had something" on the Church and the monarchs of Europe. Some speculate they even had something on the Saracens.

Were the Templars blackmailing the world, or were they simply a dynamic idea whose time had come? If they did have something what could it possibly have been? What could they have unearthed at that legendary spot where heaven and hell are said to touch the earth? What secret could have Hughes de Payen and André de Montbard shared with the future Saint Bernard and the St Clair family that would have been so earthshaking as to reward the Templars with a blank check from the masters of their world? Was this object, this piece of information, this treasure destroyed with them? Was the secret lost?

These questions have been the subject of speculation for seven hundred years. In the last few years several best-selling books have theorized the treasure might be lost gospels or something relating to Jesus and the early history of the Church; perhaps documents or artifacts proving that Jesus had a twin brother, or that he was married and had children. Some believe the Templars found the Holy Grail or the Ark of the Covenant, or the mummified head of John the Baptist, or the demonstrably *un*resurrected body of Jesus Christ himself. Others more recently have even speculated they found the golden tablets of Maroni that would eventually find their way to the New World to be discovered by Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet. A popular motion picture suggests it was a good old-fashioned treasure of ancient artifacts, gold and silver.

Whatever the nature of the secret, speculation that it was not lost with the seemingly complete destruction of the Templars is fueled to a white heat when we learn that as the tide turned on Wednesday, October 11, 1307 (just two days prior to the universal arrest of the Templars) a fleet of Templar ships quietly slipped from the harbor at La Rochelle and were never seen again. French Masonic historians make no secret of their destination – Scotland.

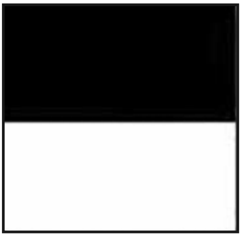
The mystery of what (if anything) the Templars found has driven men mad for nearly a thousand years. I am not exaggerating. For some individuals the Templar myth has become an all-consuming and unhealthy obsession, and their wild and paranoid public conjectures continue to bring unfair scorn and ridicule upon the efforts of legitimate scholars and researchers.

Speaking through one of his characters in the novel Foucault's Pendulum, Umberto Eco makes the following all-too-true observation:

> "For him, everything proves everything else. The Lunatic is all idée fixé, and whatever he comes across confirms his lunacy. You can tell him by the liberties he takes with common sense, by his flashes of inspiration, and by the fact that sooner or later he brings up the Templars."

I realize that by writing this book I am too am running the risk of putting myself in the above category. But run the risk I must, because whether or not their secret treasure was real or legendary – whether or not their connection to Freemasonry is historic or merely traditional, where magic, Masonry and Solomon's Key are concerned the Templars do indeed …have something to do with everything.

CHAPTER SEVEN
THE TEMPLAR'S SECRET?



In writing the life of King Solomon from a Masonic point of view, it is impossible to omit a reference to the legends which have been preserved in the Masonic system. But the writer, who, with this preliminary notice, embodies them in his sketch of the career of the wise King of Israel, is by no means to be held responsible for a belief in their authenticity.

~ Albert G. Mackey, M.D. 33° [25]

And now we return to the subject of King Solomon. Although it may not at first be obvious to the reader, the person of the wise King is a vital element of Masonry's legendary connection to the Knights Templar and the secret treasure they allegedly possessed. We've learned a little about what the Bible, other religious literature, and A Thousand and One Arabian Nights tells us about Solomon the king and magician, now let us examine what exactly we know about the historical King Solomon.

For the greater part of the last two millennia Western civilization has relied upon the Bible as its primary source of historical information. From its venerable pages unfold the human story from the creation of heaven and earth to the political intrigues of the Roman Empire. It was the first book printed in the 1450s by the new process of moveable type, and for the next few centuries the vast majority of Europeans who learned to read and write did so for no other purpose than to study the Bible. It was more than a book. It was the book. It occurred to very few of our literate (and newly-literate) ancestors to question the accuracy of the Bible or (God forbid) to challenge its authority. It was a universally accepted fact that everything written in the Bible was literally true – the unerring Word of God.

[25] Op cit. p. 697.

Conversely, anything not found in the Bible was considered equally untrue. Nowhere, for instance, do we learn in the Bible that the earth revolves around the sun, or that other planets are worlds that have moons that revolve around them. The Bible successfully established itself as its own unquestioned internal authority – the Word of God because the book tells us it's the Word of God – a book that is true because the book tells us it is true – a book that must believed because the book tells us it must be believed. For the better part of what we consider the modern era, the Bible said it. We believed it. That settled it!

That may be a perfectly admirable position for a religious devotee to take toward a spiritual document. It is not, however, a realistic attitude for the serious student of history.[26]

[26] I pause to point out that the documented history of Freemasonry begins in 1717 at the height of the intellectual movement known as The Enlightenment – a time when reason and the scientific method were loosening the bonds of blind faith and superstition.

Other than what is written in the Bible, what exactly do we know about the political and military conquests and glories of King David and the fabulous reign of King Solomon? What records have been discovered and preserved of an empire that stretched from the Euphrates to Egypt? What ruins and archeological digs can we visit to see remnants of Solomon's magnificent temple or the luxurious palaces he built for his wives – structures which were many times larger than his temple? What great museums exhibit the helmets, the armor, the swords and chariots of the massive army that conquered the Philistines, the Assyrians and the Egyptians? Where can we examine the artistry of the sacred vessels of the temple? What archaeologist has uncovered the tomb of David or Solomon, or a tablet or inscription bearing either of their names or the names of any of their kin or colleagues outlined so explicitly in the Bible?

As difficult as it may be for many people to believe, there is no archaeological evidence whatsoever to offer even the slightest suggestion that David or Solomon or Israel's golden kingdoms ever existed. No mention of the name of David[27] or Solomon has ever been found in the mountains of surviving records kept by the Egyptians or the Assyrians, or those of any other neighboring nations who were allegedly defeated in battle and for years paid massive tribute to Solomon; no artifacts large or small from a mighty Israelite army; no object of art; no inscriptions; no letter to or from either David or Solomon, no mention of either of them anywhere in the surviving correspondences of neighboring kingdoms.

[27] Recently, after receiving much media attention, a tablet allegedly created by King Hazael of Aram-Damascus containing reference to the king of the House of David was proven to be a forgery and a hoax. The so-called discoverer was the same criminal who was arrested for forging an inscription bearing the name of Jesus on a first century ossuary. See The Christian Science Monitor, June 19, 2003.

Most conspicuously absent are any records whatsoever of seven years of taxes and labor levies for what the Bible suggests should exist for 183,000 workmen conscripted locally and from foreign countries – documents which most certainly should be found in abundance among existing contemporary records.

Considering the fact that the Holy Land is an area of the world where digging has taken place for centuries, and thousands of artifacts have been unearthed attesting to the existence and chronicling the events of early, even prehistoric cultures in the area, is it not almost inconceivable that such celebrated kingdoms and such powerful world rulers such as David and Solomon could remain so completely invisible to the archaeological record?

I realize that for some readers this may sound uncomfortably like heresy. Please don't misunderstand me. I believe it is certainly possible that evidence may someday be found that supports these particular biblical accounts. I'm just stating a fact that any objective person willing to do a little honest research will discover for himself or herself; that is, after centuries of excavation and impartial research, there is presently no tangible evidence to suggest that King David, King Solomon or his magnificent temple in Jerusalem ever existed.

That being said, I want you to consider the possibility that in twelfth-century Jerusalem the first Knights Templar – intelligent and motivated men who had the exclusive opportunity to excavate the alleged site of King Solomon's Temple – also discovered no tangible evidence to suggest that King David or King Solomon or his temple ever existed.

Any number of discoveries could have led them to conclude that biblical history was at the very best, unreliable. Perhaps their excavations demonstrated that a foundation for such an edifice could not have possibly existed at or near that location; perhaps they found tablets, inscriptions or other records that proved incontrovertibly the real history of the region – it could have been a thousand different items, artifacts, documents, or bits of information. No matter what exactly it was, if it proved (as impartial modern experts are almost universally asserting) that there was no King David – no King Solomon – no King Solomon's Temple as described in the Bible, then the entire literary foundation for the history of the Holy Land prior to the sixth century BCE[28] would evaporate into a fantasy.

Like a literary keystone placed squarely in the middle of the chronology of the Judeo-Christian biblical narrative, the story of David and Solomon links and supports the narratives of both the Old and New Testaments. If this keystone is removed, not only does the historic integrity of much of the Old Testament collapse, but a major facet of the credentials of New Testament Jesus is also radically altered. After all, in order to prove Jesus' birth was the fulfillment of Old Testament prophesies – that he was the Messiah and heir to the Davidic throne of Israel, the [28] See Chapter Nine.

Gospels go to great lengths to demonstrate that Jesus was a direct descendant of David and Solomon.

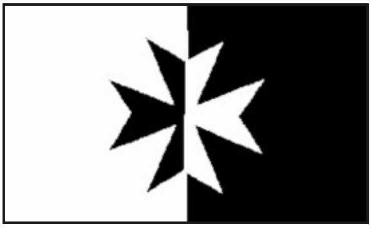
Removing this keystone would also be unsettling for pious Moslems who, despite their differences, considered themselves to be along with Jews and Christians People of the Book. What would happen to Islamic traditions that also presumed to reach that far back into biblical history?

In the twelfth century such faith-crushing revelations would have threatened to vaporize the authority of the Church and reduce to ashes the concept of the divine right of kings that had been the foundation of the social order in Europe and the West for a thousand years.

It would have turned the world upside down.

It would have been the most dangerous secret in the world.

CHAPTER EIGHT
THE MOST DANGEROUS SECRET IN THE WORLD



Three can keep a secret, if two of them are dead.
~ Benjamin Franklin (Freemason)

Am I suggesting that the Templars' secret – the most dangerous secret in the world – was that the Bible is historically untrue? In a way, yes – but it's not as simple as that. First of all, in the twelfth century there were very few actual Bibles (as we think of them today) in existence. There were very few people able to read a Bible, and even fewer able to appreciate what the Bible was or understand what it was not. For most Europeans it was the Church, not the Bible, that dictated the tenets of their faith.

If the early Templars believed they possessed such potentially earth-shaking information it would have put them in a very sticky predicament. After all, to whom could they threaten to reveal the secret? Who besides a handful of churchmen and nobles were even capable of appreciating information that carried such titanic implications? In the twelfth century there was no way for the Templars to go public. There were no newspapers, no radio or television, no books (at least not any that most Europeans could read), no investigative reporters. The Church enjoyed a monopoly on European education, literacy, and thought – it controlled history. While it appears obvious the Church was intimidated by whatever the Templars had, it would have been futile to confront this omnipotent establishment directly.

This would have put the early Templars in a position of perpetual danger. Their secret would have isolated them from the whole world – at least the world represented by the religions of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam – religions that revered certain books of the Bible – religions that owed their very existence to their adherents' belief that they were descendants of certain biblical characters, and that the Bible narratives were historically true. The most dangerous secret in the world was also the world's most blasphemous heresy.

The early Templars would have had little choice but to play their cards very close to the vest – little choice but to bide their time, build their strength, and seek out others in the Holy Land who also knew the truth – others whose beliefs made them also outcasts of orthodoxy – others who knew how to survive – others like the Ishmaelite Order of the Assassins who had already created their own degree-structured secret society to protect themselves and their interests.

The Templars would stay in Palestine and learn from the natives – the remnants of the Jewish esoteric cults, early Christians, and the mystic heretics of Islam. They would stay and drink in a thousand wonders and new ideas that passed like caravans through the crossroads of the world that was twelfth-century Jerusalem. They would dine on delicacies they'd never tasted, hear music they'd never heard before and listen to stories, histories and philosophies that they never knew existed. In short order they would become the most Easternized Westerners in the world – men who saw the bigger picture of life and culture – men who dreamed greater dreams than those of their fellow Europeans – men who tasted the forbidden fruit of knowledge – their eyes were opened and they became as gods.

Could it be just a fable?

CHAPTER NINE
BUT MASONS LOVE THE BIBLE

I do not feel obliged to believe that the same God who has endowed us with sense, reason, and intellect has intended us to forgo their use.
~ Galileo Galilei

It ain't those parts of the Bible that I can't understand that bother me, it's the parts that I do understand.
~ Mark Twain (Freemason)

I realize it is difficult, if not impossible, for many people today to even entertain the idea that the Bible may not be all they've believed it to be. The Bible has become the most popular book in the world. Today it is universally revered by the faithful as the inerrant Word of God. It occurs to very few of us to question either its holiness or its authenticity. In a world that has gone hellishly mad, we've always taken comfort in the fact that the faith of our fathers is the one thing that remains solid and unchanging. For most of us it would be unthinkable to suggest that perhaps for the last twenty-five hundred years the faith of our fathers has been one of the very big reasons why our world has gone hellishly mad.

On the surface, Masonry appears to be vigorously at odds with this worldview. After all, the Bible is very important to Masonry. As Chaplain of my Lodge I deliver the following charge to the newly-initiated Entered Apprentice Mason:

> "As a Mason, you are to regard the Volume of the Sacred Law as the great light in your profession; to consider it as the unerring standard of truth and justice; and to regulate your actions by the divine precepts it contains."

The book I refer to as the Volume of the Sacred Law in this particular section of the ritual is in most cases a large Bible that rests upon the altar where the candidate has just taken his solemn oath to the fraternity. I say in most cases because not all Masons are Christians or Jews. Indeed, as we learned earlier, candidates for Masonic initiation are not asked to identify themselves as members of any particular faith and need only profess a belief in a Supreme Being and some form of afterlife. At their initiations these candidates are obligated upon whatever holy book they revere as their own Volume of the Sacred Law.

While the term Volume of the Sacred Law is employed most often in Masonic ritual, the words Holy Bible are used in the ritual when describing the book as one of the Three Great Lights of Masonry (the other two Great Lights being the most recognizable symbols of the Craft, the Square and Compass).

Obviously, there appears to be a conflict of traditions here. It would seem at first glance that such reverence for the Holy Bible would put Masonry at odds with a hypothetical Templar secret that threatens to shoot a very big hole in the Bible's credibility. But let's look more closely at what the charge says and how it says it.

A Mason is to regard the Volume of the Sacred Law as the great light in his profession, and the unerring standard of truth and justice. He is counseled to regulate his actions by the divine precepts it contains. These are admirable instructions, and I am certainly not arguing that the Bible (or one's own Volume of the Sacred Law) is not a rich and sacred source of spiritual inspiration and guidance. They do not, however, suggest that a Mason is in any way obligated to accept the Volume of the Sacred Law as an objective history book. Moreover, it has been my observation that Masonic lectures that employ readings from the Bible or make allusions to Bible stories are entirely self-referential to lessons of Masonry and completely free from sectarian doctrines and interpretations.

It may be true that the majority of Masons believe the Bible is historically accurate, but they've come to that conclusion not because of anything they learn from Masonry, but because of their pre-existing religious convictions. There is something else at work here, something that struck me like a setting maul to the head the evening I was raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason.

I'm breaking no vows of secrecy when I share with you that the ceremony of this degree revolves around the story of King Solomon and the building of his temple. Some of it is taken directly from the Bible and tells the story of King David of Israel, and of his son, Solomon, who with the aid of his neighbor King Hiram of Tyre and the master builder, Hiram Abiff, built the magnificent Temple of God.

Most of it, however, concerns a patently non-biblical story – a dramatic myth unique to Masonry. It is the story of Hiram Abiff, the master builder who, as the Solomon's temple was nearing completion, was accosted by three workmen of the Temple who prematurely demanded from him the secret word of a Master Mason, a word that would guarantee them the freedom to travel as they will to foreign countries[29] and earn Master's wages. Hiram, of course, refused and was murdered. Shocked at their foul deed the ruffians hurriedly concealed the Grand Master's body in the rubbish heap of the temple. Later they removed it and reburied it elsewhere. Eventually, the villains were apprehended and brought before King Solomon where they confessed and were summarily executed. Solomon and King Hiram of Tyre proceeded to locate the grave, raise the body and bring it back to Jerusalem to be finally interred beneath the Holy of Holies of the Temple.

It's a wonderful legend and reminiscent of the story of Osiris and the dying god myths of a score of ancient cultures and mystery traditions. However, it is a story that is found nowhere in the Bible, and certainly not believable from an historic point of view. (An unclean dead body interred inside Holy of Holies of the Jewish Temple? I think not!) Still, the enactment of this drama is Masonry's most sacred moment and is presented by the ritual team with profound, almost religious solemnity.

[29] The freedom of unhindered travel would become one of the unique privileges of both the Knight Templars, and, the cathedral-building medieval masons.

In a subtle way, the ceremony of the Third Degree gives the new Mason permission to meditate (perhaps for the first time in his life) on sacred mythological truths existing outside the strict confines of the biblical narrative. For others (who meditate upon a possible Masonic-Templar connection) the ceremony also suggests, in a not-so-subtle way, that perhaps something was buried beneath the Holy of Holies of the Temple – not the fictional Temple of Solomon, but the very real ruins of the first century BCE Temple of Herod the Great. Modern Templar treasure hunters even suggest that the Masonic myth points to something buried beneath Scotland's Rosslyn Chapel[30] whose foundational footprint is said to be scaled to that of Herod's Temple.

With this supreme ceremony Masonry goes to great lengths to draw the candidate's attention to the Bible, especially the biblical story of David and Solomon, then almost immediately diverts his attention to a dramatic non-Biblical version of the story – almost as if to say, "You know – those Bible stories of David and Solomon and King Solomon's Temple? There's something underneath those stories. You might want to dig into it."

Masonry urges her members (all her members) to use the Volume of the Sacred Law as the Great Light in your profession. The question few of us ask, however, is when do professional stonemasons most need light? The answer is obvious. Masons need light when they dig, when they excavate, when they explore, when they seek out and bring to light those things hidden beneath the surface.

[30] Rosslyn Chapel was built in the middle of the fifteenth century by Sir William St Clair, the Earl of Orkney and prominent descendant of Hughes de Payen, one of the original nine Knights Templar.

A few pages back we learned what we find when we dig beneath the surface of the story of King Solomon and the building of his temple. There is another Bible story that Masonry goes out of its way to draw our attention to – a story surrounding the events that followed the destruction of Solomon's Temple. It is the tale of the capture and relocation of the children of Israel to Babylon, and their return to Jerusalem after seventy years to rebuild Jerusalem and the so-called Second Temple. Let's now take a moment to examine this story and see what we find when we turn the Bible's light upon itself and excavate below the surface.

First we need to try to determine exactly where the Bible narrative actually starts to intersect with objective, verifiable history. What are the historic roots of Judaism (and subsequently Christianity, and Islam)? Modern researchers have some startling answers to these questions. If the Knights Templar had reason to draw the same conclusions, they were indeed custodians of the most dangerous secret in the world.

Let's start with a place and time everyone seems to agree upon. There is little debate between secular historians and Bible scholars concerning the existence and vitality of Judaism as practiced in Palestine during the first century BCE through most of the first century CE. No credible historian dares presume to deny the existence of King Herod the Great (73-4 BCE) or his magnificent Temple in Jerusalem, or the priesthood that administered the sacrifices, or the existence and influence of cults and sects such as the Sadducees, Pharisees, and Essenes, all of whom revered a number of scriptural texts that defined their view of Judaism and dictated in exacting detail divine laws and codes of behavior of this magnificent religion.

Foremost among these texts are five books: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy (the Pentateuch), books that through their narrative relate the history of the universe, humankind and the children of Israel. Tradition holds that the Pentateuch was written by Moses himself around 1280 to 1250 BCE (when many Bible scholars compute the dates for the exodus from Egypt) and that his five books were part of the mysterious contents of the powerful and dangerous Ark of the Covenant. Let's look briefly at these five books of Moses and try to get a sense of what they are, who wrote them, and where biblical history ends and objective history begins.

Genesis, begins with the creation story of the world and humankind. It plots our family tree and the great events that link God and His people – from Adam and Eve and the fall of man through Noah and the great flood – through Abraham (who institutes penis mutilation to distinguish his family and people) and his sons Ishmael (father of the Arabs), and Isaac (father of the Jews) – through Isaac's twin sons Esau (who the Bible tells us God hated before he was born) and Jacob (who God loved) and later was renamed Israel.

Then comes Joseph, the son of Jacob/Israel, who after being sold into slavery by his jealous brothers really showed them all by making it very big in Egypt. Joseph then, in an act of gracious magnanimity, brings Israel, his father, and his entire family (the children of Israel)[31] to the land of the Pharaoh to escape a terrible famine.

The Book of Exodus continues with the adventures of Israel's family in Egypt. For a while things are wonderful. Nourished on Egypt's abundance, the seventy odd children of Israel multiply exuberantly and in a few generations become a ponderous population. After a few lean years of famine in the area, they actually become a serious economic burden upon Egypt's dwindling resources. In a ruthless pogrom, a new Pharaoh (who never knew Joseph) orders the first-born Hebrew males to be slain. The mother of baby Moses places him in a basket and sets it afloat on the river Nile near where Pharaoh's daughter is bathing. She finds the baby and raises it as her own. Moses (like Joseph many years earlier) becomes a prince of Egypt.

Moses' story is one of high drama and excitement. He discovers his true identity, kills an Egyptian, is banished to the wilderness, has a close encounter with God, and is given magical powers that bring plagues and curses upon Egypt (including the deaths of all the Egyptian first-born males). Moses is eventually allowed to take the children of Israel out of Egypt.

In the next three books, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy, Moses leads the children of Israel for forty years of wandering in the wilderness and raiding towns and villages. During this time he receives the Ten Commandments, builds the Ark of the Covenant (and a portable Tabernacle to put it in), puts to death a number of wrong-thinking members of the congregation, writes his memoirs (the Pentateuch), codifies laws and ordinances, and institutes the forms and customs of sacrificial worship that must be observed by the people in order to please God. Finally, after a generation of nomadic existence, Moses shows the children of Israel where God wants them to slaughter the natives and settle down – more or less the area generically known as Palestine.

[31] At the risk of restating the obvious – the term children of Israel refers to the descendants of Jacob/Israel, not the former inhabitants of a geographical nation of Israel.

The Book of Joshua follows the Pentateuch and continues the adventures of the children of Israel (now identified as a loose confederation of twelve tribes) as they conquer and settle the promised land, but it is the five books of Moses that first define Jewish identity as a people, a culture, and a religious entity.

Other books of the "Old Testament" (revered by both Christians and Jews) continue the story of life in the Promised Land – how the children of Israel were ruled for a time by a series of judges, and how a great king, Saul, eventually arose from among them to unite them politically. Saul was succeeded by David, then Solomon, then a string of largely despicable minor kings who would disunite the nation until it fell prey to a series of conquests. The worst of these conquests and dispersals was delivered by Nebuchanezzar whose armies destroyed the Temple of Solomon and took the residents of Judah into bondage in Babylon.

These books go on to tell the story so familiar to York and Scottish Rite Masons – a story that has an uncanny number of parallels to the tale of Moses and the exodus from Egypt. Only in this case, the exodus is from Babylon. Here we learn that after seventy years of captivity, the children of Israel were allowed to return to Jerusalem to rebuild the Temple of their God and dwell once again in their own land. Unfortunately, after only two generations the residents of Palestine had no idea who these returnees were. They resented them as invaders and foreign occupiers.

The Prophet Nehemiah and the highly influential scribe, Ezra, appear to have been instrumental in arranging the return of the children of Israel to Palestine. They insisted that it was vitally important that the temple be rebuilt, so as to reestablish their cultural identity in the region. According to both Bible and Masonic traditions, excavators and workmen had to work with a shovel in one hand and a sword in the other to fight off the disgruntled locals whose neighborly requests to be a part of the building project had been rudely rejected by the returnees.

During the excavation of the ruins of Solomon's temple workmen discovered in a subterranean vault a scroll containing the five books of Moses, something no living person among them had ever seen or read before. This event is the central theme to the Royal Arch Degree of York Rite Masonry where a ritual officer portraying the workman is lowered by a rope into the dark chamber, retrieves the scroll and delivers the exciting news:

> "I also found this scroll, but…I was unable to read its contents. I therefore gave another preconcerted signal, and was drawn out of the vault, bringing the scroll with me. We then discovered, > from the first sentence, that it contained the records of the Most Holy Law, which had been promulgated by Moses at the foot of Mount Horeb."[32]

Grasping the importance of the discovery, Ezra the Scribe had a high platform erected from which he could stand and speak to the multitudes. He caused all those who had returned from Babylon to be assembled before him and announced that the lost Book of the Law had been rediscovered. He then proceeded to read aloud for all to hear the five books of Moses.

In one of the most dramatic and poignant scenes of the Old Testament, the children of Israel hear for the first time in their lives the actual words of God from God's own book. They hear for the first time who they are and where they came from. They hear why they are God's chosen people. They learn that they are the descendants of Adam and Eve, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Israel). They hear for the first time the story of Joseph and their bondage in Egypt – of Moses and their exodus – a story each and every one of them can identify with because they have just come out of bondage in Babylon. They learn of their wanderings in the wilderness, how Moses gave them God's laws and the forms of sacrificial worship. They hear why God loves them and has given them this land because they are the descendants of Isaac and Jacob/Israel, and they hear why God hates the unhappy and resentful locals because they are the descendants of Ishmael and Esau (a gross and hairy man who traded his birthright[33] [and any future claim to the land] to Jacob/Israel for a bowl of lentil soup).[34]

[32] From the Royal Arch Degree of Masonry.

After Ezra's reading of the Pentateuch, the people became united in spirit and purpose. The new Temple was built, a particular tribe (Levi) was chosen from among them to be the priest class, the Laws of Moses were instituted and enforced, the sacrifices, practices, traditions of the old religion were resumed, and the people regained their spiritual identity.

Ironically, this most dramatic and poignant biblical scene is rarely the subject of sermons (and never to my knowledge, the subject of motion pictures). Masonry, on the other hand, makes her members think about it a lot.

It is at this point in time (approximately 539 BCE, when historical and critical scholarly evidence confirms that Cyrus the Great of Persia conquered Babylon and began to deport and resettle the descendants of Nebuchanezzar's foreign captives) that empirical history starts to hint of the presence of a Jewish people whose center of worship is a temple in Jerusalem. Prior to this,[35] however, there is silence concerning the children of Israel. Our only evidence of Abraham, Isaac, Ishmael, Jacob/Israel, Esau, Joseph (and the Egyptian captivity), Moses (and the exodus and wandering), Joshua (and the conquest of Palestine), and the kingdoms of Saul, David and Solomon is the Bible – and in this case, the Bible is demonstrably unreliable history.

University of Copenhagen, writes …

> "In writing about the historical developments of Palestine between 1250 and 586 (BCE), all of the traditional answers given for the origins and development of 'Israel' have had to be discarded. The patriarchs of Genesis were not historical. The assertion that 'Israel' was already a people before entering Palestine whether in these stories or in those of Joshua has no historical foundation. No massive military campaign of invading nomadic 'Israelites' ever conquered Palestine. There never was an ethnically distinct 'Canaanite' population whom 'Israelites' displaced. There was no 'period of the Judges' in history. No empire ever ruled a 'united monarchy' from Jerusalem. No ethnically coherent 'Israelite' nation ever existed at all … In history, neither Jerusalem nor Judah ever shared an identity with Israel before the rule of the Hasmoneans in the Hellenistic period." [36]

The Hasmoneans Thompson refers to above were a priest family called the Maccabees who led a successful (and historically verifiable) rebellion against the Selucid kings of Syria in the Second century BCE and established an autonomous Jewish kingdom that existed until 67 BCE when the area was annexed by the Romans.[37]

The next obvious question becomes, who wrote the books of the Bible where these stories originate? And the answer is simple. We don't know. It is clear that multiple scribes and authors were involved. Many traditionalists believe the Prophet Jeremiah wrote at least part of these texts, but Jewish tradition, St Jerome, and many modern Bible scholars think Ezra the Scribe (or the person or persons writing as Ezra/Nehemiah) edited and formatted much of the Pentateuch and several other Old Testament books including Joshua, Judges, and the books of Samuel, Kings, and Chronicles, no earlier than the sixth century BCE. Many secular scholars agree generally upon the sixth century date but also suggest that same author(s) actually penned the Pentateuch, and at the very least had a hand in compiling and editing the books of Chronicles, Kings and several other books of the Old Testament.

There are literally hundreds of complex and convoluted theories of exactly who put pen to paper to create the books of the Old Testament, but most seem to dovetail in a greater or lesser degree, to the person or persons known in the Bible as Ezra. Furthermore, there is almost universal agreement that the works cannot be traced any further back in time than the sixth century BCE. Prior to this the historical and archaeological fingerprint of a Hebrew people united by a single religion occupying a nation with its headquarters in Jerusalem is non-existent. Indeed, according to Norman F. Cantor, Emeritus Professor of History, Sociology, and Comparative Literature New York University, Rhodes Scholar, Porter Ogden Jacobus Fellow at Princeton University, and Fulbright Professor at Tel Aviv University:

> "The first millennium of Jewish history as presented in the Bible has no empirical foundation whatsoever." [38]

That is quite a statement, and I venture to say that most men and women of faith around the world would not believe it even if they were presented with uncontroversial proof. It would be a psychological blow of biblical proportions (forgive me) to anyone whose religious convictions are based upon the historicity of the Bible. It would be an even bigger blow to the self-image and the geo-political interests of contending political forces embroiled in today's Middle Eastern conflicts – combatants who appear to be treating the pages of the Old Testament as if they were land grants whose deeds of ownership were signed by God Himself.

Nevertheless, the unthinkable appears to be true. The kingdoms of David and Solomon are fable, not history. The idea of twelve distinct tribes of the children of Israel with a past reaching back to the thirteenth century BCE was likely an ingenious concept fabricated in the sixth century BCE[39] (or later) to provide a single cultural and religious identity to the descendants of a diverse assortment of people with no cultural memory whatsoever – people whose ancestors came from a dozen or more regions conquered by Nebuchanezzar – people whose real ancestors were thrown together by the fortunes of world events and who eventually had to be relocated when Babylon fell to the Persians. Because Palestine was an area undefended by a unified political or military presence, it was an ideal "homeland" for such a mass relocation.

Van Seters' book took the argument even further by showing that the Biblical stories themselves could not be seen as early, but must be dated sometime in the sixth century BCE or later."

The Crusaders and the infidels witness two horsemen sparring in a friendly duel.

If considered in this "light" both the Bible and Masonic tradition point the rational investigator to at least consider this scenario. If all of this seems like something that could never happen, I need only point to events of a little over one hundred years ago involving the American prophet, Joseph Smith, his successor, Brigham Young, and the "exodus" of the Latter Day Saints to Utah.

This revelation is indeed earthshaking, and not everyone is capable of absorbing such a blow. It would, after all, lead one to speculate upon the unthinkable possibility that a good percentage of the wars, the genocides, the hatreds and feuds that have cursed Western civilization for the last three thousand years have been (and continue to be) tragic arguments that began over nothing. It takes the mature pragmatism of a true spiritual grownup to even speculate on the implications of such matters. However, it needn't spell the end to one's faith in the "holiness" of scripture.

Yes, it's probably true that Moses didn't write the Pentateuch, David didn't write Psalms, and Solomon didn't write Ecclesiastes or even the Song of Solomon – but somebody did. The holiness – or the spiritual integrity of these documents – is not diminished in any way by their lack of historic reliability. Ask any Kabbalist. Whoever wrote Genesis not only gathered and synthesized the creation myths of a handful of Semitic traditions, he or she did so with the skill of an illuminated mathematician and the insight of a poetic genius. Whoever wrote Psalms, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon was a passionately devotional saint. These works will forever offer real spiritual treasures to the sincere devotee, but to insist that they are also history is to invite their misuse by social and political entities who are always ready to engender and perpetuate fear and hatred between peoples and cultures for their own interests.

For me it is clear that Masonry, either by design, accident, or synchronicity, quietly affords her sons the opportunity to become, as it were, spiritual grownups – good men made better by their work in the Craft – men whose concept of God is big enough to take a hit or two. Admittedly, this new view of the Old Testament is a pretty big hit. But, unless we are blinded by superstition or bigotry, the readjustment of a few dates and the ability to distinguish between sacred mythology and viable history needn't destroy Scripture's place in our hearts as …an unerring standard of truth and justice.

But the majority of Masons are Christians. We might now ask, how do Masonic ideals square with the New Testament? In the second Degree of Masonry, the Senior Deacon in his magnificent Middle Chamber lecture delivers what might be viewed as a hit to a fundamental doctrine of Christianity. Standing between the stately pillars of the Temple he instructs the candidate that he is to pay "…rational homage to the Deity," and informs him of the nature and meaning of Operative Masonry; that by that term we allude to a "proper application of the useful rules of architecture;" and that these rules not only display the effects of human wisdom they also "… demonstrate that a fund of science and industry is implanted in man for the best, most salutary, and most beneficent purposes."

What edifying words! What positive and encouraging words for a good man to hear at the beginning of his travels to become a better man. Who on earth could disagree with these words?

Paul.

The Apostle Paul would have violently disagreed. And I believe it is highly likely the Knights Templar believed they had every reason to violently disagree with Paul.

CHAPTER TEN
THE CRUCIFIX

Quantum nobis prodest hæc fabula Christi.
(It has served us well, this myth of Christ.)
~ Pope Leo X (1513-1521)

We may never know the details of the Templar's cultural cross-pollination (if any) with the Ishmaelite Order of the Assassins and/or other Middle Eastern sects or philosophies. History informs us that throughout the twelfth century the Templars were fierce and formidable warriors who time and time again distinguished themselves in battle against the Saracen forces. It is equally clear that during the years of occupation and eventual decay of the European presence in the Holy Land the Templars enjoyed from time to time a diplomatic (if not patently cooperative) relationship with the Moslem locals, and because of the ease by which the Templars acclimated themselves to their oriental environment, rumors circulated of a secret alliance.

Whether true or not, in legend and popular (and later, Masonic) imagination the Templars became almost superheroes (or super-villains), masters of the magical arts, the Kabbalah, demon evocation, alchemy, even sexual magic. Several of these traditions (sex magic not included) are not so subtly touched upon in the York and Scottish Rites of Freemasonry, where degrees concerning the return of the children of Israel from Babylon are heavily peppered with references to the Kabbalah and juxtaposed with ceremonies concerning the Knights Templar.

Obviously, Masonry doesn't venerate the Templars because of their supposed sorceries or because they were sodomites or because they perhaps spat on crucifixes. It is nonetheless a well-known fact that they were accused of (and confessed to) doing all those things. Still the Craft reveres this disgraced and banished Order even to the point of institutionalizing the Templar ideal to young men in the DeMolay Order.

It is true that as the Templars grew rich and powerful, they also grew arrogant, but it is clear to me that from their inception in 1118, until their destruction in 1314, the Knights Templar remained men of faith who considered themselves Christians and believed most fervently in God. I am, however, suggesting that their "secret" made it impossible for them to continue in good conscience to embrace the authority of the Bible and certain doctrines of the Church of Rome – doctrines that demanded from Christians an unquestioning and unhealthy faith in things the Templars knew (and believed they could prove) to be untrue. We can only speculate exactly which Church doctrines they rejected, but if there is even a scrap of truth hidden in testimonies extracted through torture, then we are led to conclude they despised in particular the veneration of the crucifix.

Recall that a number of knights confessed that when they were received into the Order they were required to spit upon and trample a crucifix underfoot, and that they were ordered not to worship the crucifix. This is one of the most shocking accusations leveled at the Templars by the Inquisition, and contributed heavily to their reputation as black magicians. We must, however, remember that there is a profound difference between the symbol of a cross (which in its many forms has been a venerated symbol since prehistoric times) and that of the crucifix (a cross displaying a dead and bloodied corpse). It is also significant to point out the cross (a simple equal-armed device) did not appear in Christian art until the middle of the fifth century CE,[40] and that scenes of the crucifixion did not appear in Christian art until the seventh century CE.[41] Prior to this, the symbol of Christianity was the fish, and the image most often associated with Jesus was that of a shepherd carrying a lamb.

Recall also these same knights testified they where told at their initiation that Jesus was a man who died like all men die. This opinion was also common among first-century Christians, including the followers of James, the biological brother of Jesus, who taught, among other things, that the simple act of following Jesus' example and applying his teachings to one's life was a way to salvation.

This was not, however, the view of the twelfth-century Church of Rome which propagated the doctrines of original sin, the total depravity of man, and the imminent physical resurrection of all the buried corpses in the world. These doctrines were inventions of Paul – a man who never met Jesus – a man with whom the first-century Church in Jerusalem (led by James) had significant, perhaps even violent, disagreements.

For nearly five hundred years after the deaths of James and Paul Christianity was enmeshed in major ideological conflicts. These were fights over what would become the fundamental tenets of the faith. Eventually it came down to a bitter clash between two radically different factions. At the heart of the conflict was a disagreement about who exactly Jesus was and what made him important. Oddly enough, the debate didn't focus directly on Jesus as Messiah or his teachings but upon the person of Adam and the doctrine of Adam's guilt, or original sin.

On one hand there were those who more or less took the position of the early Church in Jerusalem, the remnants of the original followers of Jesus. They considered Jesus a holy man, a martyred master whose bloodline marked him for a kingly or priestly destiny. Their view of original sin was basically that they believed that Adam's sin hurt no one but himself and not the entire human race – that he would have died whether he sinned or not. They believed that babies are born in the same innocent state as Adam before his big mistake, and as such humanity doesn't need a sacrificial offering (such as Jesus' crucifixion) or a demonstrable miracle (such as being raised from the dead) to achieve salvation.

A religion based on this fundamental premise saw Christianity as the natural evolution from Old Testament law to the new law of the Gospel. It would be a rather simple faith that strictly observed the Law of Moses and revered the life and teachings of Jesus, the Anointed One – a religion that taught that salvation is earned by following the example of the Good Shepherd, by doing good and obeying what he called the greatest commandment of both the Old and the New Testaments,[42] "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself."

Opposing this was a religion (invented almost entirely by Paul) that relegated to insignificance the sermons and fundamental teachings of Jesus. The teachings ultimately became irrelevant because Paul believed (that due to the curse of Adam's sin) we all are born guilty and come into the world already stained with sin, condemned to die and poised to suffer an eternity of torment. This sin-of-being-born cannot be removed by performing good works or adhering to any law. Indeed, according to Paul, only one thing can remove the curse – blood – the atoning blood of a crucified God made flesh.

This extension of the animal sacrifice motif of the Jews was based upon Paul's metaphysical obfuscation of the events surrounding the execution and the reported resurrection of Jesus. Just as the blood of a slaughtered lamb was used in Temple worship services to absolve the devotee of certain sins, Paul posited that Jesus was the Lamb of God and that the blood of the God-Man-Christ, can (under certain circumstances) absolve us from the sin of Adam. This is who Paul tells us Jesus was. This is what Paul tells us Jesus ultimately came to do – not to preach – not to teach – not to serve as an example – but to die. The blood-drenched body of Jesus nailed to a crucifix was the perfect symbol for this suicidal act of blood sacrifice.

In order for our sin to be removed, Paul taught we must first surrender our natural self-esteem by consciously and verbally confessing we believe that (because we were born sinners) we are guilty and deserving of eternal damnation. After accepting this identity we must then exhibit complete and absolute faith that Jesus was God incarnate who came to earth to take upon himself the sufferings that we deserve for the spiritual crime of being born, and that his death, his physical resurrection, and his bodily ascension into the sky were all objective historical events.

To this unquestioning faith, Paul added one more condition to salvation – the Grace of God. Just exactly what grace is remains an ongoing debate, but according to Paul there is nothing we can do to earn it. We either have it when we are born or we don't. Without grace we are damned to an eternity in hell no matter how good we are in life or how strongly we believe in Christ. For the elect who enjoy the Grace of God there is no crime too hideous, no sin too evil that can exempt them from salvation.

The doctrine that salvation is achieved apart from good works and righteous behavior is totally unique to Paul and found nowhere else in Scripture.[43] It is totally alien to the example of Jesus' life and the words of his ministry. It is the complete antithesis of the position held by James, the brother of Jesus, and his Church in Jerusalem. It would also appear that it would also be at odds with the Masonic doctrine that tells us that, "a fund of science and industry is implanted in man for the best, most salutary and most beneficent proposes."

[43] Isaiah spoke about good works being as "filthy rags" (which Paul would later quote). But when read in context we see that Isaiah was chastising the people over their behavior concerning a specific event, not making a pronouncement concerning the fundamental nature of man.

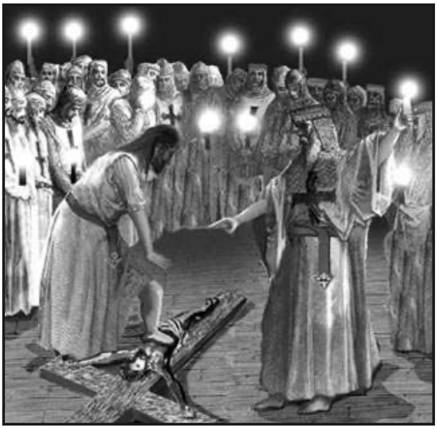
Yet Paul's doctrines would eventually win out, at least for the Church of Rome. In the fifth century, largely due to the brilliant powers of persuasion of Saint Augustine of Hippo (354-430 CE), Christianity became in essence Paulianity. Paul's radical doctrines of the total depravity of man and original sin would throughout the Dark Ages define the nature of the human soul, and be the canon of a ruthless and powerful Church – a Church whose doctrines of self-loathing were symbolized by the intimidating and terrible instrument of sadistic torture and death – the crucifix.

I appreciate the reader's patience for suffering through this brief excursion through Church history and the twists and turns of dogma and doctrine. I did so not to bore you or to persuade you in any way concerning matters of faith, which should always remain a matter of personal conscience. I did so to set the stage, so to speak, for what I am now about to say about the Knights Templar.

I believe that at his initiation the Knights Templar candidate was indeed called upon to spit upon a crucifix and trample it underfoot. I believe he was required to do so not as an act of black magic or to abjure the divinity of Christ, but rather to purposefully desecrate the symbol of what the Order believed to be a monstrous perversion of the truth – a lie born of a chain of lies that reached back a thousand years before the death of the crucified savior – a lie that outraged natural reason and common sense – a lie that made us hate our very existence – a lie that blinded the masses of Western civilization to the profound spiritual beauties of the teachings and example of the holy man from Galilee – a lie that nailed humanity's spirit and self-esteem upon a cross of guilt and fear and shame.

Furthermore, I hear the echo of this attitude in Masonry's traditional antagonism toward temporal tyranny, in its militant stand against ignorance and superstition, in its legendary enmity towards oppressive religion, in its exaltation of the arts and sciences, in its call for a rational homage to the Deity, and in its unambiguous affirmation of the inherent goodness of humankind.

Yes, I believe that at his initiation the Knights Templar candidate did indeed spit upon the crucifix and trample it underfoot. And I believe that by doing so he was taking the first step towards challenging the lie and freeing his own soul.



Templar Initiation?

CHAPTER ELEVEN
SORCERY

When men stop believing in God, it isn't that they then believe in nothing: they believe in everything.
~ Umberto Eco

Without doubt the most ridiculous and ludicrous charge still being leveled against modern Masonry is that of sorcery. One need only search the internet using the key words Masonry and black magic to be bombarded with hundreds of web sites that accuse the Craft of everything from Satanism and devil worship to cannibalism and human sacrifice. Even as I am writing this, Masons are being condemned in print as an evil race of devils descended from Cain or space aliens. My favorite accuses us of being shape-shifting reptiles who form a secret world government that has ruled the world since the fall of Adam. It all would be uproariously funny if not for the disturbing fact that many of these people actually believe what they are saying and their malicious and misinformed hate-speech springs from the most vile and dangerous nether regions of the human heart – from the very real devils of ignorance, intolerance, and anti-Semitism.

I'm afraid it is inevitable that this book too (because it treats on the subject of magic and controversial aspects of history and religion) will be held up by the ignorant and superstitious as more proof that Masonry is the blasphemous enemy of the True Faith. Today, however (probably to the disappointment of anti-Masonic webmasters), it is unlikely that I will be imprisoned and burned at the stake for exercising my freedom of speech and voicing my personal beliefs. In the fourteenth century, the Knights Templar were not so lucky.

Sorcery was one of the Inquisition's favorite charges because it put the poor accused in the hopeless position of having to prove a negative in order to beat the rap. Personally, I find it easy to believe that during their nearly two-hundred year history individual members of the Order did indeed engage in diverse forms of spiritual practices that would have been forbidden and condemned by the Church of Rome. But then, we must also remember that the Church would have probably condemned as satanic a host of things that today we would not consider strange or evil at all – yoga, acupuncture, transcendental meditation, creative visualization, herb tea … talking to a cat!

The consistency of some of the Templar's confessions point in particular to the practice of consulting an oracle in the form of a human skull, or the head of an ass, or even a black cat. Such divinatory practices were not uncommon among Arab magicians of the period. Still, it is impossible for us to know with any level of certainty if the charges of sorcery had basis in truth or not. Nevertheless the air of magic has always enveloped the Templar image and, as we've learned, it is legend, not history that takes up archetypal residence in our cultural consciousness and creates the traditions of secret societies. Keeping this in mind, let's consider what kind of abominable sorceries might the legendary Templars have been practicing.

Among the most popular magical practices forbidden by the Church were (and are) those whose literature and traditions would have us believe they originated with King Solomon. In fact, there is a whole school of magic known as Solomonic Magic which encompasses a broad spectrum of techniques that range from making astrological talismans, to conjuring demons and spirits into triangles, brass bottles or other objects. It is called Solomonic because it is based on manuscripts[44] pseudepigraphically attributed to the legendary king himself.

It would be unwise for us to dismiss these documents as valueless just because we know they weren't written by King Solomon himself. Some source materials boast provenances of respectable antiquity (some experts suggest anywhere from the first to the seventh century CE). Modern translations of several of the classics of Solomonic Magic are currently in print and grace bookstore shelves around the world providing inspiration to new generations of serious students and practitioners (and a source of mischief for incautious would-be wizards). During the time the Templars resided in the Holy Land, however, such texts were only available in Hebrew and Arabic.

[44] The three most notable Solomonic texts are, The Testament of Solomon, The Greater Key of Solomon, and the Little Key of Solomon (the Goetia).

Arguably, the most colorful and effective variety of Solomonic magic is known as Goetia.[45] and is found in the first of a collection of five books called the Lemegeton[46] or the Lesser Key of Solomon. These papers are dated 1697 CE and appear to be one collector's attempt to have his favorite ancient texts of Solomonic magic copied and conveniently bound into a single folio. They bear evidence that their language has been modernized, and that they were transcribed from far older manuscripts. The centerpiece of the Lesser Key of Solomon is a list of seventy-two spirits drawn from a number of ancient traditions, and instructions how they may safely be called forth. Each spirit is described in detail along with the special powers and abilities it supposedly can provide the magician. The second section of this book contains pertinent excerpts from this text.

At first glance, Solomonic magic appears to have all the trappings of black magic. In fact, it's very much like a scene from a gothic horror film. The magician first casts a circle on the ground or the floor of the magical temple. This circle is protected by the numerous names of God found in the Bible along with the names of traditional archangels, angels and kabalistic words of power. (see Figure A). The magician, properly dressed and armed with the magic wand, stands in the center of the circle, and with the aid of pure will, magical words and gestures he or she conjures a demon from the infernal regions into a magic triangle placed a few feet outside of the circle. The triangle is also surrounded by three traditional words of power that will keep the spirit trapped safely inside. (see Figure A).

[45] Goetia was originally a Greek word for sorcery or witchcraft. A related word, goetes means a wailer and perhaps alludes to the long tradition of the sanctity of barbarous names of evocation extending back to classical times.

[46] Sloane manuscript Nos. 2731 and 3648 currently found in the British Library.

The magician then compels the spirit to recognize him or her as its lord and master, then charges it to perform some task tradition (and the book) says the spirit is capable of executing. As you will soon discover, the classic procedure is much more involved and complex than this, but I think you get the general idea of what kind of magic this is.

It all sounds pretty wild and dangerous, and in fact it is. But before you jump to the conclusion that such an enterprise is the nadir of primitive superstition I would like you for a moment to pause and view such an operation not as a magical ceremony but as a psychological exercise – a psychodrama whereby we call forth and isolate previously uncontrolled potentialities within ourselves and redirect their heretofore chaotic and destructive energies toward constructive ends.

We do this naturally every time we exercise self-discipline to master a skill and bring out hidden talents. For example, when I was twelve years old I wanted to play the guitar – learning to how to play the guitar was the object of my magical operation. In order to do that I first had to conjure a guitar to visible appearance. This was accomplished by first invoking a divine power greater than myself (my parents). Then by means of a program of intense prayer (incessant whining) and sacred covenants (promises that I would practice hard and eventually pay back the money) a real guitar finally materialized in my hands.

I then created the magical circle by isolating myself from the myriad diversions of adolescence while I focused intently upon the work at hand. Then I evoked one by one the demons of my uncoordinated hands and fingers and trapped them in the triangle of will, determination and practice. Finally, I mastered the spirits of the melodies, lyrics and rhythms of the songs I wished to play and made them my servants.

Until I mastered these demons I could not call myself a guitar player (magician). Like a Fellow-craft Mason I was not yet a Master. I did not yet have King Solomon's Pass to travel to foreign countries (neighboring towns and cities) and earn Master Mason's Wages (play in a dance band and make $20 a night!)

Other personal demons are more dangerous and harder to master. Indeed, they can be deadly. How many of us can truthfully say that we have never allowed greed, or jealousy, or insecurity, or lust, or laziness to ruin a potential triumph? How many times have you said to yourself, I am my own worst enemy? These uncontrolled bad habits and character flaws could be personified as malicious spirits who pop up at the worst possible times to sabotage our best-laid plans. Wouldn't we love to master them and force them to work for our benefit instead of our undoing?

Certainly, from one perspective, the Goetic magician's "hell"[47] is his or her own psyche, and the infernal spirits are portions of the unconscious mind, or unbalanced and misfiring aspects of our emotional life. Up until the moment we evoke and redirect them these "demons" remain uncontrolled and undirected. The seventy-two spirits that are catalogued in the Goetia and who appear in the second section of this book are convenient personifications of these various potential powers and abilities. What makes them dangerous is the fact that unless they are called forth and forced to labor (like Solomon's genii) in harmony with the magician's will, they will continue to run amuck and work their mischief in our lives.

[47] Middle English helle – Anglo-Saxon hel – meaning hidden, concealed.

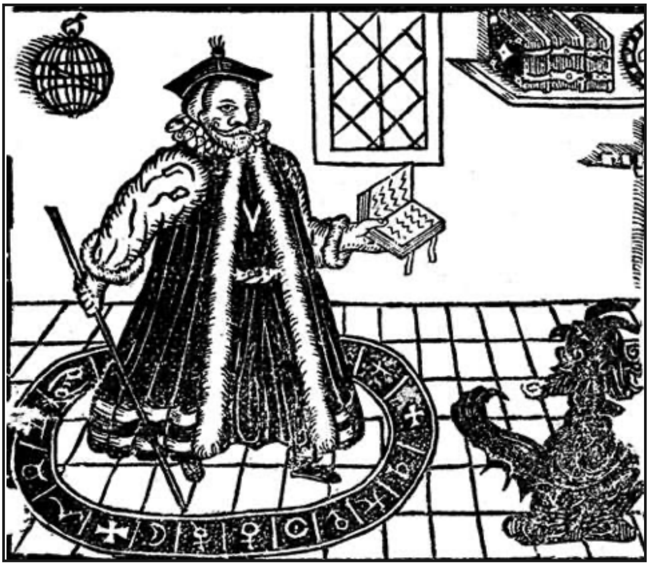
This is precisely what magical tradition tells us King Solomon did in order to gather a labor force to build the Temple of God. But does this type of magic really work?

I assure you it does.

Did the Templars engage in such practices?



Magician Evoking a Demon.
(Engraving from Robert Fludd – Ultriusque cosmi historia, 1617.)

We don't know. It is clear that Templars not only had the opportunity to be exposed to such practices but because of their secret knowledge considered themselves spiritually exempt from Church-imposed proscriptions of such behavior. The multiple Templar confessions concerning the oracular head, or Baphomet, might also point to magical operations of this nature.

Does Freemasonry teach or encourage such practices?

Most assuredly not!

Why then, you might ask, am I about to dedicate a significant portion of this book to the practice of this particular form of Solomonic magic?

Because within the sealed vault of this dark and forbidden spiritual practice can be found a certain formula of magic that, if used with skill and courage, fulfills the Kryptos' promise of wonderful things – the Key to Solomon's Key – the true Secrets of Magic and Masonry.

But in order for us to actually use Solomon's Key we must first come to the full realization of who we are and where we fit into the great cosmic scheme.

CHAPTER TWELVE
INITIATION

In short, whoever finds this house, is ruler of the world, Solomon of his time.
~ Jelaluddin Rumi[48]

In the first chapter of this book I said that regardless of the circumstances surrounding Masonry's creation and development – regardless the past or present motives and activities of its individual leaders and members, the Craft is indeed the custodian of a profound and fundamental secret. I also made what to many may have sounded like the presumptuous and audacious remark that I possessed the key to that secret. I here repeat that assertion.

If, however, you were hoping that the nature of the secret takes the form of the mummified body of Jesus or a gold-plated Ark of the Covenant hidden under the pyramid at the Louvre or beneath the grounds of CIA headquarters, or proof of the extraterrestrial origins of the British Royal family, then I'm afraid you are about to be disappointed. For although wonders such as these may well exist and someday be brought to light, their discovery would only serve to slightly readjust our view of mundane history as it relates to religion and politics.

[48] The House of Love. Version by Kabir Helminski, Love is a Stranger (Boston: Shambhala Threshold Books, 1993.

The real secret is not a document or a book or an artifact. It is something that can neither be taught nor learned. It is an incommunicable fact of life that concerns the most profound wonder in the universe, the mystery of consciousness itself, and our ability to achieve progressively higher levels of consciousness.

In order to do that we must become a new kind of person, and we have to start that process the same way the legendary Knights Templar did – by first liberating ourselves from the great delusion that keeps most of us in a state of spiritual bondage – the delusion that we do not create our own reality – the delusion that we are helpless victims of some*one* or some*thing* else's reality. This seems like such a little step, but it is in reality a quantum leap of consciousness, a fundamental shift of self-identity. As innocuous as the traditions and ceremonies of Freemasonry may appear, they do, by their very order and structure, elegantly communicate to anyone with eyes to see the essence of the formula of initiation.

First of all, we must want to change. In keeping with the most ancient customs of the Mystery tradition, Masonry invites no one into her ranks. Each potential candidate must voluntarily apply and swear he is unbiased by friends and uninfluenced by mercenary motives.

Secondly, the initiation ritual itself reveals the threefold formula of evolution: resistance, struggle, and mutation. The candidate submits to this process again and again as he is repeatedly barred from advancement within the lodge room; then confronted with an ordeal or otherwise purified or instructed. Finally he is eventually allowed to pass and take his place in the Temple.

The candidate physically experiences this process on the night of his initiation, but he is also required to embed the experience in the deepest recesses of his mind. He does this by painstakingly committing large portions of the ceremony to memory and then reciting it letter perfect before the Master and his lodge brothers. Until this is done he is not considered qualified to take the next degree. This is more difficult for some than others, but the ordeal of memorization is vitally important, for once the formula of initiation becomes imprinted upon the subconscious mind it becomes difficult if not impossible to remove from the psyche. This simple formula, experienced by every Mason in his travels through the degrees, is precisely that outlined in the Egyptian Book of the Dead, and parallels the journey of the deceased as he or she passes to higher and higher levels of post mortem consciousness.

The third and most important factor in the formula of initiation is the act of consciously inserting ourselves into the divine circuitry of the cosmos. One can rightly argue that we are all, at all times, whether we recognize it or not, an inextricable part of the universal and supreme stream of consciousness/existence. But it is not until we wake up and recognize our position in this circuitry can we begin the Great Work – the work of invoking the forces of nature above us so that we may master own demons and redirect their chaotic energy to build the Temple of our own evolving soul.

This is what the archetypal Solomon did, and in Masonry this is expressed in the disarmingly simple admonition, "No man should ever undertake any great or important undertaking without first invoking the blessing of God."

Once again, the Bible provides the key in a simple story that conceals a fundamental secret of magic – a lesson that if we observe we will gain the power to control the infernal spirits, and if we ignore we will be assured that the infernal spirits will remain in control of us. The third chapter of the Book of Kings tells us that at the beginning of his reign the Lord appeared to Solomon in a vision by night and said, "Ask that which I should give you."[49] Solomon answered,

> "Give therefore to thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people and to discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?" And it pleased the Lord because Solomon had asked this thing. And the Lord said to Solomon, "Because you have asked this thing and have not asked for yourself riches, neither have you asked the lives of your enemies nor have you asked for yourself long life, but have asked for yourself wisdom to discern judgment; Behold, I have done according to your words; lo, I have given you a wise and understanding heart, so that there has been none like you before you, neither shall any arise after you like you."[50]

[50] Ibid. verses 9- 12.

Before undertaking the task of ruling his people and building the Temple, Solomon doesn't begin by consulting with his inferiors (his ministers, his generals, his architects, his building supply contractors, or labor leaders). He doesn't immediately enmesh himself in the energy-draining details of micromanaging such a huge and important project. Instead he turns his attention upward to the highest level of the hierarchical scale of consciousness. He makes direct contact with Deity and, instead of behaving like a helpless youngster asking a parent for pocket money, he boldly makes himself available to serve as a conduit through which Deity's infinite wisdom and understanding can pass.

This profoundly mature and uncomplicated request is instantly granted, as if Deity had no choice but to acquiesce. A unique[51] spiritual hierarchy is created with Solomon enthroned midway between heaven and hell – poised to work in cosmic harmony with the divine consciousness above him – poised to compel the infernal spirits to do the same.

This is the primary secret of Solomonic magic. As long as the magician remains plugged in to that which is above, he or she is simultaneously plugged into (and must begin to master) that which is below.

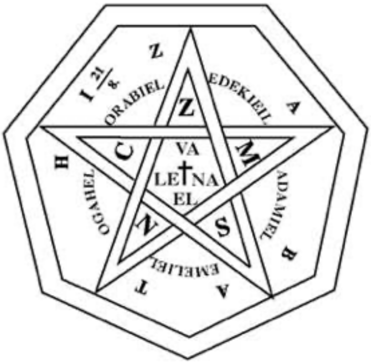
[51] Just as no two people share the same spiritual history (karma), flaws, talents, or potential, each magician's career is entirely unique. Hence the Lord's comment to Solomon, "Lo, I have given you a wise and understanding heart, so that there has been none like you before you, neither shall any arise after you like you."

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
SEVEN SECRETS OF SOLOMON



"The Hermetic Science of the early Christian ages, cultivated also by … the Arabs, studied by the Chiefs of the Templars, and embodied in certain symbols of the higher Degrees of Freemasonry, may be accurately defined as the Kabalah in active realization, or the Magic of Works."

~ Albert Pike[52]

The epigram above was written by Albert Pike (1809-1891), arguably the most eminent and influential Masonic scholar and leader of all time. As I conclude this section of my little book I cannot imagine a more concise distillation of what I wish to communicate by writing it. In one breath Pike manages to link early Christianity, Arab scholars, the Templars, Freemasonry, Kabbalah, and Magic. His words also afford me the opportunity to touch briefly on one vitally important and fundamental axiom of the spiritual science called Hermetics.

[52] Albert Pike, Morals and Dogma of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. (First Edition Published by the authority of the Supreme Council of the Thirty-Third Degree for the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States. Charleston: 1871, 1906 and numerous modern reprints. p. 804.

Some Masons believe that Freemasonry is the modern incarnation of ancient Hermeticsm – that the Templars were influenced by Hermetic philosophy, and engaged in magical practices based upon Hermetic principles. We could argue ad infinitum whether or not there is any truth to these speculations and at the end of the day still not come to a satisfactory resolution. For our purposes, let us be content with what Brother Albert Mackey wrote in his Encyclopædia of Freemasonry:

> "Hermetic Science – The art or science of Alchemy, so termed from Hermes Trismegistus who was looked up to by the alchemists as the founder of their art. The Hermetic philosophers say that all the sages of antiquity, such as Plato, Socrates, Aristotle, and Pythagoras, were initiated into the secrets of their science; and that the hieroglyphics of Egypt and all the fables of mythology were invented to teach the dogmas of Hermetic philosophy." [53]

Hermetic tradition informs us that first revelation of God to man was the Emerald Tablet of Hermes[54] Trismigistus.

[53] Albert Mackey. Encyclopædia of Freemasonry op cit. p.323.

[54] In his book, The Lost Keys of Freemasonry (Los Angeles: Philosophical Research Society, Inc. 1996). Manly Palmer Hall, 33°, the great twentieth-century Masonic scholar and mystic, identifies Hermes with the Hiram Abiff, the hero/martyr of Masonic mythology.

It was said to have been over two thousand years old at the time of Christ. It was reportedly cast in liquid emerald by alchemical means, and the letters were raised in bas relief rather than being chiseled into the stone. Most authorities naturally dismiss the historic veracity of the legend, but whatever its origin the text stands as the consummate distillation of Hermetic thought outlining the alchemical process that transmutes lead into gold and you and I into gods.

The document is only thirteen short paragraphs in length and opens with the statement:

> "It is true and no lie, certain, and to be depended upon, that the superior agrees with the inferior, and the inferior with the superior, to effect that one truly wonderful work." [55]

These words reveal the cosmos to be a hierarchy of repeating patterns. Like the keys of a piano, the notes that comprise the octaves of the worlds above have their direct counterparts in (and vibrate sympathetically with) the octaves of the worlds below. The superior agrees with the inferior. As above, so below.[56] (I'm going to use this phrase a lot in this chapter so I hope you've got a pretty good grasp on this concept.)

Armed with this knowledge one becomes (in the truest sense of the term) a magician – a Solomon – a person who can affect positive life changes in conformity to his or her enlightened Will. It's as simple as that. However, that is more easily said than done, and there are a few things we must also keep in mind in order to make as above, so below actually work for us. These I presumptuously call the Seven Secrets of Solomon. They are secrets of magic, yes. But they are also secrets of Masonry. For through her rituals, traditions, and teachings the ancient craft of Freemasonry conveys these same secrets to anyone who has eyes to see and ears to hear.

[55] Ibid. p. 95.

[56] The Kabbalist will tell us that opening chapter of Genesis affirms this fundamental concept by informing us that Adam (the human race) was created in the image of God. In Greek mythology, Prometheus fashioned us in the image of the Gods.

Solomon's Secret #1

The individual is the fundamental unit.

I know this doesn't sound like much of a mystical secret, but it's a very big one. If you can't swallow this you'll never be a magician. We are, each one of us, our own self-contained King Solomon. We are suns not planets, atoms not molecules, kings and queens, not subjects. The fundamental unit of society is not the family, not the community, not the nation, not the Church, but you and I. Until we come to the full realization of this fundamental truth we remain like unenlightened Crusaders fighting and dying for someone else's absurd fantasy cause, slaves to arbitrary and impersonal outside entities, unable to recognize (let alone fulfill) our human potential.

This profound yet unassuming secret is expressed in Freemasonry by the simple admonition that we must first improve and perfect ourselves as individuals so better to understand and assist our families, communities, and nations.

Solomon's Secret #2
Human beings are inherently good.

As we learned in Chapter Ten, this is where we come toe-to-toe with the doctrines of original sin and the total depravity of man. While it is true that humans are capable of harboring the most vile and hideous thoughts, and our fellows continue to plague the world with bloody orgies of pain and death and genocide, it is not helpful – it is not healthful – indeed, it is not logical for us to focus on these manifestations of evil and assume they represent our true spiritual nature. As a solder, Francis of Assisi was a playboy and a thief. Young Mohandas Gandhi slapped his wife around. Were these their essential natures? We are all potential saints and mahatmas, and if we can't wake up to the fact that deep down inside we are good, then we deserve to remain asleep dreaming we are evil.

Masonry teaches that a fund of science and industry is implanted in man for the best, most salutary and most beneficent purposes. In the Third Degree we are told, "Retain, we entreat you, that goodness of heart, that purity of intention, and that love of virtue of which we think you now possess…"

Truly realizing that we are inherently good rather than inherently evil is not only a fundamental factor in our sense of self-identity, it serves throughout our lives as a perpetual background meditation that positively effects our actions, behavior, aspirations, and most importantly our dreams.

Solomon's Secret #3
Human beings evolve, and with intent, can accelerate the evolutionary process.

This secret has been the foundation for the spiritual practices of the East for millennia, but in the West it's been successfully suppressed by religious doctrine and cultural interests since the fifth century CE. One would think that at the dawn of the twenty-first century such an obvious fact of life should be exempt from secrethood. However, one glance at the headlines of today's American newspapers and we become embarrassingly disabused.

The so-called "debate" between the theories of Evolution and Creationism (currently doing business under the name "Intelligent Design") is an obvious extension of the argument between those who insist on the empirical (even scientific) historicity of the Old Testament and those who recognize and accept the archeological and critical scholarly evidence. The irony of this debate (as we will see in Solomon's Secret # 4) is that true Evolution and true Intelligent Design need not be mutually exclusive concepts.

There will always be those who are willing to put their intellects and common sense on hold in order to feed some superstition or conform to religious doctrine. That is their right. But for the rest of us (including those who are staunchly religious) our spiritual worldview is not turned upside-down when we simply recognize the fact that human beings evolve, and that we can through our own efforts and intentions accelerate that process. Masonry, in her characteristically understated way, exemplifies this once radical and anticlerical attitude in metaphor by discussing the symbols of the Rough and Perfect Ashlars.

Every lodge is furnished with two stones; one roughly cut but basically cubical; another smoothly cut and perfectly square and cubical. The candidate is informed in the Entered Apprentice Degree:

> "By the Rough Ashlar we are reminded of our rude and imperfect state by nature; by the Perfect Ashlar, of that state of perfection at which we hope to arrive by a virtuous education, our own endeavors, and the blessing of God."

Solomon's Secret # 4
All is Consciousness.

In the Third Degree Master Masons are informed:

> "It is the inspiration of that great Divinity whom we adore, and bears the nearest resemblance of affinity to that Supreme Intelligence which pervades all nature, and which will never, never, never die."

Even as I write, advances in human thought are melding quantum physics with ancient mysticism. One word that each of them are using when discussing the ultimate nature of reality is "consciousness." In the highly acclaimed film,[57] What the Bleep do We Know?, Maharishi Mahesh Yogi was quoted,

> "Consciousness is the basis of all life and the field of all possibilities. Its nature is to expand and unfold its full potential. The impulse to evolve is thus inherent in the very nature of life."

Deepak Chopra cuts right to the chase and informs us in no uncertain terms that,

> "Good is higher consciousness. Evil is lower consciousness." [58]

Consciousness, viewed in its supreme totality, could certainly be considered the Mind of God. Indeed, if proponents of the so-called theory of "Intelligent Design" could for a moment unburden themselves of ulterior agendas they might hasten to embrace quantum theory by quoting the Nobel Prize-winning father of quantum physics, Max Planck, who shocked everyone in the 1950s by saying,

> "There is no matter as such.[59] All matter originates and exists only by virtue of a force which brings the particles of an atom to vibration and holds this most minute solar system of the atom together. We must assume behind this force the > existence of a conscious and intelligent mind. This mind is the matrix of all matter."

All things we perceive in the cosmos, including ourselves, are aspects of consciousness within the matrix of matter. But from our limited vantage point we are only aware of the reality of our immediate neighborhood. We can't see the big consciousness picture. Some of us, however, sense there is more. Like the ancient Hermeticists, we are drawn to speculate about the existence of levels of consciousness both above and below our own.

Deepak Chopra's comment that, "Good is higher consciousness. Evil is lower consciousness," is profoundly true from a moral point of view, but we can also view this hierarchy of consciousness the way the ancient Kabbalists and magicians did – not as abstractions, but as spiritual beings.

Solomon's Secret #5

Deity, Archangels, Angels, Intelligences, Spirits, Demons and you and I are personifications of a hierarchy of consciousness.

Deity is obviously at the top of the hierarchy of consciousness – the Supreme Consciousness – the Supreme Being. All creation is a play in the Mind of God.

Next lower in the hierarchy is a descending array of forces and energies that are more specialized envoys-of-intelligence in the Mind of God. We could view them as units (or aspects) of natural forces and laws. The ancients personified them as spiritual beings, calling them archangels, angels, and intelligences. We don't actually see these forces (entities), but we are certainly aware of how they affect the world around us.

For example: We could personify the law of gravity as a great archangel. We could even give this archangel a name – Gravitiel. Gavitiel is a spiritual being with huge duties and responsibilities in the universe. As an archangel it embodies all that is gravitational. We see the work of gravity manifest in almost infinite ways: the tugging of the tidal moon; the falling of a raindrop; the sagging of a breast; the plummeting of a meteor. These specific expressions of gravity could be viewed as angels (Tugiel, Falliel; Sagiel and Plummetiel) working under the authority of the Archangel Gravitiel.

Gravitiel and his angels are responsible for organizing and directing all the work that takes place on the next and lowest level of consciousness where the process of creating sustaining, and destroying the material universe takes place. This is the world most of us consider objective reality. Magicians, however, have a more colorful name – the infernal regions.

If you can suffer one more of my metaphoric excursions, let's look at God as the owner – the boss of the cosmic company. Archangels, angels, and intelligences, are middle management. The workers themselves are spirits and demons that dwell on the factory floor, the lowest level of consciousness. These workers do all the heavy lifting in the universe and they're a pretty rough bunch (after all, they're not only the cosmic construction crew, they are the wrecking crew as well).

This far down the scale of consciousness the purity of the upper levels has become fragmented and disorganized. If this area is not consciously directed by middle-management these broken pieces of the Mind of God will, like a brutish and restless mob of unemployed and unsupervised zombie workmen, discharge their awesome energy in chaotic and destructive ways. On the other hand, once controlled by a higher intelligence they become united in service to the company. If they continue to behave themselves they eventually are promoted to middle management, etc.

The characters in the Masonic story of Solomon personifies this spectrum of consciousness:

- God at the top – The Great Architect of the Universe;
- Solomon (and his fellow Grand Masters, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff) in the middle; and at the bottom;
- The Workmen on the Temple (the Masters, or Overseers of the work; Fellow Crafts, or hewers on the mountains and in the quarries; and Entered Apprentices, or bearers of burden). If the Entered Apprentice worked diligently he could be expected to be advanced to Fellow Craft, etc.

Once in place and functioning, this scenario paints a picture of a universe in balance, a spiritual utopia where everyone is laboring successfully under direction and supervision to raise themselves (and their inferiors) to the next higher level.

> "… these were all so classed and arranged by the > wisdom of Solomon that neither envy, discord, nor confusion was suffered to interrupt or disturb the peace and good fellowship which prevailed among the workmen."[60]

But where do you and I fit in this cosmic company of consciousness?

It depends upon where our present level of consciousness positions us. In our unenlightened state we've convinced ourselves that we're infernal creatures living and dying on the factory floor. Once we open our eyes, however, we discover that we are relatively high in the hierarchy of spiritual beings. In fact we are, each of us, the most important member of the middle management team – envied by the angels – feared by the spirits and demons. We are Solomon.

Solomon's Secret #6

It is our duty to master and redirect the lower forces to constructive ends.

Spiritual evolution does not occur in a vacuum. Our consciousness is raised because vibratory room has been made above to accommodate it. (We are promoted to boss when our boss is promoted to a bigger boss.) As above, so below. With authority comes responsibility. Once awakened to our true spiritual status we realize that we are actually in charge of a roughneck crew of demons (aspects of our lower consciousness). Unless we immediately demonstrate who's the boss and get these guys busy working on our "Temple" they will soon gain the upper hand and return to running amuck at our expense.

[60] From the Master Mason Degree lecture.

This secret is innocuously revealed to the newly raised Master Mason when he is told:

> "As a Master Mason you are authorized to correct the irregularities of your less informed brethren, to fortify their minds with resolution against the snares of the insidious, and to guard them against every allurement to vicious practices."

His completed Temple is the microcosmic replica in stone of Deity Itself, fashioned so perfectly it reflects the macrocosmic perfection of God.

Solomon's Secret #7

As we are raised – so must we raise.

In the previous chapter I wrote that as long as the magician remains plugged in to that which is above, he or she is simultaneously plugged into (and must begin to master) that which is below. The seventh Secret of Solomon adds that not only is it our duty to master and direct the spirits beneath us, we must also, as we advance, make sure they advance as well. It does us no good to raise our own status if we are unwilling to raise the status of those beneath us. In fact, failure to do so immediately disconnects us from the source and unplugs us from the magical circuitry of the cosmos.

The great nineteenth century magician, Eliphaz

Levi wrote a marvelous little poem called The Magician that perfectly illustrates this greatest of Solomon's Secrets. I can think of no better way to conclude this portion of the book and prepare you to appreciate what follows.

The Magician [61]

O Lord, deliver me from hell's great fear and gloom!
Loose thou my spirit from the larvae of the tomb!
I seek them in their dread abodes without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

I bid the night conceive the glittering hemisphere.
Arise, O sun, arise! O moon, shine white & clear!
I seek them in their dread abodes without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

Their faces and their shapes are terrible and strange.
These devils by my might to angels I will change.
These nameless horrors I address without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

These are the phantoms pale of mine astonied view,
Yet none but I their blasted beauty can renew;
For to the abyss of hell I plunge without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

PART TWO

THE MAGIC OF SOLOMON

INTRODUCTION
ELEMENTS OF SPIRIT EVOCATION

~ Aleister Crowley[62]

This section is comprised of excerpts from The Goetia, The Lesser Key of Solomon the King (Clavicula Solomonis Regis),[63] including the list of the seventy-two traditional spirits, their attributes and abilities, together with their magical seals. I realize that for many this material will seem a bit incongruous to that of the first section of this little book, and I expect that there will be those who might not see any connection whatsoever. If that is the case, I have (at least partially) failed in my attempt awaken the archetypal Solomon within the reader's psyche, and I hope this little introduction will serve as a proper segue.

For scholarly or practical purposes, the material that follows is not meant to serve as a replacement for the full, unabridged text.[64] Nor by its inclusion am I suggesting that everyone who reads this work should immediately begin the practice of summoning spirits. I am, however, hoping that once you are acquainted with the methods by which the ancient magician used the instruments of legend, myth and imagination to gain mastery over his or her world, you might realize how you might use the same tools to transform areas of your own life and circumstances.

But before plunging directly into the excerpts from this remarkable work, I encourage you to review Chapter Eleven where I outlined the basic character and operating procedures for this kind of sorcery. Also, I'm sure many readers may still have questions concerning Solomonic magic in general, and Goetia in particular. So, in an attempt to preemptively address some of these issues, I will (by the magic of imagination) split myself in two – half the hypothetical and ruthlessly inquisitive owner of this book – the other half, the kindly old author and magician.

Question #1.

Do you actually expect me to believe this kind of magic works?

No. I don't expect anyone to believe anything. Magic is psychological art form not a belief system (unless, of course you consider the concept of 'cause and effect' to be a belief system). I am expecting, however, that you will withhold absolute judgment about the efficacy of such exercises until such time you actually perform a Goetic evocation for yourself.

I have on numerous occasions, over the last thirty, years evoked a number of the spirits of the Goetia utilizing the basic formula outlined in the Lesser Key of Solomon. I have also taught others to do the same. If success is measured by whether or not the stated purpose of the exercise was regularly achieved, then my personal experiences (and reports from others with whom I've had personal contact) lead me to affirm categorically that this kind of magic does indeed work.

Question #2.
Are the spirits real or imaginary?

I can only offer my personal opinion based upon conclusions I have drawn as the result of my own experiences with this kind of exercise. There are many very knowledgeable individuals who disagree with my assumptions. Some think I've taken the "magic" out of the magic by over analyzing the process and making things too psychological. Others think my views of the art aren't agnostic enough – that my views are naïve and overly mystical and romantic.

I offer no rebuttal to either of these charges other than to say, spirits are as real as the powers they personify. To quote my literary alter ego, Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford,[65] "The spirits are both real and imaginary – but most of us do not realize how real our imagination is."[66]

For example; I don't believe in the existence of an objective, tangible entity who lives at the North Pole and flies around the world on Christmas Eve delivering gifts to everyone – but I know for a fact that there is a real and magical spirit of mad generosity personified merrily in the minds of billions of people as Santa Claus. In fact, each year (during the months when this spirit is at the zenith of its power to possess people) this subjective, intangible spirit is in a very real way responsible for the manifestation of an unimaginable number of material objects and immeasurable wealth and happiness.

[65] Lon Milo DuQuette. The Chicken Qabalah of Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford. (York Beach, ME: Weiser Books, Inc. 2001)

[66] Ibid. p 132.

But beware! The same letters that spell "Santa" also spell "Satan." This spirit also has a dark and evil side. When not properly understood, evoked, and controlled he can be a cynical and destructive demon who during his icy season routinely brings gifts of family strife, suffocating debt, regret, depression, and suicide.

There are those who agree with the great twentieth-century magician, Aleister Crowley, who wrote in his introduction to Goetia, "The spirits of the Goetia are portions of the human brain."[67] While I'm not sure I altogether agree, Mr. Crowley certainly provides us with food for thought. How often have we heard that humans actually use only a tiny percentage of our brains? Who knows what god-like powers we could exercise if we used more of our brains?

Imagine that we could divide that unused part of the brain into seventy-two sections (the seventy-two spirits of the Goetia) – each section a living representative of a specific and unique psychic or intellectual power we are presently not using (the attributes and powers of the spirit). We assign each of those sections a mythological name (i.e., Furfur or Orobas) and a symbol (the seal of the spirit) that we can gaze upon during altered states of consciousness (induced by the rituals of preparation, the incense, babbling strings of incomprehensible words, etc.) whereby we isolate, activate, and employ that portion of the brain.

[67] Op cit. p. 17.

Instead of thinking of the spirits as portions of physical brain tissue, however, it might be more accurate (and just as practical) to view them as portions of the subconscious mind. As the pioneers of quantum physics are suggesting and demonstrating, the influence of the mind transcends the tiny confines of the human cranium and operates on multiple dimensions unencumbered by the limits of time and space. Tinkering with the subconscious mind is in a very real way tinkering with cosmos, and since prehistoric times the people who've tinkered with their subconscious minds the most have been called magicians.

Question #3.

The text says that many of the spirits have very odd and archaic powers that I have absolutely no interest in. If the spirits are merely portions of my brain (or mind) why on earth would I have a section dedicated to fetching horses or attaining prelacies or lighting seeming Candles upon the Graves of the Dead?

It will become immediately obvious to the reader that the text is written in an odd and archaic style. There is a simple reason for this. It is an odd and archaic document. As I mentioned in Chapter Eleven, the original manuscripts date from 1697 and represent updated versions of far older material. Even though the world has changed a lot since then our daily lives are in essence remarkably similar to our ancestors'. We may not have the need of horses, or church honors, or the power to illuminate graves, but we still need a car, career advancement, and some of us occasionally need the wit and eloquence to write and deliver a eulogy.

Selecting the proper spirit to perform the specific task you need is a vital component of the magical operation. Some are very obvious as in the case of #10, Buer, who is said to healeth all distempers. Others are not so obvious and take a little thought and imagination. Being able to recognize your particular problem metaphorically expressed as the power to understand birds, or causing trees to bend at your will is the first step to impressing your subconscious mind with the essence of the issue you need resolved. A "bird" needn't be a crow or a canary. It could be a chattering gossip, or a biology test. The power to "bend a tree" may suggest the ability to overcome stiff resistance to your ideas or proposals.

Question #4.

In the first section of this book you spent a lot of time demonstrating that the Old Testament Patriarchs, David, Solomon and others were not historical characters, yet the Lesser Key of Solomon is filled with references to these characters. Are you asking us to again believe in fables?

Yes and no. Of course these Bible characters and stories are myths and fables. But myths and fables come from (and profoundly affect) the deepest strata of the human psyche. Most of us are happy to suspend our disbelief for a few hours within the dark confines of a movie theatre. That same imaginative ability is the cornerstone of magic – a powerful tool that most of us use only for sex, entertainment and diversion. If used with skill and understanding, however, it is the perfect tool to help us break out of our present narrow stream of consciousness.

Recall from Chapter Eleven that I asked you to view these operations not as a magical ceremony but as a psychological exercise – a psychodrama whereby we call forth and isolate previously uncontrolled potentialities within ourselves and redirect their heretofore chaotic energies. The medieval magician didn't think in psychological terms at all. He or she believed quite passionately in the Old Testament God (under a host of names), and the supernatural powers of the Biblical Patriarchs, David and Solomon.

In a way this gave the ancient practitioner a decided advantage over the modern practitioner who must either, a) like a true 'method actor' (or a participant in a roll-playing game) find a way to temporarily step out of the rational flow of consciousness into the classic magical world with its existing rules and characters; or b) somehow create a comparable magical world with a mythological hierarchy that personifies his or her understanding and beliefs.

Both categories can be equally effective. I personally know several Solomonic magicians (including the great modern master of Goetic evocation, Poke Runyon[68]) who whole-heartedly embrace the art form of the classic Goetic workings. They operate by-the-book and, as much as humanly possible, conform with every instruction found in the text. They wear the proper attire, construct and use the proper magical tools and equipment, observe the proper hours, memorize all the conjurations and constraints – everything. It offends their sense of art (and after all, magic is an art) if the instructions in the classic text are violated. It bolsters their magical confidence to know in their hearts they are doing things just like the ancient practitioners. Doing this is the yoga – the Zen of their art.

[68] Carroll (Poke) Runyon. The Book of Solomon's Magick. (Pasadena, CA: Church of the Hermetic Science, Inc., 1996).

Personally, I fall more easily into category b. My sense of art is not at all offended by amending or discarding portions of the classic text. While I take pains to conform to the basic formula and follow the order of ceremony of the classic system, I've customized everything else to harmonize with my own spiritual worldview. With a little thought anyone else can do the same.

Question #5.

Under what circumstances is it appropriate to evoke a spirit?

Ultimately, only the individual magician can determine when it is or is not appropriate to use Solomonic magic to evoke a spirit. However, my experience of what has and has not worked for me in the past leads me to make the following observations:

First, you must have a problem – a real problem. But before enlisting the aid of spirit to resolve the problem, you must have done everything in your power to take care of the matter by regular means on the physical plane. That's magic too. If your neighbor's thoughtless midnight tuba playing is ruining your sleep, your health, and your ability to stay awake at work – if you've asked him to stop – if you've called the police and they didn't help – if you've tried to enlist the help of other neighbors – if you've marched next door and punched the inconsiderate idiot in his tuba-tooting lip – if you've tried everything right here on earth – then maybe it is time to at least consider a magical remedy. However, if you haven't exhausted all other measures it would be cowardly and unwise to magically tinker with your precious subconscious mind just to force some poor spirit to do your dirty work.

Secondly, the problem you wish resolved must be a personal matter. You can't do magic for someone else. When you formally evoke a spirit you are evoking an adventure. Adventures are not always pleasant and sometimes dangerous, even deadly. At the conclusion of the adventure, however, if you survive, you'll emerge from the experience a better, wiser, braver, cooler person. No one else can take your adventure for you and you cannot take the adventure for someone else. Therefore, your reasons for evoking a spirit must be entirely personal. You wouldn't expect to reap the benefits of psychotherapy by sending someone else to replace you on the analyst's couch.

Thirdly, you must feel totally justified in doing what you are about to do. You must have a deep emotional involvement in the matter you wish resolved. If you aren't convinced of your motive – if you aren't reaching to the very bottom of the visceral 'hell' of your frustration – your anger, then you are not touching the level of consciousness where these beasties exist.

Furthermore, once you have evoked it into the Triangle you must be able to consider the spirit the personification of your problem (for in essence that is what it is). You have every reason to be mad at it. The spirit is your problem. It's always been your problem. For the first time in your life you have isolated it and can now focus the full force of your righteous anger and indignation – not at your spouse, not at your boss, not at your kids, or your dog, or the government – but at the real source of your problem. It has to listen to you so you better know what you want to tell it. It's either going to shape up and do what you command or you are going to annihilate it.

My last little word of advice is: "Don't make deals with the spirit." In a very real way you've been unconsciously making deals with the spirit your whole life. That's why you have your problem. The whole ceremony is your formal way of branding your subconscious mind with the idea that you are through making deals with this tangled piece of ignorance, flawed perception, fear, vice, or addiction, (take your pick they're all demons).

Do you see the plot of this psychodrama? Do you see the method to the madness? Once you've voluntarily reprogrammed your subconscious mind with a traumatic little experience like this you become in essence a different person. Different things start happening to you when you become a different person. If all goes well one of those things will be the solution to your problem.

Question #6.

All these lengthy and verbose conjurations, constraints, and curses – Do I have to memorize and recite them? What purpose do they serve?

Obviously, in order to get yourself in a 'place' where the idea of talking to a spirit seems like a perfectly normal thing to do, you must 'be' in an altered state of consciousness. There are lots of ways to induce altered states including the use of psychoactive chemicals, plants, and herbs. While these substances have always had their place in the mystical life of human beings, to the disappointment of many they do not mix well with this kind of magic. The problem stems from the fact that it is very easy to induce an altered state of consciousness by ingesting drugs, it is difficult (if not impossible) to return to objective consciousness at the precise moment in the ceremony when it is vitally important that you do so. This can be a very dangerous situation in which to find oneself. The traditional methods may be less colorful and glamorous (and I mean 'glamorous' in the most magical sense of the term), but they are safer and far more predictable than drugs.

In the same way the modern devotee of Transcendental Meditation repeats a mantra in order to step out of the stream of everyday consciousness, the ancient magician (and the modern Solomonic purist) memorized and recited page upon page of conjurations filled with strings of strange sounding names and magic words. Curiously, these words don't necessarily have to mean anything – in fact, the more corrupt and meaningless the words are the more effective they are in triggering the desired effect upon the magician's consciousness. Eventually, the tedium (even the absurdity of what one is doing) causes the mind to rebel and slip into the desired "space."

In my opinion the modern magician is better served by composing his or her own customized conjuration (or conjurations). For me it is unduly distracting to engage in name dropping of Bible characters I know never existed and deities I don't worship. In either case, the most important element of the conjuration comes at the very beginning where the magician, like the legendary Solomon, affirms his or her connection with Supreme Deity. This is the moment when we consciously insert ourselves in the spiritual hierarchy of the cosmos.

Question #7.

In answer to question #3 you said that you conform to the basic formula and follow the order of ceremony of the classic system. Can you outline the basic formula and order of operation?

The best way for you to determine for yourself what the basic formula and order of ceremony is to first acquaint yourself with the following excerpts from the Lesser Key of Solomon. Then, if you are passionate enough to explore this kind of magic, acquaint yourself with the full text and other material currently available (see Bibliography).

Below is an outline of my basic operating procedure:

Motive and Justification

Before I begin I ask myself:

1). Do I truly have a good reason to raise the spirit?

2). Do I feel absolutely justified in doing so?

3). Do I have a sufficient emotional tie to the object of the operation?

4). Is it my unambiguous will to succeed in the operation?

5). Do I have the courage to plumb the depths of my subconscious 'hell' to achieve my ends?

Preparation of Temple

1). In a clean, uncluttered room, I draw, tape, or otherwise create a Circle approximately nine feet in diameter. Just inside the perimeter of the Circle, I write (or place placards displaying) divine names sacred to me.

2). About three feet east of the circle, I draw, tape or otherwise create a Triangle, each side measuring two and a half feet. Upon the sides of the Triangle I write (or place placards displaying) words of power sacred to me.

3). Inside the Triangle, I draw, tape, or otherwise create a circle. In the center of the circle within the Triangle, I place an incense burner, incense, and a paper copy of the seal of the spirit I intend to evoke.

Preparation of the Magician

1). Prior to the ceremony I quietly bathe with the full intention of cleansing my body in preparation for this serious work.

2). I put on a clean magical robe or insignia representative of my initiatory grade.

3). I pin to my magical robe a cloth patch or paper bearing the image of the Hexagram of Solomon (representing my connection to the Supreme Consciousness).

4). I arm myself with my magic wand, and place around my neck a medallion displaying the spirit's seal on one side and the Pentagram of Solomon on the reverse (representing among other things my connection to the spirit). I show both sides to the spirit upon its arrival.

Preliminary Ceremony

1). I remove my footwear and enter the Circle.

2). I ceremonially cleanse the Circle by sprinkling clean water in the east, south, west, and north.

3). I ceremonially consecrate and bless the Circle by elevating a lit candle in the east, south, west, and north.

4). I formally banish the Temple by performing a banishing ceremony with which I am familiar. (Banishing rituals can be found in any elementary work on modern magic.) [69]

5). I then pause and pray. That is, I quietly center myself and with willful intent make contact with the highest consciousness I am capable of imagining. I visualize myself in the presence of this Supreme Intelligence and when the visualization is strong I invoke that presence into myself so that I feel that I'm a perfect reflection of Deity. This is Solomon's Secret, and the ceremony should not proceed until this invocation is achieved.

The Evocation

1). From this exalted state of mind I focus my attention on the Triangle and begin my conjuration. (My conjuration is a combination of phrases from the classic text, my own compositions, 'barbarous words of evocation' found in other material, and certain 'Calls" in the angelic tongue known as Enochian.) I repeat the conjuration as many times as necessary to achieve (what I can only describe as) an irrational state of consciousness.

2). I continue until the spirit 'appears.' (Please note that for me the spirit seldom appears to my physical eyes. Its presence is nonetheless unambiguously felt. The sensation of the spirit's presence is often so tangible that the novice often becomes stunned and looses sight of the purpose of the operation.)

3). Even though I consider the spirit to be the cause of my problem, I nonetheless remember it is also the key to the solution. I greet the spirit with cool courtesy upon its arrival.

4). I firmly, yet politely, give it a specific, well-thought-out charge, and demand a positive answer from the spirit that it agrees to perform what I demand. During the ceremony I resist any temptation to amend or otherwise compromise my original demands. (Such thoughts that arise during the ceremony are the spirit's desperate attempt to strike a compromise. The evocation is a formal statement that from now on there'll be no more of that!)

5). Before dismissing it, I remind the spirit that it is now my servant and that if it serves me well, I will see it is raised in spiritual status even as I am raised. However, if it does not serve me well, I will have not any compunction about conjuring it once again, burning its seal and utterly annihilating it.

6). I then give it license to depart, being careful to stipulate that it carry out my orders without harm to me, my loved ones, or any entity living or abstract for whom I hold affection or goodwill.

7). Finally, I banish the Temple as in the beginning, and wait until such time as I cannot feel any residue of the spirit's presence.

After the Ceremony

1). I do everything I can to 'snap out of it' and return to everyday objective consciousness. (This is why drugs are a horrible idea!) If I can't shake the 'spooky' feeling, I banish again, and again, until I do.

2). I break down the Temple and put everything back in their sacred little containers, including the spirit's seal that was in the Triangle, which I place in a special box that no one else should ever touch.

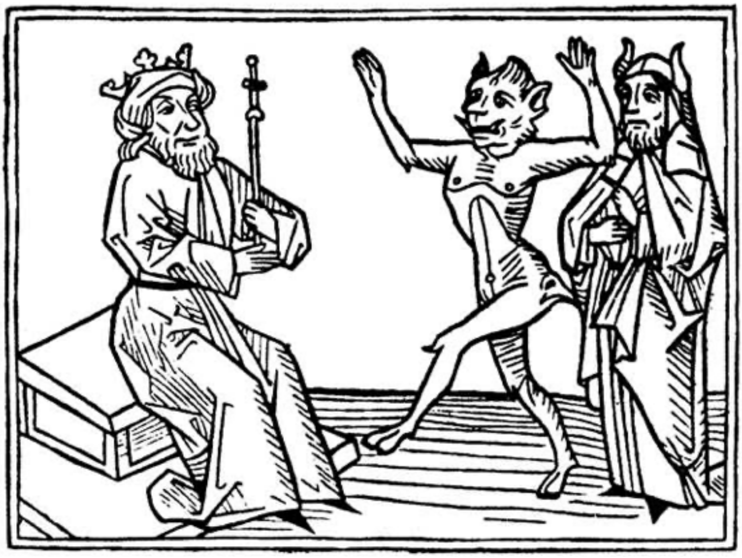
3). While the experience is still fresh in my mind, I sit down and write a detailed record of the operation in my diary.

Did it work?

The charge to the spirit should have been so worded that I know within a specified time period whether or not the spirit is doing its job. Failure of the spirit to perform as promised requires that I evoke it again and issue a threat. Failing again, I re-evoke and torment the spirit in the firebox. Failing again, I re-evoke for the purpose of destroying the seal and the spirit completely.

One shouldn't feel too discouraged if the operation at first appears to be a complete failure. Maybe you don't get your sweetheart – maybe you don't win the lottery. The hell you put yourself through as you wrestle and curse and torture the spirit to comply with your orders is a spiritual adventure par excellent and will teach you things about yourself you never knew before – things you might not be comfortable knowing – things you might want to change – and you will have done it all in the privacy of your own home, without having to abuse, traumatize, or destroy anything more sensitive than a scrap of paper.

Critics of Goetia warn that this kind of magic brings out the worst us. They are absolutely correct – but that's exactly what it is supposed to do – bring out the worst in us so we, like Solomon, may either make it better or expunge it from our lives. I hope that by familiarizing yourself with how the ancient magician went about this work you will understand how to apply the formula of Solomon's Key to your own spiritual quest.



The Demon Belial before King Solomon.
(by Jacobus de Teramo)

And of the speech of the beasts and the birds there was nothing hidden from him, [Solomon] and he forced the devils to obey him by his wisdom. And he did everything by means of the skill which God gave him when he made supplication to Him.

The Magical Circle and Magical Triangle.

THE MAGICAL REQUISITES

THE MAGICAL CIRCLE

THIS is the Form[72] of the Magical Circle of King Solomon, the which he made that he might preserve himself therein from the malice of these Evil Spirits. (See Figure A.) This Magical Circle is to be made 9 feet across, and the Divine Names are to be written around it, beginning at EHYEH, and ending at LEVANAH, Luna.

THE MAGICAL TRIANGLE OF SOLOMON

THIS is the Form of the Magical Triangle, into the which Solomon did command the Evil Spirits. It is to be made at 2 feet distance from the Magical Circle and it is 3 feet across. (See Figure A) Note that this triangle is to be placed toward that quarter whereunto the Spirit belongeth. And the base of the triangle is to be nearest unto the Circle, the apex pointing in the direction of the quarter of the Spirit. Observe thou also the Moon in thy working, as aforesaid, etc. Anaphaxeton is sometimes written Anepheneton.

THE HEXAGRAM OF SOLOMON

THIS is the Form of the Hexagram of Solomon, (See Figure B.) the figure whereof is to be made on parchment of a calf's skin, and worn at the skirt of thy white vestment, and covered with a cloth of fine linen white and pure, the which is to be shown unto the Spirits when they do appear, so that they be compelled to take human shape upon them and be obedient.

THIS is the Form of Pentagram of Solomon, (See Figure C.) the figure whereof is to be made in Sol or Luna (Gold or Silver), and worn upon thy breast; having the Seal of the Spirit required upon the other side thereof. It is to preserve thee from danger, and also to command the Spirits by.

THE MAGIC RING OR DISC OF SOLOMON

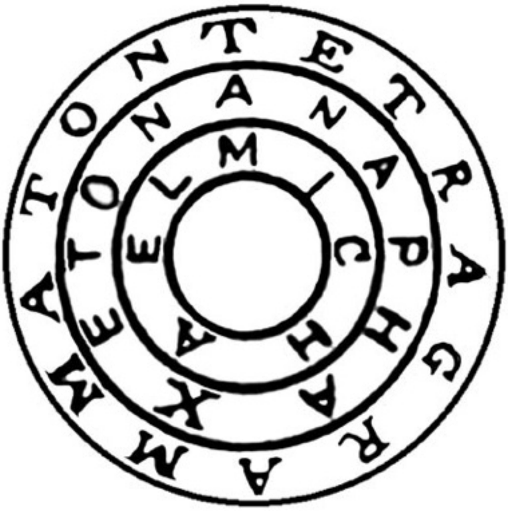

Figure D.
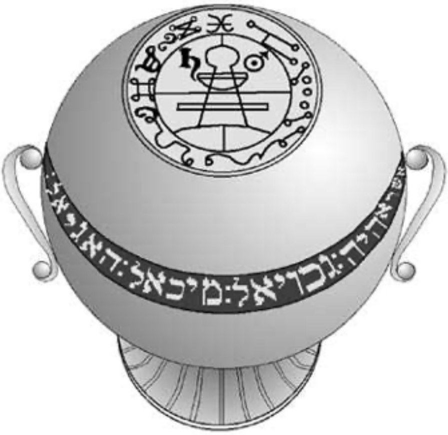
The Magic Ring or Disc of Solomon.

THIS is the Form of the Magic Ring, or rather Disc, of Solomon, (See Figure D.) the figure whereof is to be made in gold or silver. It is to be held before the face of the exorcist to preserve him from the stinking sulphurous fumes and flaming breath of the Evil Spirits.



THE VESSEL OF BRASS

Figure E.
The Vessel of Brass.

THIS is the Form of the Secret Seal of Solomon, (See Figure F) wherewith he did bind and seal up the aforesaid Spirits with their legions in the Vessel of Brass.

This seal is to be made by one that is clean both inwardly and outwardly, and that hath not defiled himself by any woman in the space of a month, but hath in prayer and fasting desired of God to forgive him all his sins, etc.

It is to be made on the day of Mars or Saturn (Tuesday or Saturday) at night at 12 o'clock, and written upon virgin parchment with the blood of a black cock that never trode hen. Note that on this night the moon must be increasing in light (i.e., going from new to full) and in the Zodiacal Sign of Virgo. And when the seal is so made thou shalt perfume it with alum, raisins dried in the sun, dates, cedar, and lignum aloes.

Also, by this seal King Solomon did command all the aforesaid Spirits in the Vessel of Brass, and did seal it up with this same seal. He by it gained the love of all manner of persons, and overcame in battle, for neither weapons, nor fire, nor water could hurt him. And this privy seal was made to cover the vessel at the top withal, etc.

THE OTHER MAGICAL REQUISITES

THE other magical requisites are: a sceptre, a sword, a mitre, a cap, a long white robe of linen, and other garments for the purpose;[73] also a girdle of lion's skin three inches broad, with all the names written about it which be round the outmost part of the Magical Circle. Also perfumes, and a chafing-dish of charcoal kindled to put the fumes on, to smoke or perfume the place appointed for action; also anointing oil to anoint thy temples and thine eyes with; and fair water to wash thyself in. And in so doing, thou shalt say as David said:

[73] In many codices it is written "a scepter or sword, a mitre or cap." By the "other garment" would be meant not only under-garments, but also mantles of different colors.

THE ADORATION AT THE BATH

"THOU shalt purge me with hyssop, O Lord! and I shall be clean: Thou shalt wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

And at the putting on of thy garments thou shalt say:

THE ADORATION AT THE INDUING OF THE VESTMENTS

"BY the figurative mystery of these holy vestures (or of this holy vestment) I will clothe me with the armour of salvation in the strength of the Most High, ANCOR; AMACOR; AMIDES; THEODINIAS; ANITOR; that my desired end may be effected through Thy strength, O ADONAI! unto Whom the praise and glory will for ever and ever belong! Amen!"

After thou hast so done, make prayers unto God according unto thy work, as Solomon hath commanded.

THE CONJURATIONS

THE CONJURATION TO CALL FORTH ANY OF THE AFORESAID SPIRITS.

I DO invocate and conjure thee, O Spirit, N.;[74] and being with power armed from the SUPREME MAJESTY, I do strongly command thee, by BERALANENSIS, BALDACHIENSIS, PAUMACHIA, and APOLOGIÆ SEDES; by the most Powerful Princes, Genii, Liachidæ, and Ministers of the Tartarean Abode; and by the Chief Prince of the Seat of Apologia in the Ninth Legion, I do invoke thee, and by invocating conjure thee. And being armed with power from the SUPREME MAJESTY, I do strongly command thee, by Him Who spake and it was done, and unto whom all creatures be obedient. Also I, being made after the image of GOD, endued with power from GOD and created according unto His will, do exorcise thee by that most mighty and powerful name of GOD, EL, strong and wonderful; O thou Spirit N. And I command thee and Him who spake the Word and His FIAT was accomplished, and by all the names of GOD. Also by the names ADONAI, EL, ELOHIM, ELOHI, EHYEH, ASHER EHYEH, ZABAOTH, ELION, IAH, TETRAGRAMMATON, SHADDÄI, LORD GOD MOST HIGH, I do exorcise thee and do powerfully command thee, O thou Spirit N., that thou dost forthwith appear unto me here before this Circle in a fair human shape, without any deformity or tortuosity. And by this ineffable name, TETRAGRAMMATON IEHOVAH, do I command thee, at the which being heard the elements are overthrown, the air is shaken, the sea runneth back, the fire is quenched, the earth trembleth, and all the hosts of the celestials, terrestrials, and infernals, do tremble together, and are troubled and confounded. Wherefore come thou, O Spirit N., forthwith, and without delay, from any or all parts of the world wherever thou mayest be, and make rational answers unto all things that I shall demand of thee. Come thou peaceably, visibly, and affably, now, and without delay, manifesting that which I shall desire. For thou art conjured by the name of the LIVING and TRUE GOD, HELIOREN, wherefore fulfill thou my commands, and persist thou therein unto the end, and according unto mine interest, visibly and affably speaking unto me with a voice clear and intelligible without any ambiguity.

[74] Here interpolate the name of the Spirit desired to be invocated. In some of the Codices there are faint variations in the form of wording of the conjurations, but not sufficient to change the sense, e.g., "Tartarean abode" for "Tartarean seat," etc.

REPEAT this conjuration as often as thou pleasest, and if the Spirit come not yet, say as followeth:

THE SECOND CONJURATION

I DO invocate, conjure, and command thee, O thou Spirit N., to appear and to show thyself visibly unto me before this Circle in fair and comely shape, without any deformity or tortuosity; by the name and in the name IAH and VAU, which Adam heard and spake; and by the name of GOD, AGLA, which Lot heard and was saved with his family; and by the name IOTH, which Jacob heard from the angel wrestling with him, and was delivered from the hand of Esau his brother; and by the name ANAPHAXETON[75] which Aaron heard and spake and was made wise; and by the name ZABAOTH,[76] which Moses named and all the rivers were turned into blood; and by the name ASHER EHYEH ORISTON, which Moses named, and all the rivers brought forth frogs, and they ascended into the houses, destroying all things; and by the name ELION, which Moses named, and there was great hail such as had not been since the beginning of the world; and by the name ADONAI, which Moses named, and there came up locusts, which appeared upon the whole land, and devoured all which the hail had left; and by the name SCHEMA AMATHIA which Ioshua called upon, and the sun stayed his course; and by the name ALPHA and OMEGA, which Daniel named, and destroyed Bel, and slew the Dragon; and in the name EMMANUEL, which the three children, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, sang in the midst of the fiery furnace, and were delivered; and by the name HAGIOS; and by the SEAL[77] OF ADONI; and by ISCHYROS, ATHANATOS, PARACLETOS; and by O THEOS, ICTROS, ATHANATOS; and by these three secret names, AGLA, ON, TETRAGRAMMATON, do I adjure and constrain thee. And by these names, and by all the other names of the LIVING and TRUE GOD, the LORD ALMIGHTY, I do exorcise and command thee, O Spirit N., even by Him Who spake the Word and it was done, and to Whom all creatures are obedient; and by the dreadful judgments of GOD; and by the uncertain Sea of Glass, which is before the DIVINE MAJESTY, mighty and powerful; by the four beasts before the throne, having eyes before and behind; by the fire round about the throne; by the holy angels of [77] In some "By the Seat of Adonai" or " By the Throne of Adonai." In thses conjuration and elsewhere in the body of the text I have given the divine names as correctly as possible.

Heaven; and by the mighty wisdom of GOD; I do potently exorcise thee, that thou appearest here before this Circle, to fulfil my will in all things which shall seem good unto me; by the Seal of BASDATHEA BALDACHIA; and by this name PRIMEUMATON, which Moses named, and the earth opened, and did swallow up Kora, Dathan, and Abiram. Wherefore thou shalt make faithful answers unto all my demands, O Spirit N., and shalt perform all my desires so far as in thine office thou art capable hereof. Wherefore, come thou, visibly, peaceably, and affably, now without delay, to manifest that which I desire, speaking with a clear and perfect voice, intelligibly, and to mine understanding.

IF HE come not yet at the rehearsal of these two first conjurations (but without doubt he will), say on as followeth; it being a constraint:

THE CONSTRAINT

I DO conjure thee, O thou Spirit N., by all the most glorious and efficacious names of the MOST GREAT AND INCOMPREHENSIBLE LORD GOD OF HOSTS, that thou comest quickly and without delay from all parts and places of the earth and world wherever thou mayest be, to make rational answers unto my demands, and that visibly and affably, speaking with a voice intelligible unto mine understanding as aforesaid. I conjure and constrain thee, O thou Spirit N., by all the names aforesaid; and in addition by these seven great names wherewith Solomon the Wise bound thee and thy companions in a Vessel of Brass, ADONAI, PREYAI or PRERAI, TETRAGRAMMATON, ANAPHAXETON or ANEPHENETON, INESSENFATOAL or INESSENFATALL, PATHTUMON or PATHATUMON, and ITEMON; that thou appearest, here before this Circle to fulfil my will in all things that seem good unto me. And if thou be still so disobedient, and refusest still to come, I will in the power and by the power of the name of the SUPREME AND EVERLASTING LORD GOD Who created both thee and me and all the world in six days, and what is contained therein, EIE, SARAYÉ, and by the power of this name PRIMEUMATON which commandeth the whole host of Heaven, curse thee, and deprive thee of thine office, joy, and place, and bind thee in the depths of the Bottomless Pit or Abyss, there to remain unto the Day of the Last Judgment. And I will bind thee in the Eternal Fire, and into the Lake of Flame and of Brimstone, unless thou comest quickly and appearest here before this Circle to do my will. Therefore, come thou! in and by the holy names ADONAI, ZABAOTH, ADONAI, AMIORAN. Come thou! for it is ADONAI who commandest thee.

IF THOU hast come thus far, and yet he appeareth not, thou mayest be sure that he is sent unto some other place by his King, and cannot come; and if it be so, invocate the King as here followeth, to send him. But if he do not come still, then thou mayest be sure that he is bound in chains in hell, and that he is not in the custody of his King. If so, and thou still hast a desire to call him even from thence, thou must rehearse the general curse which is called the Spirits' Chain.

Here followeth, therefore, the Invocation of the King:[78]

[78] It will depend on the quarter to which the Spirit is attributed, which of the four chief kings are to be invoked.

THE INVOCATION OF THE KING

O THOU great, powerful, and mighty King AMAIMON, who bearest rule by the power of the SUPREME GOD EL over all spirits both superior and inferior of the Infernal Orders in the Dominion of the East; I do invocate and command thee by the especial and true name of GOD; and by that God that Thou Worshippest; and by the Seal of thy creation; and by the most mighty and powerful name of GOD, IEHOVAH TETRAGRAMMATON who cast thee out of heaven with all other infernal spirits; and by all the most powerful and great names of GOD who created Heaven, and Earth, and Hell, and all things in them contained; and by their power and virtue; and by the name PRIMEUMATON who commandeth the whole host of Heaven; that thou mayest cause, enforce, and compel the Spirit N. to come unto me here before this Circle in a fair and comely shape, without harm unto me or unto any other creature, to answer truly and faithfully unto all my requests; so that I may accomplish my will and desire in knowing or obtaining any matter or thing which by office thou knowest is proper for him to perform or accomplish, through the power of GOD, EL, Who created and doth dispose of all things both celestial, aërial, terrestrial, and infernal.

AFTER thou shalt have invocated the King in this manner twice or thrice over, then conjure the spirit thou wouldst call forth by the aforesaid conjurations, rehearsing them several times together, and he will come without doubt, if not at the first or second time of rehearsing. But if he do not come, add the "Spirits' Chain" unto the end of the aforesaid conjurations, and he will be forced to come, even if he be bound in chains, for the chains must break off from him, and he will be at liberty:

THE GENERAL CURSE, CALLED THE SPIRITS' CHAIN, AGAINST ALL SPIRITS THAT REBEL

O THOU wicked and disobedient Spirit N., because thou hast rebelled, and hast not obeyed nor regarded my words which I have rehearsed; they being all glorious and incomprehensible names of the true GOD, the maker and creator of thee and of me, and of all the world; I DO by the power of these names the which no creature is able to resist, curse thee into the depth of the Bottomless Abyss, there to remain unto the Day of Doom in chains, and in fire and brimstone unquenchable, unless thou forthwith appear here before this Circle, in this triangle to do my will. And, therefore, come thou quickly and peaceably, in and by these names of GOD, ADONAI, ZABAOTH, ADONAI, AMIORAN; come thou! come thou! for it is the King of Kings, even ADONAI, who commandeth thee.

WHEN thou shalt have rehearsed thus far, but still be cometh not, then write thou his seal on parchment and put thou it into a strong black box;[79] with brimstone, assafœtida, and such like things that bear a stinking smell; and then bind the box up round with an iron wire, and bang it upon the point of thy sword, and hold it over the fire of charcoal; and say as followeth unto the fire first, it being placed toward that quarter whence the Spirit is to come:

[79] This box should evidently be in metal or in something which does not take fire easily.

THE CONJURATION OF THE FIRE

I CONJURE thee, O fire, by him who made thee and all other creatures for good in the world, that thou torment, burn, and consume this Spirit N., for everlasting. I condemn thee, thou Spirit N., because thou art disobedient and obeyest not my commandment, nor keepest the precepts of the LORD THY GOD, neither wilt thou obey me nor mine invocations, having thereby called thee forth, I, who am the servant of the MOST HIGH AND IMPERIAL LORD GOD OF HOSTS, IEHOVAH, I who am dignified and fortified by His celestial power and permission, and yet thou comest not to answer these my propositions here made unto thee. For the which thine averseness and contempt thou art guilty of great disobedience and rebellion, and therefore shall I excommunicate thee, and destroy thy name and seal, the which I have enclosed in this box; and shall burn thee in the immortal fire and bury thee in immortal oblivion; unless thou immediately come and appear visibly and affably, friendly and courteously here unto me before this Circle, in this triangle, in a form comely and fair, and in no wise terrible, hurtful, or frightful to me or any other creature whatsoever upon the face of earth. And thou shalt make rational answers unto my requests, and perform all my desires in all things, that I shall make unto thee.

AND if he come not even yet, thou shalt say as followeth:

THE GREATER CURSE.[80]

NOW, O thou Spirit N., since thou art still pernicious and disobedient, and wilt not appear unto me to answer unto such things as I would have desired of thee, or would have been satisfied in; I do in the name, and by the power and dignity of the Omnipresent and Immortal Lord God of Hosts IEHOVAH TETRAGRAMMATON, the only creator of Heaven, and Earth, and Hell, and all that is therein, who is the marvellous Disposer of all things both visible and invisible, curse thee, and deprive thee of all thine office, joy, and place; and I do bind thee in the depths of the Bottomless Abyss there to remain until the Day of Judgment, I say into the Lake of Fire and Brimstone which is prepared for all rebellious, disobedient, obstinate, and pernicious spirits. Let all the company of Heaven curse thee! Let the sun, moon, and all the stars curse thee! Let the LIGHT and all the hosts of Heaven curse thee into the fire unquenchable, and into the torments unspeakable. And as thy name and seal contained in this box chained and bound up, shall be choked in sulphurous stinking substances, and burned in this material fire; so in the name IEHOVAH and by the power and dignity of these three names, TETRAGRAMMATON, ANAPHAXETON, and PRIMEUMATON, I do cast thee, O thou wicked and disobedient Spirit N., into the Lake of Fire which is prepared for the damnèd and accursèd spirits, and there to remain unto the day of doom, and never more to be remembered before the face of GOD, who shall come to judge the quick, and the dead, and the world, by fire.

[80] In some codices this is called "the Curse" only; but in one or two the "Spirits' Chain" is called "the Lesser Curse," and this is the "Greater Curse."

THEN the exorcist must put the box into the fire, and by-and-by the Spirit will come, but as soon as he is come, quench the fire that the box is in, and make a sweet perfume, and give him welcome and a kind entertainment, showing unto him the Pentacle that is at the bottom of your vesture covered with a linen cloth, saying:

THE ADDRESS UNTO THE SPIRIT UPON HIS COMING

BEHOLD thy confusion if thou refusest to be obedient! Behold the Pentacle of Solomon which I have brought here before thy presence! Behold the person of the exorcist in the midst of the exorcism; him who is armèd by GOD and without fear; him who potently invocateth thee and calleth thee forth unto appearance; even him, thy master, who is called OCTINOMOS. Wherefore make rational answer unto my demands, and prepare to be obedient unto thy master in the name of the Lord:

> BATHAL OR VATHAT RUSHING UPON ABRAC! ABEOR COMING UPON ABERER![81]

THEN he or they will be obedient, and bid thee ask what thou wilt, for he or they be subjected by God to fulfil our desires and commands. And when he or they shall have appeared and showed himself or themselves humble and meek, then shalt thou rehearse:

---

[81] In the Latin, "Bathal vel Vathat super Abrac ruens! Absor veniens super Aberer!" {Hence these are not names of G the V [God the Vast One] as it would be "ruentis," venientis."}

THE WELCOME UNTO THE SPIRIT

WELCOME Spirit N., O most noble king[82] (or kings)! I say thou art welcome unto me, because I have called thee through Him who has created Heaven, and Earth, and Hell, and all that is in them contained, and because also thou hast obeyed. By that same power by the which I have called thee forth, I bind thee, that thou remain affably and visibly here before this Circle (or before this Circle and in this triangle) so constant and so long as I shall have occasion for thy presence; and not to depart without my license until thou hast duly and faithfully performed my will without any falsity.

THEN standing in the midst of the Circle, thou shall stretch forth thine hand in a gesture of command and say:

"BY THE PENTACLE OF SOLOMON HAVE I CALLED THEE! GIVE UNTO ME A TRUE ANSWER."

Then let the exorcist state his desires and requests.

And when the evocation is finished thou shalt license the Spirit to depart thus:

THE LICENSE TO DEPART

O THOU Spirit N., because thou hast diligently answered unto my, demands, and hast been very ready and willing to come at my call, I do here license thee to depart unto thy proper place; without causing harm or danger unto man or beast. Depart, then, I say, and be thou very ready to come at my call, being duly exorcised and conjured by the sacred rites of magic. I charge thee to withdraw peaceably and quietly, and the peace of GOD be ever continued between thee and me. AMEN!

---

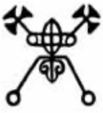
[82] Or whatever his dignity may be.

AFTER thou hast given the Spirit license to depart, thou art not to go out of the circle until he or they be gone, and until thou shalt have made prayers and rendered thanks unto God for the great blessings He hath bestowed upon thee in granting thy desires, and delivering thee from all the malice of the enemy the devil.

Also note! Thou mayest command these spirits into the Vessel of Brass in the same manner as thou dost into the triangle, by saying: “that thou dost forthwith appear before this Circle, in this Vessel of Brass, in a fair and comely shape,” etc., as hath been shown in the foregoing conjurations.

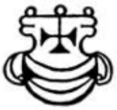
THESE be the 72 Mighty Kings and Princes which King Solomon Commanded into a Vessel of Brass, together with their Legions. Of whom BELIAL, BILETH, ASMODAY, and GAAP, were Chief. And it is to be noted that Solomon did this because of their pride, for he never declared other reason why he thus bound them. And when he had thus bound them up and sealed the Vessel, he by Divine Power did chase them all into a deep Lake or Hole in Babylon. And they of Babylon, wondering to see such a thing, they did then go wholly into the Lake, to break the Vessel open, expecting to find great store of Treasure therein. But when they had broken it open, out flew the Chief Spirits immediately, with their Legions following them; and they were all restored to their former places except BELIAL, who entered into a certain Image, and thence gave answers unto those who did offer Sacrifices unto him, and did worship the Image as their God, etc.

SHEMHAMPHORASH



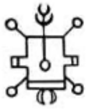
The Seal of Bael.

(1.) Bael. – The First Spirit is a King ruling in the East, called Bael. He maketh thee to go Invisible. He ruleth over 66 Legions of Infernal Spirits. He appeareth in diverse shapes, sometimes like a Cat, sometimes like a Toad, and sometimes like a Man, and sometimes all these forms at once. He speaketh hoarsely. This is his character which is used to be worn as a Lamen before him who calleth him forth, or else he will not do thee Homage.



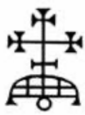
The Seal of Agares.

(2.) Agares. – The Second Spirit is a Duke called Agreas, or Agares. He is under the Power of the East, and cometh up in the form of an old fair Man, riding upon a Crocodile, carrying a Goshawk upon his fist, and yet mild in appearance. He maketh them to run that stand still, and bringeth back runaways. He teaches all Languages or Tongues presently. He hath power also to destroy Dignities both Spiritual and Temporal, and causeth Earthquakes. He was of the Order of Virtues. He hath under his government 31 Legions of Spirits. And this is his Seal or Character which thou shalt wear as a Lamen before thee.



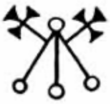
The Seal of Vassago.

(3.) Vassago. – The Third Spirit is a Mighty Prince, being of the same nature as Agares. He is called Vassago. The Spirit is of a Good Nature, and his office is to declare things Past and to Come, and to discover all things Hid or Lost. And he governeth 26 Legions of Spirits, and this is his seal.



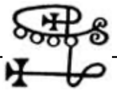
The Seal of Samigina.

(4.) Samigina, or Gamigin. – The Fourth Spirit is Samigina, a Great Marquis. He appeareth in the form of a little Horse or Ass, and then into Human shape doth he change himself at the request of the Master. He speaketh with a hoarse voice. He ruleth over 30 Legions of Inferiors. He teaches all Liberal Sciences, and giveth account of Dead Souls that died in sin. And his Seal is this, which is to be worn before the Magician when he is Invocating, etc.



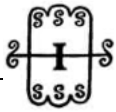
The Seal of Marbas.

(5.) Marbas. – The Fifth Spirit is Marbas. He is a Great President, and appeareth at first in the form of a Great Lion, but afterwards, at the request of the Master, he putteth on Human Shape. He answereth truly of things Hidden or Secret. He causeth Diseases and cureth them. Again, he giveth great Wisdom and Knowledge in Mechanical Arts; and can change men into other shapes. He governeth 36 Legions of Spirits. And his Seal is this, which is to be worn as aforesaid.



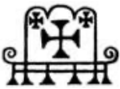
The Seal of Valefor.

(6.) Valefor. – The Sixth Spirit is Valefor. He is a mighty Duke, and appeareth in the shape of a Lion with an Ass's Head, bellowing. He is a good Familiar, but tempteth them he is a familiar of to steal. He governeth 10 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this, which is to be worn, whether thou wilt have him for a Familiar, or not.



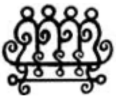
The Seal of Amon.

(7.) Amon. – The Seventh Spirit is Amon. He is a Marquis great in power, and most stern. He appeareth like a Wolf with a Serpent's tail, vomiting out of his mouth flames of fire; but at the command of the Magician he putteth on the shape of a Man with Dog's teeth beset in a head like a Raven; or else like a Man with a Raven's head. He telleth all things Past and to Come. He procureth feuds and reconcileth controversies between friends. He governeth 40 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this which is to be worn as aforesaid, etc.



The Seal of Barbatos.

(8.) Barbatos. – The Eighth Spirit is Barbatos. He is a Great Duke, and appeareth when the Sun is in Sagittary, with four noble Kings and their companies of great troops. He giveth understanding of the singing of Birds, and the Voices of other creatures, such as the barking of Dogs. He breaketh the Hidden Treasures open that have been laid by the Enchantments of Magicians. He is of the Order of Virtues, of which some part he retaineth still; and he knoweth all things Past, and to Come, and conciliateth Friends and those that be in Power. He ruleth over 30 Legions of Spirits. His Seal of Obedience is this, the which wear before thee as aforesaid.



The Seal of Paimon.

(9.) Paimon. – The Ninth Spirit in this Order is Paimon, a Great King, and very obedient unto LUCIFER. He appeareth in the form of a Man sitting upon a Dromedary with a Crown most glorious upon his head. There goeth before him also an Host of Spirits, like Men with Trumpets and well sounding Cymbals, and all other sorts of Musical Instruments. He hath a great Voice, and roareth at his first coming, and his speech is such that the Magician cannot well understand unless he can compel him. This Spirit can teach all Arts and Sciences, and other secret things. He can discover unto thee what the Earth is, and what holdeth it up in the Waters; and what Mind is, and where it is; or any other thing thou mayest desire to know. He giveth Dignity, and confirmeth the same. He bindeth or maketh any man subject unto the Magician if he so desire it. He giveth good Familiars, and such as can teach all Arts. He is to be observed towards the West. He is of the Order of Dominations. He hath under him 200 Legions of Spirits, and part of them are of the Order of Angels, and the other part of Potentates. Now if thou callest this Spirit Paimon alone, thou must make him some offering; and there will attend him two Kings called Labal and Abalim, and also other Spirits who be of the Order of Potentates in his Host, and 25 Legions. And those Spirits which be subject unto them are not always with them unless the Magician do compel them. His Character is this which must be worn as a Lamen before thee, etc.

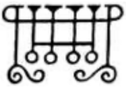
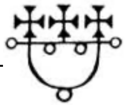
The Seal of Buer.

(10.) Buer. – The Tenth Spirit is Buer, a Great President. He appeareth in Sagittary, and that is his shape when the sun is there. He teaches Philosophy, both Moral and Natural, and the logic Art, and also the Virtues of all Herbs and Plants. He healeth all distempers in man, and giveth good Familiars. He governeth 50 Legions of Spirits, and his Character of obedience is this, which thou must wear when thou callest him forth unto appearance.



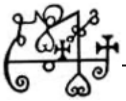
The Seal of Gusion.

(11.) Gusion. – The Eleventh Spirit in order is a great and strong Duke, called Gusion. He appearth like a Xenopilus. He telleth all things, Past, Present, and to Come, and showeth the meaning and resolution of all questions thou mayest ask. He conciliateth and reconcileth friendships, and giveth Honour and Dignity unto any. He ruleth over 40 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this, the which wear thou as aforesaid.



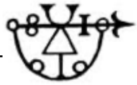
The Seal of Sitri.

(12.)Sitri. – The Twelfth Spirit is Sitri. He is a Great Prince and appearth at first with a Leopard's head and the Wings of a Gryphon, but after the command of the Master of the Exorcism he putteth on Human shape, and that very beautiful. He enflameth Men with Women's love, and Women with Men's love; and causeth them also to show themselves naked if it be desired. He governeth 60 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this, to be worn as a Lamen before thee, etc.



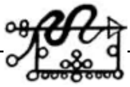
The Seal of Beleth.

(13.)Beleth. – The Thirteenth Spirit is called Beleth (or Bileth, or Bilet). He is a mighty King and terrible. He rideth on a pale horse with trumpets and other kinds of musical instruments playing before him. He is very furious at his first appearance, that is, while the Exorcist layth his courage; for to do this he must hold a Hazel Wand in his hand, striking it out towards the South and East Quarters, make a triangle, Δ, without the Circle, and then command him onto it by the Bonds and Charges of Spirits as hereafter followeth. And if he doth not enter into the triangle, Δ, at your threats, rehearse the Bonds and Charms before him, and then he will yield Obedience and come into it, and do what he is commanded by the Exorcist. Yet he must receive him courteously because he is a Great King, and do homage unto him, as the Kings and Princes do that attend upon him. And thou have always a Silver Ring on the middle finger of the left hand held against thy face, as they do yet before AMAYMON. This Great King Beleth causeth all the love that may be, both of Men and of Women, until the Master Exorcist hath had his desire fulfilled. He is of the Order of Powers, and he governeth 85 Legions of Spirits. His Noble Seal is this, which is to be worn before thee at working.



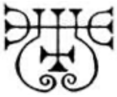
The Seal of Leraje.

(14.) Leraje, or Leraikka. – The Fourteenth Spirit is called Leraje (or Leraie). He is a Marquis Great in Power, showing himself in the likeness of an Archer clad in Green, and carrying a Bow and Quiver. He causeth all great Battles and Contests; and maketh wounds to putrefy that are made with Arrows by Archers. This belongeth unto Sagittary. He governeth 30 Legions of Spirits, and this is his Seal, etc.



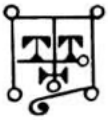
The Seal of Eligos.

(15.) Eligos. – The Fifteenth Spirit in Order is Eligos, a Great Duke, and appeareth in the form of a goodly Knight, carrying a Lance, an Ensign, and a Serpent. He discovereth hidden things, and knoweth things to come; and of Wars, and how the Soldiers will or shall meet. He causeth the Love of Lords and Great Persons. He governeth 60 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this, etc.



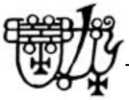
The Seal of Zepar.

(16.) Zepar. – The Sixteenth Spirit is Zepar. He is a Great Duke, and appeareth in Red Apparel and Armour, like a Soldier. His office is to cause Women to love Men, and to bring them together in love. He also maketh them barren. He governeth 26 Legions of Inferior Spirits, and his Seal is this, which he obeyeth when he seeth it.



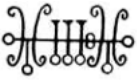
The Seal of Botis.

(17.) Botis. – The Seventeenth Spirit is Botis, a Great President, and an Earl. He appeareth at the first show in the form of an ugly Viper, then at the command of the Magician he putteth on a Human shape with Great Teeth, and two Horns, carrying a bright and sharp Sword in his hand. He telleth all things Past, and to Come, and reconcileth Friends and Foes. He ruleth over 60 Legions of Spirits, and this is his Seal, etc.



The Seal of Bathin.

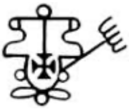
(18.) Bathin. – The Eighteenth Spirit is Bathin. He is a Mighty and Strong Duke, and appeareth like a Strong Man with the tail of a Serpent, sitting upon a Pale-Coloured Horse. He knoweth the Virtues of Herbs and Precious Stones, and can transport men suddenly from one country to another. He ruleth over 30 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this which is to be worn as aforesaid.



The Seal of Sallos.

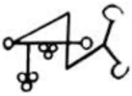
(19.) Sallos. – The Nineteenth Spirit is Sallos (or Saleos).

He is a Great and Mighty Duke, and appeareth in the form of a gallant Soldier riding on a Crocodile, with a Ducal Crown on his head, but peaceably. He causeth the Love of Women to Men, and of Men to Women; and governeth 30 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this, etc.



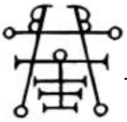
The Seal of Purson.

(20.) Purson. – The Twentieth Spirit is Purson, a Great King. His appearing is comely, like a Man with a Lion's face, carrying a cruel Viper in his hand, and riding upon a Bear. Going before him are many Trumpets sounding. He knoweth all things hidden, and can discover Treasure, and tell all things Past, Present, and to Come. He can take a Body either Human or Aërial, and answereth truly of all Earthly things both Secret and Divine, and of the Creation of the World. He bringeth forth good Familiars, and under his Government there be 22 Legions of Spirits, partly of the Order of Virtues and partly of the Order of Thrones. His Mark, Seal, or Character is this, unto the which he oweth obedience, and which thou shall wear in time of action, etc.



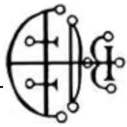
The Seal of Marax.

(21.) Marax. – The Twenty-first Spirit is Marax. He is a Great Earl and President. He appeareth like a great Bull with a Man's face. His office is to make Men very knowing in Astronomy, and all other Liberal Sciences; also he can give good Familiars, and wise, knowing the virtues of Herbs and Stones which be precious. He governeth 30 Legions of Spirits, and his Seal is this, which must be made and worn as aforesaid, etc.



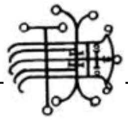
The Seal of Ipos.

(22.) Ipos. – The Twenty-second Spirit is Ipos. He is an Earl, and a Mighty Prince, and apppeareth in the form of an Angel with a Lion's Head, and a Goose's Foot, and Hare's Tail. He knoweth all things Past, Present, and to Come. He maketh men witty and bold. He governeth 36 Legions of Spirits. His Seal is this, which thou shalt wear, etc.



The Seal of Aim.

(23.) Aim. – The Twenty-third Spirit is Aim. He is a Great Strong Duke. He appeareth in the form of a very handsome Man in body, but with three Heads; the first, like a Serpent, the second like a Man having two Stars on his Forehead, the third like a Calf. He rideth on a Viper, carrying a Firebrand in his Hand, wherewith he setteth cities, castles, and great Places, on fire. He maketh thee witty in all manner of ways, and giveth true answers unto private matters. He governeth 26 Legions of Inferior Spirits; and his Seal is this, which wear thou as aforesaid, etc.



The Seal of Naberius.

(24.) Naberius. – The Twenty-fourth Spirit is Naberius. He is a most valiant Marquis, and showth in the form of a Black Crane, fluttering about the Circle, and when he speaketh it is with a hoarse voice. He maketh men cunning in all Arts and Sciences, but especially in the Art of Rhetoric. He restoreth lost Dignities and Honours. He governeth 19 Legions of Spirits. He can give the understanding to Men how they may know the Virtues of all Herbs and Precious Stones. He teacheth the Arts of Logic and Ethics in all their parts. If desired he maketh men invisible, and to live long, and to be eloquent. He can discover Treasures and recover things Lost. He ruleth over 29 Legions of Spirits, and his Seal is this, which wear thou, etc.

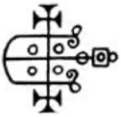
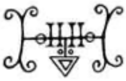
The Seal of Asmoday.

(32.) Asmoday. – The Thirty-second Spirit is Asmoday, or Asmodai. He is a Great King, Strong, and Powerful. He appeareth with Three Heads, whereof the first is like a Bull, the second like a Man, and the third like a Ram; he hath also the tail of a Serpent, and from his mouth issue Flames of Fire. His Feet are webbed like those of a Goose. He sitteth upon an Infernal Dragon, and beareth in his hand a Lance with a Banner. He is first and choicest under the Power of AMAYMON, he goeth before all other. When the Exorcist hath a mind to call him, let it be abroad, and let him stand on his feet all the time of action, with his Cap or Headdress off; for if it be on, AMAYMON will deceive him and call all his actions to be bewrayed. But as soon as the Exorcist seeth Asmoday in the shape aforesaid, he shall call him by his Name, saying: "Art thou Asmoday?" and he will not deny it, and by-and-by he will bow down unto the ground. He giveth the Ring of Virtues; he teacheth the Arts of Arithmetic, Astronomy, Geometry, and all handicrafts absolutely. He giveth true and full answers unto thy demands. He maketh one Invincible. He showeth the place where Treasures lie, and guardeth it. He, amongst the Legions of AMAYMON governeth 72 Legions of Spirits Inferior. His Seal is this which thou must wear as a Lamen upon thy breast, etc.



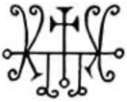
The Seal of Gäap.

(33.) Gäap. – The Thirty-third Spirit is Gäap. He is A Great President and a Mighty Prince. He appeareth when the Sun is in some of the Southern Signs, in a Human Shape, going before Four Great and Mighty Kings, as if were a Guide to conduct them along on their way. His Office is to make men Insensible or Ignorant; as also in Philosophy to make them Knowing, and in all the Liberal Sciences. He can cause Love or Hatred, also he can teach thee to consecrate those things that belong to the Dominion of Amaymon his King. He can deliver Familiars out of the Custody of other Magicians, and answereth truly and perfectly of things Past, Present, and to Come. He can carry and re-carry men very speedily from one Kingdom to another, at the Will and Pleasure of the Exorcist. He ruleth over 66 Legions of Spirits, and he was of the Order of Potentates. His Seal is this to be made and to be worn as aforesaid, etc.



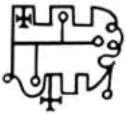
The Seal of Furfur.

(34.) Furfur. – The Thirty-fourth Spirit is Furfur. He is a Great and Mighty Earl, appearing in the Form of an Hart with a Fiery Tail. He never speaketh truth unless he be compelled, or brought up within a triangle, Δ. Being therein, he will take upon himself the Form of an Angel. Being bidden, he speaketh with a hoarse voice. Also he will wittingly urge Love between Man and Woman. He can raise Lightnings and Thunders, Blasts, and Great Tempestuous Storms. And he giveth True Answers both of Things Secret and Divine, if commanded. He ruleth over 26 Legions of Spirits. And his Seal is this, etc.



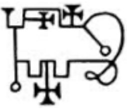
The Seal of Marchosias.

(35.) Marchosias. – The Thirty-fifth Spirit is Marchosias. He is a Great and Mighty Marquis, appearing at first in the Form of a Wolf having Gryphon's Wings, and a Serpent's Tail, and Vomiting Fire out of his mouth. But after a time, at the command of the Exorcist he putteth on the Shape of a Man. And he is a strong fighter. He was of the Order of Dominations. He governeth 30 Legions of Spirits. He told his Chief, who was Solomon, that after 1,200 years he had hopes to return unto the Seventh Throne. And his Seal is this, to be made and worn as a Lamen, etc.



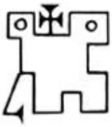
The Seal of Stolas.

(36.) Stolas, or Stolos. – The Thirty-sixth Spirit is Stolas, or Stolos. He is a Great and Powerful Prince, appearing in the Shape of a Mighty Raven at first before the Exorcist; but after he taketh the image of a Man. He teacheth the Art of Astronomy, and the Virtues of Herbs and Precious Stones. He governeth 26 Legions of Spirits; and his Seal is this, which is, etc.



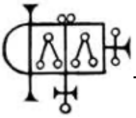
The Seal of Phenex.

(37.) Phenex. – The Thirty-seventh Spirit is Phenex (or Pheynix). He is a Great Marquis, and appeareth like the Bird Phoenix, having the Voice of a Child. He singeth many sweet notes before the Exorcist, which he must not regard, but by-and-by he must bid him put on Human Shape. Then he will speak marvellously of all wonderful Sciences if required. He is a Poet, good and excellent. And he will be willing to perform thy requests. He hath hopes also to return to the Seventh Throne after 1,200 years more, as he said unto Solomon. He governeth 20 Legions of Spirits. And his Seal is this, which wear thou, etc.



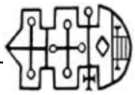
The Seal of Halphas.

(38.) Halphas, or Malthus. – The Thirty-eighth Spirit is Halphas, or Malthus (or Malthas). He is a Great Earl, and appeareth in the Form of a Stock-Dove. He speaketh with a hoarse Voice. His Office is to build up Towers, and to furnish them with Ammunition and Weapons, and to send Men-of-War to places appointed. He ruleth over 26 Legions of Spirits, and his Seal is this, etc.



The Seal of Malphas.

(39.) Malphas. – The Thirty-ninth Spirit is Malphas. He appeareth at first like a Crow, but after he will put on Human Shape at the request of the Exorcist, and speak with a hoarse Voice. He is a Mighty President and Powerful. He can build Houses and High Towers, and can bring to thy Knowledge Enemies' Desires and Thoughts, and that which they have done. He giveth Good Familiars. If thou maketh a Sacrifice unto him he will receive it kindly and willingly, but he will deceive him that doth it. He governeth 40 Legions of Spirits, and his Seal is this, etc.



The Seal of Räum.

(40.) Räum. – The Fortieth Spirit is Räum. He is a Great Earl; and appeareth at first in the Form of a Crow, but after the Commmand of the Exorcist he putteth on Human Shape. OBSERVATIONS

FIRST, thou shalt know and observe the Moon's Age for thy working. The best days be when the Moon Luna is 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, or 14 days old, as Solomon saith; and no other days be profitable. The Seals of the 72 Kings are to be made in Metals. The Chief Kings' in Sol (Gold); Marquises' in Luna (Silver); Dukes' in Venus (Copper); Prelacies' in Jupiter (Tin); Knights' in Saturn (Lead) Presidents' in Mercury (Mercury); Earls' in Venus (Copper), and Luna (Silver), alike equal, etc.

THESE 72 Kings be under the Power of AMAYMON, CORSON, ZIMIMAY or ZIMINAIR, and GÖAP, who are the Four Great Kings ruling in the Four Quarters, or Cardinal Points,[86] viz.: East, West, North, and South, and are not to be called forth except it be upon Great Occasions; but are to be Invocated and Commanded to send such or such a Spirit that is under their Power and Rule, as is shown in the following Invocations or Conjurations. And the Chief Kings may be bound from 9 till 12 o'clock at Noon, and from 3 till Sunset; Marquises may be bound from 3 in the afternoon till 9 at Night, and from 9 at Night till Sunrise; Dukes may be bound from Sunrise till Noonday in Clear Weather; Prelates may be bound any hour of the Day; Knights may from Dawning of Day till Sunrise, or from 4 o'clock till Sunset; Presidents may be bound any time, excepting Twilight, at Night, unless the King whom they are under be Invocated; and Counties or Earls any hour of the Day, so it be in Woods, or in any other places whither men resort not, or where no noise is, etc.

[86] These four Great Kings are usually called Oriens, or Uriens, Paymon or Paymonia, Ariton or Egyn, and Amaymon or Amaimon. By the Rabbins they are frequently entitled: Samael, Azazel, Azäel, and Mahazael.

THE AUTHOR DEDICATES THIS WORK TO THE MEMORY OF DAVID P. WILSON, THE MOST TALENTED SCRYER I HAVE EVER MET.

Thy Name be mighty, O God, which canst open the veil whereby Thy All-Powerful Will may be opened unto men. Power, Glory, and Honour be unto Thee, For Thou art the same God of all things, and art life eternal.

Acknowledgments

This book could not have been written without the inspiration and generous assistance of the following friends, scholars, and master Enochian magicians: David P. Wilson (S. Jason Black), Clay Holden, Christeos Pir, David R. Jones, Robin Cousins, Josh Norton (Benjamin Rowe), James Wasserman, Judith Hawkins-Tillirson, Rick Potter, I.Z. Gilford, Poke Runyon, Christopher S. Hyatt, and Robert Powell—and to the regular members of the Monday Night Magick Class of Heru-ra-ha Lodge O.T.O., I give my most heartfelt thanks; Constance DuQuette, who co-hosts this 30-year on-going class (and is my most ruthless heckler); Jonathan Taylor; Mike Strader; Jill Belanger; Olver Althoen; Carlos Casadas; and Sandy, Arto, Cobra, Vanessa, Bret, Michael, Patricia, Coleen, Mary, Evgeniy, Jane, Alan, Danny, and scores of others who throughout the years have brought Life, Love, and Liberty into our home each week.

I would also like to thank Glacier Nitz-Mercaeant, of The Enochian's Keep in Indiana, for his beautiful gifts of my gold Enochian Ring and Lamen; and the late Cecil Eugene Burns (a.k.a. Frater White Haired Bull) who built and donated the true and faithful replica of the Holy Table that now adorns our Enochian Temple space.

My thanks also go to Brothers Michael Strader, for his rendering of the Ensigns of Creation in the angelic script, and Robert Powell for his beautiful images of the Tablet of Union and the four Elemental Tablets. They are perhaps the clearest black and white renderings of these complex figures ever published.

Finally I offer my heartfelt gratitude to Clay Holden for his encouragementand support of this project. I am also deeply indebted to him for allowing me to use his magnificent recreations of the original angelic alphabet and his images of the Forty-nine Good Angels, the Holy Table, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and Golden Talisman.

I also draw the reader's attention to Brother Holden's original image of John Dee's Monas Hieroglyphica that adorns the cover page of each of the five books that make up Enochian Vision Magick. This image is in itself a most profound and historic element in the entire book for it represents a solution of a geometric puzzle going back to ancient Greek mathematical texts—that is, the production of a regular heptagon in a circle using only a compass and ruler. Please pay special attention to Clay's foreword to discover more.

Finally I offer very special thanks to Jan Johnson, Brenda Knight, and Amber Guetebier of Weiser Books who patiently (and graciously) forgave several deadline breaches.

Foreword

This is the book I would have given my eyeteeth for twenty-five years ago. It is the first work to systematically lay out the whole corpus of Dee and Kelley's magickal system, and the only one to provide a useful path through the dense and multilayered labyrinth of what has come down to us as “Enochian Magick,” based almost entirely on their original manuscripts.

When Lon asked me to consider writing a foreword to his book, I think he knew that I had not been deeply involved in Enochian research for a number of years, but asked me to at least consider looking at what he was writing. It took only about fifteen minutes of reading to reignite my enthusiasm for the material which at one time was an all-consuming passion, and to realize that what he was in the process of writing would become a landmark text on the subject. Now that the book is finished, I am even more deeply honored to be able to write a few words of introduction to his remarkable work.

What particularly impresses me with Lon's book is not only the sheer volume of material covered or the clarity with which it is presented, but its immense readability and the fact that he has struck an elegant balance between classical scholarship, practical magickal instruction, and anecdotal events.

One never loses the sense that there is a real person at work here, questioning, organizing, and reporting his conclusions together with his experiences along the path. The self-important tone of many so-called “Enochian Magick” texts is entirely absent, replaced by clear and wellorganized content.

When I first encountered Enochian magick, the only available published materials were Regardie's Golden Dawn and Crowley's Gems from the Equinox, fascinating but largely incomprehensible to me. Next was the first of several largely incoherent books on Enochian Magick by Gerald Shueler, which elaborated on the Golden Dawn material and added much of his own invention, most of it of dubious value. In hindsight, they seem more suitable for Dungeons and Dragons than serious magickal work (though to be fair, as David Jones once pointed out to me, D&D is probably an excellent introductory discipline for magickal ritual work).

Then came Geoffrey James's The Enochian Evocation of John Dee, a completely different matter altogether. Still more of a synopsis of a system than a workable guidebook (based largely on Sloane MS. 3191, Dee's precis of the materials received between 1582 and 1587), it gathered together the bulk of Dee and Kelley's work, and gave a sense of where it all came from. Still incredibly useful many years later, when coupled with an examination of the original scrying sessions that produced the material, it still does not serve as a proper guidebook through the system. The heart is there, but the how and why are largely absent.

When looking at what the Golden Dawn and Crowley and their successors put together as “Enochian Magick,” it seems clear that they were missing huge chunks of this “how and why,” along with many critical pieces to understanding what they were dealing with, and their attempts to graft basically everything else in their magickal system onto it produce a cumbersome thing that Dee and Kelley would not recognize as what they pulled through.

I have likened their resulting patchwork as similar to what happens when one attempts to open a Word document or a highly formatted database file in a text editor: one can read and even extract a good bit of raw data, but the formatting and links to other programs are entirely unreadable and bear little resemblance to the original document.

Without an understanding of Dee and Kelley's early material, mostly presented in Sloane MS. 3188, what comes later on, while workable on its own, will be largely incomprehensible. And while in many ways it can be convincingly argued that the later system, centered on the four Elemental Tablets, and the Tablet of Union are independent of the earlier material, Dee's diaries demonstrate that he went back and added marginal notes to even the earliest diaries to refer to events and communications that transpire several years later, as well as referencing the earlier communications in the later entries.

Fortunately for the reader, Lon's book gives full treatment, background, and application of both the early and the later materials, and provides in spades both the how and why that are missing from so many other books that purport to be guides to the system.

For me, not until David Jones's Center for Enochian Studies, based out of Thelema Lodge OTO in Oakland, began their annotated transcriptions of the first of Dee's spirit diaries, did I get a real sense for the background story of Enochian magick. All of a sudden, it was like reading a Philip K. Dick novel, with the tables and diagrams coming to life, populated by spirits, angels, and demons of all sorts, each with his or her own personality. And notably, John Dee and Edward Kelley for the first time became real people, questioning and struggling to understand and document what was being communicated to them.

I was finally able to borrow microfilms of the spirit diaries from the always truly generous and helpful Bill Heidrick, and I spent countless days printing them out on microfilm reader printers. When I finally had a set of Sloane MS. 3188 (Quinti Libri Mysteriorum) printed out and bound in front of me, the real magick began to take place for me. It was as if one discovered that Jules Verne's Captain Nemo was a real person, and could read his own words and step back 400-plus years into the past, to share his thoughts and experiences. To this day, it is the closest thing to real time travel I have ever felt.

Dee's handwriting presented some difficulty at first, as did his use of many antiquated terms, abbreviations, and frequent recourse to Latin. To my aid came Elias Ashmole's “fair-copy” of the diaries (Sloane MS. 3677), transcribed many decades later, in a beautiful hand which was much easier to read than Dee's. It also has the benefit of being more complete in some cases than Dee's original, as the manuscript was in considerably better shape in the 1600s than it is today, and Ashmole made notes indicating where materials were missing.

Given the difficulty in reading the original texts, it occurred to me to begin transcribing the diaries into electronic texts, laid out exactly as Dee had in the original manuscripts, and this was the birth of the John Dee Publication Project. The idea, which I tested in reading circles at Thelema Lodge, was that once one could get past the difficulties of Dee's sixteenth-century italic and secretarial handwriting, the actual English was not so different from that of Shakespeare, and that the modern reader would more easily be able to approach the work. Producing small batches of texts, with my transcription facing pages of the actual manuscript, it proved a fairly simple matter for people to actually read and understand the material.

While the world has changed immensely over the past two decades, and it is now possible to download electronic copies of all of Dee and Kelley's spirit diaries off the Net, it is still valuable to have the reconstructed electronic texts. And while I have never completed the transcriptions of the Quinti Libri Mysteriorum, it both taught me many valuable computer skills that ultimately changed my life and demonstrated that the text could be reproduced as written in an easily readable form. I am pleased that it still provides many readers with a place to begin in reading the spirit diaries.

It was suggested to me early on by David Jones that rather than attempting to comprehend the whole system, I should concentrate on a particular section and work to understand the mechanism of that piece of the system. In my case, that piece of the puzzle was the Sigillum Dei Aemeth.

While Lon in this book suggests that, rather than trying to reproduce Dee and Kelley's work, one ought to use the system they transmitted, I found it of inestimable value to read through the text of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus, where the layout and working of the Sigillum is systematically laid out, and fill in each of the squares in a blank Sigillum as I went through it. By so doing, this impressive talisman became a truly living being for me, and it was possible also to rectify certain errors which exist in Dee's diagram of the Sigillum.

Case in point: at the bottom of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, both in Dee's original illustration at the end of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus and in virtually every version published since, one finds the character “y” with a “14” under it. The text however clearly gives this number as “15.” Replacing this number, and applying the method of backwards and forwards rotation around the outer circle, one utilizes the remaining unused squares, and two additional names are produced, neither of which is mentioned in the text. This exercise is left to the reader.

It further demonstrated that Dr. Dee, in fact, lies in certain places in the record, indicating that there is material hidden even there that he did not want to be visible to an unthinking reader.

One of my favorite quotes from the beginning of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus is Dee's interchange with the archangel Michael:

> Mi. [...] Thow shalt sweare by the Living God, the strength of his Mercy, and his Medicinall vertue, powred into man's soule never to disclose these Mysteries
>
> D. Yf no man, by no means, shall perceyve any thing hereof, by me, I wold think that I shold not do well.
>
> Mi. Nothing is cut from the churche of God. We in his Saincts are blessed for ever.
>
> We separate the, from fyled and wycked persons: We move the to God.
>
> D. I vow, as you require: God be my help, and Gwyde, now and ever, amen.
>
> MIC. This is a Mystery, skarse worthy for us, ourselves, to know, muche lesse to Reveale. Art thow, then, so Contented?
> D. I am: God be my strength.

Keeping this in mind, one may begin to understand why Dee occasionally misdirects the reader in his diaries. As with Aleister Crowley's works several hundred years later, if one is paying attention to what one is reading, the erroneous data should just about jump out from the page, and provide a pointer to the actual information.

Investigating such parts of the magickal furniture can provide further unknown or undocumented information, such as the following:

If one adds and subtracts the numbers at the top and bottom of the letters around the outer ring of the Sigillum (having corrected the “y/15”), one arrives at a total number of 440. Adding the “1” in the concentric circles that is given at the end of the instructions on the outer ring (accompanied by the statement “Omnia unum est”), the total comes to 441, the gematric value of the Hebrew “Aemeth,” or Truth. Without the correction of the “y/15” square, the total remains 440, the gematric value for “Meth,” or Dead. Thus, the Sigillum may be considered as a Golem, and the published version an inactive and unworkable “dead” talisman.

There is also an additional Table to be generated from the instructions given for the characters around the outer ring, as they are described in the text:

> D. Note: All the Cumpanies of these 40, stode, five togither, and five togither, and so in eight Cumpanyes; each, of five Thus one can lay out the characters in eight rows of five, and in so doing, can produce symmetrical character sigils similar to the ones found on the Elemental Tablets for the angels of the outer ring.

In attempting to find a simple way to generate a regular heptagram in a circle for the purposes of reproducing the Sigillum on paper, I further discovered an interesting connection between the spirit diaries and Dee's earlier Monas Hieroglyphica.

While one cannot in fact produce a regular heptagon in a circle using only a compass and ruler (a geometric puzzle going back to ancient Greek mathematical texts), one can approximate it. There are several classical solutions, each of them rather close, but also involving complex methodology. Laying out the Monas Hieroglyphica in its 4 ×9 grid, as given in Dee's book, using a compass from the mid-point to trace a circle, and rotating the Monas so its “horns” touch on the circle from the top of the grid, one finishes with a very close approximation of a heptagon, in fact, as close or closer than any known classical solution.

Finally, it is perhaps fitting to suggest that one can read and consider Dee and Kelley's spirit diaries in a number of different ways, some of them mutually exclusive, but all of them perhaps of interest and value.

First, they can be considered as authentic records of spirit communication. Over the years I have worked closely with practicing Enochian magicians, including at least one incredibly talented scryer, who can both see and hear through the crystal ball, a very rare combination. Most scryers can do one or the other, but not both. In Edward Kelley, Dee found a rare man, however difficult he may have been to work with, and clearly knew it. Dee could only rarely see or hear anything himself, but with his amazing mathematical and classically trained mind, was perhaps the only man in the world capable of understanding and organizing the instructions that were presented to him. He was also skeptic enough to question and reject transmitted material that appeared to come from lying spirits, as Kelley periodically pulled through “illuding divils” that specialized in disinformation. The internal consistency of the bulk of the spirit diaries, as well as the coherent interrelationship of its many parts, speaks convincingly to its being a genuine record of actual events over a period of years.

Second, one can consider the material as an exercise in cryptographic method, intended as a means of communicating secret information back from the continent to Dee's colleagues and superiors in Elizabeth's court. Clearly, as one reads through Liber Mysteriorum Quartus, and to a certain extent Secundus, one can see similarities to the methodology of Trithemius's Steganographia, a work with which Dee was quite familiar, and which has now been demonstrated to be entirely a cryptographic treatise.

The arrays of “dignified” and “undignified” spirits can be seen as referring to encryption methods involving “nulls,” and Dee and Kelley's discussion of “transposition of letters” in Quinti Libri Mysteriorum Appendix is at the very least suggestive again of the same. Then there are the tables in Liber Loagaeth, at the end of which (Sloane MS. 3189) Dee has appended eight tables from “Aldaraia Sive Soyga,” the mathematical methods of which have been demonstrated by Jim Reeds. They appear even on the surface to be cryptographic tables, though no one to date has made a systematic study of their content, nor provided any translation or decryption or methodology. They remain the most hermetically sealed of all Dee and Kelley's documents.

In a similar way, one may usefully compare this “cryptography” theme with the Kabbalistic method of transposition of letters along with numeric values as a strictly spiritual exercise (e.g., the “Sepher Yetzirah”), and arrive at the conclusion that the Enochian system might be considered “sacred cryptography” in the same sense as the classical Kabbalistic method, unrelated to the mundane world of secret transmission of political secrets.

Lastly, and perhaps most amusingly, I have entertained the idea that Dee was the author of the first science fiction novel over a period of years, and indeed the first to give thought to the idea of “cyberspace,” an interdimensional world where communication takes place through a portal, giving thought to the twentieth-century works of H. P. Lovecraft, Philip K. Dick, and William O. Gibson.

In this view, while Edward Kelley is still a historic personage (he appears in Dee's private diaries as well as being clearly documented both in England and in Prague, usually in conjunction purely as an alchemist), the “Edward Talbot” and “Edward Kelley” presented in the Spirit Diaries, his frequent turns from devout scryer to blaspheming conjurer and back again, along with all the mischievous and light-hearted spirits who are trotted on and off the stage, can be seen as an immense work of fiction. Whether written purely for Dee's amusement or as a secret means of documenting a different sort of spiritual transmission remains hidden today.

Of course, as anyone who has spent any time actually working with the system(s) presented in the Spirit Diaries can attest, when you put them to work as if true, stuff happens. Once invoked (or evoked), the spirits do in fact seem to appear and go to work, whether one believes in them or not.

Which leads to the one piece of advice I would give to anyone starting out in working Enochian Magick: Be very clear of what you ask for, as you are certain to get as much of it as you can handle, and once started, it is much more difficult to get it to stop.

In closing, I would like to quote a passage from W. Wynn Westcott's translation of the “Chaldean Oracles” (quoting Proclus), which I have always found incredibly useful to keep in mind when working Enochian Magick, or indeed, any ritual work:

> As the Oracle therefore saith: God is never so turned away from man, and never so much sendeth him new paths, as when he maketh ascent to divine > speculations or works in a confused or disordered manner, and as it adds, with unhallowed lips, or unwashed feet. For of those who are thus negligent, the progress is imperfect, the impulses are vain, and the paths are dark.

Lon's wonderful book provides the reader—for the first time—with a clearly lit and well-ordered guide through the maze of Dee and Kelley's Enochian system. The hallowed lips and well-washed feet are up to the reader.

Keep an open mind, a pure heart, and a clean temple, and you will surely hear their angels and spirits speaking to you.

A Note Regarding Original Source Material and Footnote References

The original Enochian magick material is a labyrinth of manuscripts. In preparing this book, I was fortunate to have at my disposal electronic files containing the photographic images of original material currently housed at the British Library, London. The manuscripts are numbered and designated by the name of past owners. The ones I used for the present work are designated: Sloane 3188, 3189, 3191; and Cotton Appendix XLVI parts I and II.

Within these numbered manuscripts are various "books," or "Libers" bearing separate titles. Some of these Libers were copied by Kelley or others and reproduced in subsequent manuscripts (sometimes renamed) and have found their way to London's British Library and the Bodleian and Ashmolean libraries at Oxford University. For my purposes the material from the British Library's Sloane 3188, 3189, 3191; and Cotton Appendix XLVI parts I and II proved to be quite sufficient. Digital scans of the Enochian manuscripts can be accessed electronically at: http://www.themagickalreview.org/enochian/mss/.

Enochian scholar Geoffrey James prepared a concise summary breakdown of Dee and Kelley manuscripts for the bibliography of his excellent book, Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee.[1] He has graciously allowed me to reproduce his entries for the material that relates directly or indirectly to Enochian Vision Magick. The reader who wishes to explore the source material in greater detail (or who simply wishes to track the book's footnotes and references) should find this list very helpful.

SLOANE MS. 3188.

This manuscript contains Dee's earliest scrying sessions. It contains six individual 'books', which are:—

Mysteriorum Liber Primus covering December 22, 1581 to March 15, 1582, and containing a ceremony with Saul (Dee's first scryer) and the first ceremonies with Edward Talbot, in which the table and Solomon's ring are described.

Mysteriorum Liber Secondus covering March 6, 1582 to March 21, 1582, and containing the first elements of the Heptarchic system, the spirits of the Sigil of Æmeth, and the first suggestion that an antediluvian language would be delivered to Dee. This title page is missing, but can be inferred from textual references in SLOANE MS. 3677.

Mysteriorum Liber Tertius covering April 28, 1582 to May 4, 1582, and containing numerous sigils related but apparently not essential to the Heptarchic system, as well as the names of the 49 good angels.

Quartus Liber Liber Mysteriorum covering November 15, 1583 to November 21, 1583, and containing the remainder of the Heptarchic system; this book is the first to record the name of Edward Kelly[2] as the scryer.

Liber Mysteriorum Quintus covering March 23, 1583 to April 18, 1583, and containing the tables later transcribed by Kelly into SLOANE MS. 3189.

Quinti Libri Mysteriorum Appendix covering April 20, 1583 to May 23, 1583, and containing the famous Enochian letters, as well as information concerning the construction of the Great Table.

SLOANE MS. 3189.

Liber Mysteriorum Sextus and Sanctus or The Book of Enoch revealed to John Dee by the Angels which contains 49 double-sided tables of (apparently) random letters. It is in Edward Kelly's handwriting.

SLOANE MS. 3191.

This manuscript is the only book of ceremonial magic extant in Dee's handwriting. It consists of three separate 'books,' each dealing with a different aspect of Dee's angelic magickal system. The books are:—

49 Claves Angelicæ Anno 1584 Cracoviæ (Liber 18) which contains Dee's transcription of the Angelical Keys (often called the Enochian Keys or Enochian Calls.)

Liber Scientiæ Auxillii et Victoriæ Terrestris which contains a complex system of magic based upon the Great Table (often called The Table of Watchtowers). It is entirely in Latin, and related to the Call of the Thirty Aires.

De Heptarchia Mystica which describes a complete system of planetary magic, along with excerpts from the various scrying sessions.

COTTON APPENDIX XLVI, PARTS 1&2.

This manuscript is occasionally referred to as Royal Appendix XLVI, or SLOANE MS. 5007. It contains thirteen 'books,' which are:—

Liber Mysteriorum (et Sancti) parallelus Novalisque covering May 28, 1583 to July 4, 1583, and containing the tail end of the Heptarchic system and the only recorded incident of Kelly speaking Greek.

Liber Pergrinatonis Prime Videlicet A Mortlaco Angeliæ Ad Craconiam Poloniæ covering September 21, 1583 to March 13, 1584, and containing the journey from Mortlake to Cracow, Poland and various political speculations.

Mensis Mysticus Saobaticus Pars primus ejusdem covering April 10, 1584 to April 30, 1584, and containing the dictations of the first calls (backwards).

Libri Mystici Apertorii Cravoviensis Sabbatici covering May 7, 1584 to May 22, 1584, and containing the remainder of the calls (except for the call of the Thirty aires, in the Angelical tongue, and the spirits of the Thirty aires.

Libri Septimi Cracoviensis Mystici Sabbatici covering May 23, to July 12, 1584, and containing the geographic locations of the spirits of the Thirty aires, the Great Table or Watchtowers, and the first third of the Call of the Thirty Aires, as well as the names of the Thirty aires.

Libri Cracoviensis Mysticus Apertorius Præterea Præmium Madimianum covering July 12, 1584 to August 15, 1584, and containing the remainder of the Call of the Thirty Aires, as well as the names of the Thirty aires.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Liber Primus Cæsarusque covering August 15, 1584 to October 8, 1584, and containing an attempt to convince the Holy Roman Emperor of the canonical nature of the visions.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Confirmatio covering December 20, to March 20, 1585, and containing mostly political speculation.

Mysteriorum Cracoveinsium Stephanicorum Mysteria Stephanica covering April 12, 1585 to June 6, 1585, and containing an alchemical formula and a letter from Dee's wife to the spirits.

Unica Action, quæ Pucciana vocetor covering August 6, 1585 to September 6, 1585, and containing religious visions obviously meant to impress the Papal Nuncio who was then attending the ceremonies.

Liber Resurrectionis Pragæ, Pactum sev Fædus Sabbatismi covering fragments from April 30, 1586 to January 21, 1587, and containing further ceremonies with the Papal Nuncio.

Actio Tertia Trebonæ Generalis covering April 4, 1587 to May 23, 1587, and containing a complex series of corrections to the Watchtowers and the infamous wife-swapping episode.

Jesus, Omnipoten sempiterne & une Deus covering March 20, 1607 to September 7, 1607 and containing the last records of Dee's magickal experiment.

Some of this material has been published in more modern times in books that are still readily available. Foremost of these are A True & Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits,[3] and John Dee's Five Books of Mystery.[4]

To make things a bit easier for the reader to access more readily available source material, I will, wherever possible, try to make references with the text and in notes to passages in these modern works.

Prologue to the Prologue: Something Secret

> Vyasa: There's something secret about a beginning. I don't know how to start.
>
> Ganesha: As you claim to be the author of the poem, how about beginning with yourself?
> —THE MAHABHARATA[5]

There is indeed something secret about a beginning, secret and invisible like the soul of infinite potential that broods in the heart of every living seed. My tongue is tied. I stare at the blank screen of my monitor. I don't know how to start. For the writer it is the most difficult moment—a million things to say, but where to begin? My eyes search the walls and ceiling of my little office and fall upon the mask of the Hindu god Ganesha. His bright, pleasant face reminds me of the opening scene of Jean-Claude Carriére's play, The Mahabharata,[6] where Vyasa, the author of the epic poem is faced with his own writer's block as he strives to begin his monumental story. Unable to read or write himself, Vyasa is blessed by the arrival of Ganesha, the beloved elephant-headed god, who offers to serve as Vyasa's scribe and take down his story from dictation. He also gives Vyasa some advice about how to start.

"How about beginning with yourself?"

And so, in pale imitation of the poet Vyasa, I will heed the wise counsel of my elephant-headed lord, the remover of obstacles. I shall begin this work of magick by telling you something about myself. Don't worry, I won't tell you much. Just enough to get us started.

I am a man. I am what they call in the East a householder—that is, I am married and have for my entire adult life endeavored with varying degrees of success to provide a loving and stable environment for my family. I am also an exceedingly lucky man, for in truth, throughout the years it has been my sainted wife and beloved son who have provided me with a loving and stable environment.

Fate (coupled with a conspicuous lack of ambition) has conspired to make our lifestyle one of genteel poverty (well, not always so genteel). We've never owned a house, a new car, or a credit card. On the other hand, we've always lived in moderately affluent communities and safe neighborhoods. We've always owned old cars that usually get us where we're going. Our bills consist primarily of the rent, the utilities, health insurance, and our groceries. We have no debts.

Some people say that's a miracle. I agree. Miracles are part of my job, for I am a magician. I'm not the type of magician who creates illusions to entertain audiences, but the type of who seeks to dispel the myriad illusions that hinder my own spiritual growth and enlightenment.

Aleister Crowley (1875–1947), the great twentieth-century magician, defined magick as the "science and art of causing change to occur in conformity with Will."[7] This is obviously a very broad definition of the term. In my opinion, however, it is the only one that is entirely accurate. You are, of course, free to interpret this definition any way you wish. Personally, I've come to the realization that the only real changes I can effect with magick are changes in myself. By changing myself, I change the world around me, hopefully for the better.

Naturally, I haven't always considered myself a magician, but for as long as I can remember I've been a seeker. Please don't project any undue piety upon this statement. I'm as wicked as anyone who seldom breaks any criminal or civil statutes can be. But even as I wallow in my dark and lazy wickedness, I find myself again and again stumbling inadvertently toward the Light.

As a magician I have also been extraordinarily lucky. Early in my career I was befriended (and many times guided) by some very wonderful, and in their own ways masterful, magicians to whom I owe an immeasurable debt: Israel Regardie, Phyllis Seckler, Helen Parsons Smith, and Grady L. McMurtry. I have also collaborated with others who have enlarged and enriched my magickal life. Foremost among these is my wife, Constance, who is the greatest natural magician I have ever known. There are many others as well: Karen James, whose profound sense of beauty and passion for the art of dramatic ritual keeps alive the mysteries of Eleusis; Douglas James, William Breeze, James Wasserman, Steven Abbott, LeRoy Lauer, David P. Wilson, Rick Potter, Dewey Warth, Nathan Sanders, Christopher S. Hyatt, Poke Runyon, Michael Strader, Sandra Brautigam, and Jonathan Taylor; and, for the last twenty-eight years, the assembled magi of my weekly magick class.

On my fortieth birthday I began to write professionally. In this vocation I have also been exceedingly fortunate. Readers who are familiar with the body of my work know that I am occasionally taken to task by knowledgeable critics who accuse me of writing for beginners and who chide me for diluting or oversimplifying complex and esoteric concepts. Against these charges I can say very little in my defense except to confess that I am indeed a simple man who, by conventional academic standards, is a lazy and undisciplined student. I have to learn anecdotally. I need to put things in a personal context. I need to appreciate and understand the general before I can be thrilled and inspired by the specifics.

Yes, I'm proud to write for beginning students of magick. But first and foremost I write to explain things to myself. I write to find out what I know. I write the books that I wish I could have studied during the first five years of my magickal studies—books that might have saved me years of frustration, blind alleys, and wheel-spinning. I also like to think that I write for more advanced students who may find themselves entangled in the elegance of magickal minutiae or else have become so entranced and self-impressed with their encyclopedic memories that they've lost sight of why they are doing magick in the first place.

I write about things with which I'm familiar and have had handson experience. One of those things is Enochian magick. I began my study of this most curious of quaint and curious subjects in late and began practicing it in earnest in autumn of 1980. Back then there was very little published information available. The only person I actually knew who had any significant hands-on experience with the system was Dr. Francis (Israel) Regardie,[8] who cautioned me in no uncertain terms that I probably shouldn't be dabbling in such things.

Nevertheless, armed with my copy of Aleister Crowley's Gems from the Equinox[9] and the two-volume set of Regardie's The Golden Dawn,[10] I naïvely plunged into what I thought was the deep end of the Enochian magick swimming pool. A year or so later a friend would present me with a huge stack of photocopied[11] documents from the British Museum. This material represented several significant portions of surviving diaries and magickal notebooks of Elizabethan magus Dr. John Dee (1527–1608 or 1609) and his clairvoyant partner Edward Kelley[12] (1555–1595).

Only then did I begin to realize how dreadfully deep the waters of Enochiana really are. By then, however, it was too late for me to get out of the pool. What little of the system I had mastered had already yielded breathtaking results. My life was becoming very magickal.

Those primitive photocopies eventually yellowed, then browned, then charcoal-blackened into illegibility, but my interest didn't fade. Neither did the interest of others in the magickal community. Today clear copies of the museum manuscripts are readily available to the serious student, and there are no less than thirty books currently in print with the word "Enochian" in the title. I confess a few of those are my doing. In 1991 Dr. Christopher S. Hyatt and I wrote a commentary on Aleister Crowley's little Enochian masterpiece, Liber Chanokh.[13] A year latter Herman Slater of Magickal Childe Publishing asked me to pen the introduction to the new facsimile edition of the 1659 A True & Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between John Dee ... and Some Spirits. In 1995, my wife, Constance, and I created a deck of tarot cards[14] that incorporates a large number of images relating to the Enochian Elemental Tablets. In the book that accompanies the cards,[15] I elucidate on how they can be used for practical Enochian magick operations.

But writing (and reading) about Enochian magick is one thing; actually using it in a practical way to advance one's own spiritual evolution is another. With few exceptions, the thirty odd books mentioned above are very long on theory and history and very short on straight-forward suggestions on how to actually sit down and perform Enochian magick, or reasons why one would want to do such a thing in the first place. I hope to remedy this, at least in small measure, by writing this book. I feel qualified to do this not because I have any illusions that I am the world's most knowledgeable scholar on the subject (I assure you I am not). I offer simply the credentials of nearly thirty years of applied experience with several aspects of Enochian magick. I have come to some very fundamental conclusions that I believe might be of significant and practical value to both the speculative student and the operative practitioner of this elegant and complex magickal system.

Before I plunge us directly into those waters, however, I need to briefly address the question of why a relatively sane and rational twenty-first-century adult would wish to seriously embark upon the path of magick. I will do this with a device that will most assuredly irritate my publisher—a second prologue. And once again, to please my Lord Ganesha,[16] I will begin by talking about myself.

Prologue: Why Magick?

> Magick is as mysterious as mathematics, as empirical as poetry, as uncertain as golf, and as dependent on the personal equations as Love.
> —ALEISTER CROWLEY[17]

I'm a magician. I practice the art of ceremonial magick. I adore and invoke the essence of highest Deity and hold congress with divine angels. I also evoke and command spirits and demons.[18] Ceremonial magick is the path I have chosen to give expression to the spiritual yearnings I believe are inherent in every human being. It is my Tao, my Way, my religion, my philosophy, my psychology. But ceremonial magick isn't my life. I already have a life, thank you. But I use magick to help make my life magick.

I have closets and chests full of bizarre and colorful robes and crowns and wands and daggers and chalices and swords and lances and thuribles and banners and veils and rings and incense and candles and oils and tablets and talismans and mirrors and crystals. I have books—strange books (some very old and rare), books that would scare the daylights out of most of my neighbors. I use these magickal tools; I study these books in order to perform the rites of ceremonial magick. These things are not my life. But I use them to make my life magick.

On the surface one might think it reasonable and fair to ask, "Why are you a magician, Lon? Why do you believe in this stuff? Why do you do these crazy things?"

It might surprise you to know I don't have a proper answer to these questions. It is impossible for me to adequately explain or justify why I celebrate my spiritual life through the vehicle of magick, for the same reasons it is impossible for any artist to properly explain why he or she has taken up the brush or the chisel or the violin or ballet slippers. If reasonableness were the sole criterion for the existence of art, there would be no music, no dance, no magick.

Make no mistake about it, magick is an art form, and every true magician is an artist. Just like the musician and dancer, the magician must practice, create, and perform. Just like the painter or sculptor, he or she must be armed with proper tools, skills, knowledge, and, most of all, inspiration. But what about people who've never learned to play a musical instrument, never learned to dance or paint or sculpt, yet who find themselves spiritually touched by listening to music, watching ballet, and visiting galleries? Are they not artists too?

In a very important way, I believe they are. As quantum physicists tell us, both the observer and that which is observed are changed by the act of observation itself. By appreciating the artist's handiwork, we are fundamentally affecting the reality and life of that creation. More importantly, when we expose ourselves to the artist's creation, we enjoy the passive luxury of allowing our consciousness to be altered, elevated, and enriched in unique and personal ways the artist might have never imagined.

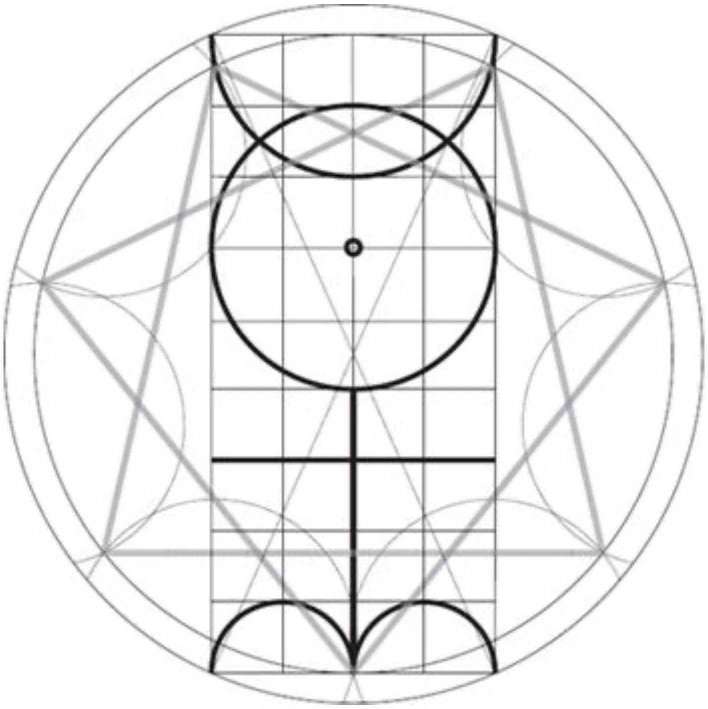
The art of ceremonial magick, however, is a little different. There is no painted canvas to display, no audience to applaud. Regardless of how altruistic the magician's motives may be, magick is spiritual performance art that must ultimately be executed and appreciated by the magician alone. He or she is at once the teacher, the student, the medium, the conductor, the performer, the venue, the audience, and the critic. The magician touches the broader audience of humanity only by affecting changes in the magician, and success can be weighed only in the silent Holy of Holies of his or her own soul.

So, here and now and for the duration of this book, I shall lay aside the question of "why magick?" If my magickal efforts seem to propel me closer to self-realization, if my work brings me a measure of health or happiness or wisdom or a sense of fulfillment, good. But none of these things, nor indeed any thing, can be the goal of my art. Instead of asking, "why magick?" I suggest all who would fancy themselves magicians seek answers to the following questions, questions I struggle to answer every day of my life:

Am I really an artist? Am I drawn to this strange and irrational art form because of my mad passion to enrich my art and fulfill my creative life purpose? Or am I doing all this to avoid fulfilling my destiny? Am I running away from myself? When I don my magickal robes and enter the temple, do I do so as a radiant artist-magician, armed and ready to storm the gates of heaven and hell to do battle for the triumph of my soul, poised to take the next step in my spiritual evolution? Or am I merely a foolish man in an exotic costume, a mystic poseur in serious need of a life?

BOOK I

Don't Try to Duplicate the Magick Dee and Kelley Did to Receive the System—Just Use the System They Received!



CHAPTER ONE

In the Middle of the Night

> Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart.
> —JOHN DEE[19]

It's 3:43 a.m. I've been up for about a half an hour bathing, dressing, and preparing myself to operate. Constance is asleep in the bedroom, and I'm trying to be as quiet as I can. In just a few minutes I will turn off the computer here in my office, take up my almond wand, and go into the darkened living room. There I will quietly perform a Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram, light two tapered candles, and sit down before the Holy Table.

Once comfortably seated I will close my eyes and pray:

> Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart. Amen.

I will then open my eyes, take the golden Ring, and quietly recite the Prayer of the Ring:

> Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

I will put on the Ring and then take up the golden Lamen that is attached to a black ribbon. Before putting it around my neck I will again pray:

> Behold the Lamen. As the Holy Table conciliates Heaven and Earth, let this Lamen which I place over my heart conciliate me to the Holy Table. Amen.

I will then take up my almond wand, reach across the Holy Table, tap the upper right-hand corner, and begin to chant. As I do so, I will move the tip of the wand from right to left along the far edge of the table and chant:

> Pa Med Fam Med Drux Fam Fam Ur Ged Graph Drux Med Graph Graph Med Med Or Med Gal Ged Ged Drux.

Then, moving the tip of the wand down the left edge of the table, I will continue to chant:

Then up the right-hand edge to finish where I started:

> Pa Gon Med Un Graph Fam Mals Tal Ur Pa Pa Drux Un Un Van Un Med Un Gon Drux Drux Ur.

I will repeat this entire procedure six more times, each time increasing the intensity of my focus on the words and movements. When I've completed the seventh round of chanting, I will hold the wand over the center of the table and chant seven rounds of the following:

> Med Gon Gisg, Don Ur Van, Ur Don Ur, Med Med Graph. Med Don Ur Med, Gon Ur Don Med, Gisg Van Ur Graph.

Then I will trace a circle over the center of the table and say:

> Seven, rest in Seven: and the Seven, live by Seven: The Seven, govern the Seven: And by Seven all Government is.
>
> Galas Gethog Thaoth Horl*w*n Innon Aaoth Galethog,
>
> Zaphkiel Zedekiel Cumael Raphael Haniel Michael Gabriel,
>
> E(l) Me Ese Iana Akele Azdobon Stimcul,
>
> I Ih Ilr Dmal Heeoa Beigia Stimcul,
>
> S Ab Ath Izad Ekiei Madimi Esemeli,
>
> E An Ave Liba Rocle Hagonel Ilemes,
> Sabathiel Zadkiel Madimiel Semeliel Nogahel Corabiel Lavanael.

Finally, I will place the tip of my wand upon the center of my forehead and whisper:

> luah lang sach urch
> Iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf.

The chanting will take about eighteen minutes. By then I will have chanted myself into an altered state of consciousness. In fact, I'll be high as a kite and struggling to avoid drifting into a directionless rapture. I will no longer be the overweight knot of worries and vices that haunts the daylight world of bills and phone calls and deadlines—vampires of time. I will be a magician, a key player in the business of creation, a spiritual being occupying my own indispensable rung on a hierarchical ladder of spiritual beings: gods, archangels and angels, spirits, and demons—spiritual entities who personify in metaphoric Technicolor every natural force, every monad of energy, every atom of matter, every concept and principle, potentiality, and tendency in the visible and invisible cosmos.

My living room will disappear, and in its place will tower the Temple of the Universe, holy ground demarcated by a consecrated carpet of red silk, upon which rests the Holy Table, the center of the universe, the Holy of Holies where heaven touches earth.

The table is completely veiled by a red silk cloth, with its gold tassels that hang from each corner. The cloth conceals an elaborately painted and engraved tabletop, the perimeter of which is carved with eighty-four squares containing letters from a sacred angelic alphabet—letters whose names I chanted in the angelic tongue during my seven rounds of chanting. A large carved hexagram spans the entire inner surface of the tabletop. And in the center of the hexagram broods a large rectangle made up of twelve squares, each containing an oversized angelic letter—the same letters whose names I chanted during the second round of chanting—artfully carved into the surface of the table. Seven talismans, Ensigns of Creation, are arrayed around the central rectangle. They are made of purified tin and are peculiarly lettered in the angelic script.

The centerpiece of the Holy Table is the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, a wax disk approximately nine inches in diameter and one and one-half inches thick, bearing the carved image of a complex diagram consisting of an interlocked heptagram, two heptagons, a pentagram, and an array of numbers and letters, which, when decoded, spell the names of seven sets of seven divine beings: Seven who rest in seven, seven who live by seven, the seven who govern the seven, and seven by whom all government is. Four smaller waxed versions of this Sigillum (wrapped in red silk bags) rest under the legs of the Holy Table, insulating it from distracting geocurrents.

The chanting completed, I will unveil a circular black mirror made of highly polished obsidian. I have it placed in a stand directly upon the covered Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and I will carefully angle it so I see my dimly lit face reflected in its pool of deep blackness. After only a few moments the reflection of my face will disappear, and I will see with magick eyes and hear with magick ears.

Now, the vision magick begins.

In the middle of the night I will call upon the angels.

I will call upon the angels, and they will answer.

CHAPTER TWO

The Magick of Dr. John Dee

> If Merlin is an inner resonator who generated the literature which gathered about his name, then Dr. John Dee must be considered almost his outer manifestation in the real world.
>
> He is probably the single most influential aspect of the magician ever to have lived and a worthy successor to the Arthurian mage.
> —JOHN AND CAITLIN MATTHEWS[20]

The little ceremony I described in chapter one cannot be found in any other book of magick. I composed it in the spring of 2006 for the benefit of the members of my weekly magick class. It is designed as a ritual of preparation—a ceremonial "drug," as it were, to safely induce an altered state of consciousness, a trance in which specific techniques of magick may be practiced and visions can occur.

The components of the ritual are not, however, a modern invention. The magical implements and furniture were fabricated as faithfully as possible from descriptions found in sixteenth-century manuscripts and items currently housed at the Bodleian Library of Oxford University, the British Library, and the King's Library wing of the British Museum.

The prayers and the chants were drawn from those same ancient texts. In a group magical working, the prayers are recited in unison and the chants intoned Tibetan style, in a deep monotone chorus of two or four groups of voices. The hypnotic effect on the participants is tangible and powerful. (I have yet to discover what it does to our eavesdropping neighbors.)

The ancient manuscripts I refer to are the diaries and magical records of Dr. John Dee[21] and his partner Edward Kelley, and these texts represent the source material for the system of magick known and practiced today as Enochian magick.

It is not my intention, nor is it within the scope of the present work, to present a proper biography of Dee. That has been handled nicely in Peter French's brilliant biography[22] and other texts that I've itemized in the bibliography. I cannot, however, escape the necessity of providing a brief outline of his life and work, because it will have a direct bearing on our understanding of Enochian vision magick and why I think my little ritual of preparation is so important for those who wish to pursue this path.

Son of a gentleman server to Henry VIII, John Dee was a true Renaissance magus and one of the most extraordinary individuals of his time. Historian John Aubrey called him “one of the ornaments of his Age.”[23] That is saying a lot, for his age was peopled with some of the brightest lights in the history of western civilization: Queen Elizabeth I, Charles V, Francis Bacon, Ben Johnson, Edmund Spenser, Giordano Bruno, Christopher Marlowe, and William Shakespeare.

Dee's unique genius blossomed at Cambridge University, and his fame as a published mathematician propelled him as a young man to academic rock-star status throughout Europe. It also brought him to the attention of the rulers of his world, including the future Queen Elizabeth.

He was the master of scores of disciplines. He was a physician, an engineer, a theologian, an astronomer, and cartographer. He invented the nautical instruments and developed the advanced navigational charts that helped make Britannia ruler of the waves. He even coined the term Britannia. A master astrologer, he was allowed to choose the date of Elizabeth's coronation, and throughout her reign he remained her friend and counselor.

Because he was fluent in many languages and lectured often on the continent, Elizabeth enlisted his services as a spy. Dee enjoyed this role very much. As a matter of fact, I believe he remained in this position until the day she died. He was fascinated with cryptography and loved word and letter puzzles. Dee was secretly known as “the queen's eyes,” and he signed his dispatches to her with the stylized image of a hand shading two eyes.

Yes, John Dee, on “her majesty's secret service,” was the first agent 007.[24] Dee possessed the largest private library in England and was constantly enlarging it. He was perhaps the most educated man of his day. Part of his education included esoteric philosophy, Qabalah, alchemy, and magick—not illogical pursuits for a Renaissance magus. Magick, in particular, was a science to be explored and exploited. Dee wanted to talk to angels (as did the biblical patriarch Enoch) not only to discover the wisdom of the past and the secrets of the universe, but also, more immediately, to discover the secrets of Elizabeth's enemies and brandish the power to magically manipulate the spiritual forces that control them. Dee wanted to be a magical spy.

His approach to magick (at least at first) was pretty standard procedure for the day. After bathing and dressing in clean clothes (extra-ordinary measures for the times—unless, of course, it was May, when many people of the day took their annual bath), he would enter a room set aside for the purpose. There he would drop to his knees before a consecrated table/altar and for a half hour or so pray fervently to God and His good angels, alternately reciting a litany of self-abasing confessions of his unworthiness to enter into the divine presence and boasting of his God-given right to do that very thing. With his consciousness duly exalted by prayer, he would then gaze into a crystal or a black mirror (a process known as scrying[25]) and wait to receive a vision.

In theory that's how it was supposed to work. However, even though Dee was skilled at composing long and eloquent prayers, he was not very good at scrying. In 1581 he started to advertise for someone who was. He had a small measure of success with a handful of rented seers until March of 1582, when he made the acquaintance of one Edward Talbot. Talbot (who would soon confess that his name was actually Kelley) was an unemployed alchemist's assistant and convicted forger. Kelley's questionable character notwithstanding, his skills as a scryer immediately impressed Dee, who hired him on the spot at a salary of fifty pounds a year, a handsome figure for the day.

The partnership of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley would last until 1587. Their angelic-magick workings for the most part concluded in 1584. During their time together they engaged in hundreds of scrying sessions of varying lengths, in which Kelley gazed into a crystal ball or a black obsidian mirror and reported everything he saw and heard during a variety of angelic communications. Dee, sitting at a nearby table with pen and ink, led the questioning and recorded everything in anal-retentive detail.

Not all of the sessions yielded profound revelations. Indeed, many appear to be attempts by the communicating intelligences to simply keep the conversation going. There were numerous instances when information received in earlier sessions was amended (sometimes radically) in subsequent sessions. There were even times when the magicians were informed that they had been deceived in earlier communications by evil spirits. Nevertheless, the consistency of the bulk of the material is staggeringly impressive, and the double-/triple-blind nature in which it was delivered, especially the angelic language, calls, and magical tablets, boggles the imagination.

The Dee and Kelley years can be viewed as having occurred in three major phases, resulting in what appears on the surface to be three separate and unique magical systems. I will discuss these in more detail shortly. Here at the beginning it is enough to simply point out it is the third and last phase of their angelic workings (the three-month period between April 10 and July 13, 1584) that yielded the material for the system of vision magick that can be properly called Enochian.

The Enochian period was highly productive and bore much promise. In fewer than a hundred days Dee and Kelley received an angelic language, tablets containing the names of elemental and celestial beings, and calls in the angelic tongue that promised to unlock the secrets of heaven and earth. With sad, almost Faustian irony, however, once the Enochian material was in their hands, Dee and Kelley did not proceed to actually operate the system in subsequent workings.

They would go on to other magical adventures, attempting to impress (with little success) the crown heads of Europe with their supernatural counsel. Finally, after nearly five years of working together, years of exhausting magical sessions, and years of traipsing their families around Europe (not to mention a notorious wife-swapping incident), familiarity finally bred contempt, and the two magicians parted company without ever getting into the driver's seat of Enochian magick and turning the key.

Dee's complicated life would draw him back to the English court and the distracting world of political intrigue and survival. In 1588, as the Spanish armada set sail to annihilate England's much smaller fleet (an event Dee predicted years earlier), Elizabeth called again upon her Merlin. Dee shocked her courtiers by urging the queen to not engage the Spanish armada and keep her ships at bay, prophesizing that a mighty storm would scatter and destroy the Spaniards. Elizabeth wisely heeded Dee's words. The storm manifested right on cue, and in the chaos that followed, the Spanish armada went down to defeat. In many circles Dee was credited with magically raising the tempest that saved England. The story of this event became instant legend. William Shakespeare, writing only twenty-three years later, would use Dee as the model for Prospero, the storm-raising magician in his play, The Tempest.

Kelley's post-Enochian years would not earn him such renown. His ambitions kept him on the continent, where he peddled the promise of alchemical treasures to the crown heads of Europe. He was knighted by Emperor Rudolph II of Bohemia but was shortly thereafter imprisoned by his royal patron for failing to manufacture alchemical gold. With fairy-tale panache, Sir Edward Kelley plunged to an untimely death in November of 1595 while attempting to escape from the turret of Emperor Rudolph's prison tower.

Dee's end was not so colorful. Elizabeth appointed him warden of Christ's College in Manchester, but it was not a happy tenure. His wife (and, it is believed, several of his children) died there during the plague in 1605. Dee returned to his home at Mortlake, where his daughter Katherine cared for him until his death in late 1608 or early 1609.

How so many of Dee's manuscripts survived to see the light of the twenty-first century is a magical wonder story in and of itself. Several of the most important documents Dee had hidden in the false bottom of a cedar chest (can we get much more romantic?), where they lay undiscovered for over fifty years after his death. Through a curious chain of events (that tragically saw a portion of the manuscripts baked as pie wrappings), the surviving material came to the attention of the illustrious antiquary, politician, astrologer, chemist, and Freemason, Alias Ashmole (1617–1692), one of the few people in the world capable of recognizing the importance of the discovery. Thanks to Ashmole, the material was catalogued and finally housed safely in his own museum at Oxford, the British Museum, and the British Library, where, over three hundred years after its reception, it captured the attention of S. L. MacGregor Mathers, Wynn Wescott, and the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, then Aleister Crowley—and now you.

CHAPTER THREE

Dee and Kelley vs. the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley

> Now hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of darknesse: and to fulfill his promise with thee, for the books of Enoch: To whom he sayeth as he said unto Enoch. Let those that are worthy understand this, by thee, that it may be one witness of my promise toward thee.
> —THE ANGEL AVE, MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1584[26]

Modern Enochian magick (as first developed in the late nineteenth century by S. L. MacGregor Mathers and the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and later adapted and augmented by Aleister Crowley and others) is a remarkable and tidy self-referential system of visionary magick. It is based upon a small portion of sixteenth-century manuscripts of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley, and the mystique of its colorful origins make it initially alluring to magical dilettantes and dabblers. However, the complexity of the system, as outlined by Golden Dawn/Crowley texts, continues to effectively guard the mysteries of this marvelous magical art form from all but the most serious, courageous, tenacious, foolish, or naïve.[27]

For most of us who cut our Enochian-magick teeth during the latter half of the twentieth century, the Golden Dawn (GD) and Crowley books were at the time the only source material readily available to us. By following the intricate procedures outlined in these texts, we proceeded with our visionary quests along the two avenues of experimentation offered us by the GD/Crowley model: one branch of the system dealing with the elemental (manifest) universe, the other dealing with the aethyric (celestial). I'll discuss these branches in more detail in book IV.

Both of these magical environments are populated by spiritual beings whose names are drawn from five grids of lettered squares received by Dee and Kelley during a series of angelic communications during the third (or Enochian) period of their magical operations. Both the elemental and the celestial magical environments (and their spirit inhabitants) are accessed by intoning one or more of nineteen calls, which are chanted in an angelic language that was given to the Elizabethan magicians under breathtaking and extraordinary circumstances during the last months of their angelic magick workings. Theoretically, these calls induce very specific trances, whereby the magician can pinpoint particular spiritual entities or environments he or she wishes to contact or visit. As you can imagine, this is a very attractive prospect to the magical explorer.

The visionary labor of many post-modern Enochian explorers was well repaid, for we soon discovered that despite our very limited access to the original texts (not to mention our inexperience and ineptitude) this kind of magick actually worked. With surprisingly few exceptions, when we followed the GD/Crowley procedures and techniques, even the most insensitive and skeptical among us received visions we deemed appropriate to the particular regions we were exploring.

The technique used to receive visions such as these is called scrying. The Golden Dawn and Crowley often referred to the practice as “traveling in the spirit vision.” Scrying is, quite simply, the ability to put oneself in touch with one's own psychic senses. In magical operations the scrying session is usually preceded by a formal ceremony designed to put the magician in an altered state of consciousness. It is, for all intents and purposes, a shamanistic experience. The thoughts, mental images, and impressions that flood the magician's mind during this altered state are subsequently recorded in the magician's journal and analyzed.

Naturally, some of us proved more talented than others. Art lovers and movie fans make particularly good candidates for Enochian vision magick, for they see with the romantic's eye and already possess a vast memory bank of evocative landscapes, archetypal characters, and supernatural beings. They are by nature dreamers skilled at communicating through a vocabulary of images and visual metaphors. But even the least imaginative of us, in short order, learned to develop our own visionary skills that became increasingly honed by our repeated work with the system.

There is no question (in my mind, at least) that the Enochian magick procedures and techniques developed by the Golden Dawn and Crowley embody a highly effective system of magical working that, if properly applied, can become an integral component in the modern magician's program of personal self-development. This is especially true for those of us whose magical careers have led us to the Qabalah-based disciplines referred to today in specialized circles as hermetic or ceremonial magick.

To modern ceremonial magicians, Enochian magick appears at first glance to enjoy a comfortable compatibility with our world of pentagram rituals, hexagram rituals, tarot cards, trees of life, qabalistic path workings, chakra work, invocations, god-forms, and spirit evocations. This compatibility, however, has been, for the most part, contrived and jerry-rigged. For as efficacious as the GD/Crowley applications and techniques are, they bear little resemblance to anything Dee and Kelley practiced or were instructed to engage in by their angelic contacts. With all due respect to Mathers, it is clear that he and his Golden Dawn adepts chose to limit their attention to only those portions of source texts that offered material that they could fit easily into the qabalistic/hermetic schema to which they were so passionately committed.

Furthermore, it is clear that in many instances, when the original material didn't fit the schema, they found a way to make it fit.

This fact should not diminish in our respect for the wonderfully effective system the Golden Dawn and Crowley have bequeathed to us. But it has prompted many of us (who obviously have an inordinate amount of time on our hands) to examine in greater detail the surviving Dee and Kelley material that has now become more readily available to the serious student. What we discovered is an overwhelmingly large body of work—books, notebooks, and diaries—the most interesting of which span the better part of three years of intense magical operations. Most of this material appears to have nothing whatsoever to do with Enochian magick as practiced today.

As I mentioned earlier, Dee and Kelley's magical workings took place in three distinct phases that yielded three unique magical systems. For convenience, I will refer to these as (1) Heptarchia Mystica (or simply Heptarchia), (2) Loagaeth (which includes an angelic alphabet), and (3) Enochian.

One could argue quite convincingly that the revelations Dee and Kelley received during the Enochian period represent the crème de la crème of their magical workings and that it is unnecessary to waste our time on the painfully complex details of the Heptarchia and Loagaeth working periods. After all, the GD/Crowley system and techniques were developed from this plus ultra Enochian material, and everything seems to work just fine, thank you. In fact, for the better part of twenty years I was one of the most vocal apologists for the Enochian school whose motto is, “Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received!” Then, starting in 1999, a couple of things happened that caused me to rethink the wisdom of this attitude.

First, I became enthralled with the work of Clay Holden and the John Dee Publication Project, which brought the glories of Quinti Libri Mysteriorum to life on the World Wide Web. Then, in 2003, my O.T.O.[28] Brother and Enochian magick adept Christeos Pir sent me a computer disk of material from a marvelous Enochian seminar he presented in Pittston, Pennsylvania. Along with the seminar material, he sent me a collection of photographic files of surviving Dee manuscripts from the British Library and other materials that were of great interest to me. I assure you, I could not have written this book without these materials and the profound insights of this great modern magician.

Around the same time, my publisher sent me a copy of Joseph H. Peterson's book John Dee's Five Books of Mystery: Original Sourcebook of Enochian Magic. I had years earlier examined much of this material enlarged from microfilm, but now I had the luxury of comfortably reviewing it in clearer formats (with Latin translations) on my home computer and from Peterson's marvelously well-organized book.

I must confess that even with this information stacked conveniently and legibly under my nose, I was overwhelmed by the sheer immensity of it all. I'm interested in the magical adventures of Dee and Kelley as much as the next fellow, but I also have a life. Did I need to sacrifice three years of my own life in order to eavesdrop on every detail of three years of theirs? More than ever I saw the wisdom of simply using the magical system Dee and Kelley received and of not wasting precious time trying to recreate the magick they practiced to receive the system. After all, can't I drive a car without first having to build it myself?

But we're not talking about driving cars; we're talking about the art of magick. In the final analysis, no matter what system the magician chooses, in order to make it work most effectively he or she must first become attuned to that system's particular way of viewing of the universe. This concept is so important to the understanding of what will follow in this book that I will pause to illustrate with an example.

The ceremonial magician who practices qabalistic magick acquiesces (at least for the duration of the working) to see all things in heaven and earth in terms of a hierarchy of spiritual personages expressed by the various god names, archangels, angels, spirits, intelligences, and demons of the system. In Qabalah-based magic, such spiritual beings are conveniently organized and arranged according to fourfold formulas dictated by the Hebrew letters that make up the great Name of God, Yod Heh Vav Heh, and by the familiar schema of the Tree of Life, with its ten sephiroth and the twenty-two paths that connect them. Before the magician is ready to operate within the laws and peculiarities of this qabalistic worldview, he or she must first become a fit component of that universe—a harmonious and integral part of this great divine machine, a vital step on this hierarchical stairway of consciousness.

Like the ballerina whose ninety minutes on stage is the product of years of practice and thousands of hours of rehearsal, the magical artist must also be first transformed into a proper instrument of his or her craft. Magicians achieve this transformation with preliminary meditations and rituals, by which we adjust our focus step-by-step until we become comfortable citizens of the specific magical world in which we intend to operate. For the western ceremonial magician, the well-worn curriculum of the Golden Dawn provides perfect examples of this step-by-step adjustment process.

First the magician becomes master of the pentagram and a full citizen of the world of the five elements of the microcosmic universe. By repeated performances of the pentagram rituals and meditations, the magician's psyche becomes balanced and accustomed to the world of the four directional winds, the four elements, and the corresponding magical weapons: the wand, cup, sword, and disk.

Once the elemental (microcosmic) universe is mastered, the magician then moves on to the next step in the attunement process by mastering rituals of the hexagram. Here the magician's point of reference is enlarged as his or her consciousness and identity is obliged to expand from the microcosmic world of the elements to the macrocosmic greater world—the world characterized by the sun orbited by the planets and surrounded by the belt of the zodiac.

This is very basic stuff, but it illustrates how rituals enable the ceremonial magician to externalize internal processes and undergo self-transformation. Would-be magicians who attempt more advanced work without being adjusted by these early attunements are ill prepared to understand or properly absorb what is happening to them within the context of the progressively higher magical environments in which they presumptuously wish to operate. It is true that some magicians may receive seemingly dramatic and noteworthy effects from such premature efforts, but seeds of promise cannot long take root in soil that is not properly prepared or that is too shallow.

Late in 2005, while gathering material for yet another workshop series on Enochian magick for my Monday night magick class, I poured over the records of Dee and Kelley's pre-Enochian workings in hopes of finding the key to their preparatory processes. What exactly did the angels do to Dee and Kelley during the years prior to the final Enochian revelations? Dee and Kelley received some pretty interesting things during those earlier workings, including instructions for the creation of an array of magical implements that the Golden Dawn and Crowley all but ignored:

- a Ring;[29]
- a Lamen, which was to be worn by the magician as a breastplate and which connects him or her to the Holy Table;
- the Holy Table itself, inscribed with letters from an angelic alphabet and upon which would rest the Sigillium Dei Aemeth;
- the Sigillium Dei Aemeth, an intricately carved disk made of purified beeswax (an artifact so stunning and historically intriguing that it is prominently displayed today in the King's Library wing of the British Museum);
- seven talismans (five squares and two circles), called Ensigns of Creation, which surround the Sigillium on the Holy Table.

All of these items were linked to one another and to the magicians by an overwhelmingly complex process that distilled, shuffled, and organized thousands of letters from numerous and varied alphanumeric grids. These grids had been painstakingly received in vision, one letter at a time, by Kelley and duly transcribed by Dee. The letters spelled the names of great angels, which, in turn, when manipulated, yielded the names of subordinate angels, which produced still more names.

Now, before we get too excited about dusting off and playing with all these pre-Enochian magical tools and furniture, I have to make myself clear on one very important point. These items were received during the first phase of Dee and Kelley's workings.

This period yielded a unique system of planetary magick they referred to as Heptarchia Mystica (see book II). To all appearances, heptarchic magick has little or no direct relationship to the Enochian magick system they received during their final days of practice. Also, it is demonstrably clear (in my mind at least) that Enochian magick can be performed quite effectively without using the Ring, the Lamen, the Holy Table, and so on. However, it is equally clear to me that, as Dee and Kelley were receiving and working with the items and concepts of heptarchic magick, their minds and psychic bodies were, day by day, undergoing subtle yet profound evolutionary changes.

Could the reason the practical Enochian material came so very late in the game be that Dee and Kelley had to first complete their transformation into magicians who could appreciate and handle the advanced work? After all, isn't that what magick is really about— changes in the magician? Could these changes have been brought about by the mere act of meticulously following the angels' complex directions, which filtered and distilled these magical concepts into material manifestation? If so, this would be a vital preparatory step that modern Enochian magicians are omitting entirely.

I grew intrigued with this idea. Given the fact that the GD/Crowley methods of Enochian magick already work so well right out of the box, how much better might these same techniques work if the magician were first prepared and attuned in a manner similar to the way Dee and Kelley had been prepared and attuned. A magician so equipped would be picking up, as it were, where the two Elizabethans left off in 1584.[30]

I was at first uneasy with this theory because it came dangerously near to destroying my comfortable philosophy of “Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received!” However, my inherent laziness was rewarded, and I eventually took comfort in the realization that in order to ceremonially prepare oneself to perform Enochian magick, one might not need to torturously repeat everything Dee and Kelley did to receive the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamen, the seven Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. Instead, one must simply understand and use (in a way that mirrors the preparation process) the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamen, the seven Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth that they received!

This book was written to show the practicing Enochian magician how to do precisely that, and the little ritual in chapter one (and outlined in greater detail in appendix I) is the ceremony that embodies this preparation process. Like the rituals of the pentagram that prepare us for elemental magick, like the rituals of the hexagram that prepare us for planetary magick, I believe this little ceremony captures the essence of the step-by-step processes of personal alchemy that prepared and attuned Dee and Kelley.

The material is based on two series of classes that Constance and I held in our home in 2005 and 2006—visionary workings that spanned a period of just over seven months. While the class spent a considerable amount of time discussing and analyzing the magical theories that underlie these methods of preparation, most of our time was spent actually applying the techniques in a formal and ceremonial manner prior to group and individual Enochian scrying sessions.

My biggest challenge, for both the class series and writing this book, has been how best to communicate the essence of the breathtakingly intricate procedures that occupied Dee and Kelley during their years of preparation without enmeshing the reader in a time-devouring web of details. It is somewhat like trying to convey the profundity of a great cathedral without dwelling minutely on every action of every stonemason who fashioned each perfect stone. I have resolved, therefore, to stay focused on the big picture and allow the reader to wrap his or her mind around the major themes, secure in the knowledge that he or she can proceed to dissect the method of the madness—and discover further revelations—by referring to the now readily available source texts. It is very important for the reader to understand that this book was not written as a substitute for the source material but simply as a guide to the practical, self-transformational applications of this magical art. I advise those of you who may be committed to in-depth academic research of this subject not to view my book as an authoritative replacement for the original texts. Dee and Kelley's records are liberally peppered with irregularities, conflicting instructions, missing pieces, and typos. I've done my best to wade through these and be as consistent and accurate as possible. But when I say I'm going to stay focused on the big picture, that is exactly what I mean.

Are you ready to begin? If so, we need to first talk briefly about the mind of Dr. John Dee and explore the reasons why the secrets of heaven and earth were communicated to him in alphanumeric ciphers, tables, and squares.

CHAPTER FOUR

The Mind of a Cryptographer

> Now first I understand what he, the sage, has said: "The world of spirits is not shut away; Thy sense is closed, thy heart is dead!"
> —FAUST, ACT I, SCENE I [31]

Are angels, spirits, and demons real? Do they have an existence apart from and outside the mind? Ever since human beings could frame thoughts into words, we have asked ourselves that question. It is an eternal debate among magicians and mystics and one that likely will never be resolved to anyone's complete satisfaction. Personally, I agree with the venerable Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford who said, "It's all in your head. You just have no idea how big your head is."[32] Certainly every outside impression we receive is ultimately processed inside our own minds. Just keeping that fact in mind we might conclude that, where objective reality is concerned, there is no outside-of-ourselves.

In either case, in the art of magick, the magician must behave (at least for the duration of the operation) as if the spirits are independent intelligences and have an objective existence in a dimension outside his or her own mind. Dee and Kelley (who believed most fervently in a tangible heaven, hell, and the characters and events of the Bible) certainly assumed that the communicating spirits and angels were real and enjoyed an independent existence. This gave the Elizabethan partners a decided psychological edge over modern magicians, who must overcome a smug mountain of logic, rationality, and spiritual cynicism in order to even begin to operate this most naïvely romantic of spiritual art forms.

For practical purposes, it does not matter whether the magician is making contact with "spirit" intelligences from a "spirit world" or merely tapping into currently unexplainable levels in his or her own mind. If the magician is properly prepared (and operating under the right circumstance), it is indeed possible for him or her to make contact with intelligences that for all intents and purposes could be characterized (objectively or metaphorically) as angels, spirits, and demons.

No two individuals are alike, and the art of preparing oneself and arranging the right circumstances for spirit contact is unique for every magician. For us to understand the elements of Enochian magick, we will need to get a basic idea of how the spirits went about reaching the minds of Dee and Kelley—especially Dee, who was, after all, the operating magician. In fact, there are instances where the communicating intelligences indicated that they viewed the two magicians as a single entity with Kelley acting as an extension of Dee's mind. On April 28, 1582, Dee asks of the archangel Michael, “You mean us two (Dee and Kelley) to be joined so, and in mind united, as if we were one man?” and Michael answered, “Thou understandest.”

As I mentioned earlier, Dee was not a particularly talented scryer. Although his diaries record several instances when he saw certain spirits and phenomena, he relied almost entirely on the visionary skills of others. This makes perfect sense to me. Dee's immense intellect was actually a magical handicap. His magnificent brain was too engaged to surrender its analytical control. His mind worked too fast, and his thoughts were too loud to hear the subtle messages from the spirits. This is not good for mystical experiences. In order for the communicating intelligences to get past Dee's constantly churning mind, they had to force him to use his mind to overcome his mind. They had to beat his brain at its own game.

And what were the favorite games of Dr. John Dee's brain? Ciphers, codes, puzzles, magick squares—these were the arts that touched Dee's sense of wonder. Had he been obsessed with music, the spirits might have communicated to him through melodies or harmonies or rhythm. Had he been a dancer, they would have communicated through elements of body movement; had he been a military man, they would have through the metaphors of battle. But he wasn't a musician or a dancer or a soldier. Dee was, at heart, a cryptographer—perhaps the best in the world—and whether he consciously realized it or not, this was how he could make contact with his subconscious mind. This is how he expected the cosmos to unveil her secrets to him. For Dr. John Dee, the secrets of the universe were codes that could be broken. Divine revelation was a matter of decipherment, and he was willing to work for it. Indeed, by working for it, he would prepare himself to receive it. Give me the raw data, and I will decode the mind of God.

Dee was already looking for that raw data the day Edward Kelley first knocked on his door. He was looking for it in the Book of Soyga.

CHAPTER FIVE

The Book of Soyga

> Dee: Is my book of Soyga of any excellency?
>
> Uriel: That book was revealed to Adam in Paradise by God's good angels …
>
> Dee: …Oh, my great and long desire hath been to be able to read those tables of Soyga.
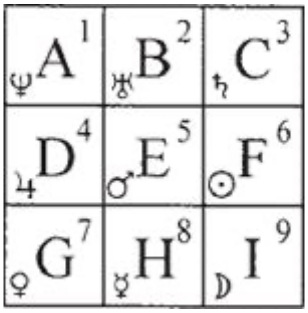
> —JOHN DEE AND THE ARCHANGEL URIEL, MARCH 10, 1582[33]

Even before Dee met Kelley he was immersed in the study of a magical treatise written in Latin called Aldaraia sive Soyga: Tractatus Astrologico magicus or, more simply, the Book of Soyga.[34] We know that Dee was intrigued by the Book of Soyga because his diary records that it was the subject of one of the very first questions he asked of the archangel Uriel during Edward Kelley's inaugural scrying session on March 10, 1582. In later diary entries he laments that he has misplaced his Book of Soyga, and still-later entries indicate that he eventually found it.

The book is an anonymous, late-medieval grimoire of planetary, angelic, and demonic magick that is in many ways not too dissimilar from other magical treatises of the period. However, there are several things that distinguish Soyga—things that obviously made it particularly attractive to Dee. For one thing, a great deal of the text concerns itself with alphanumeric exercises and puzzles; letters with numerical, astrological, and elemental values, which are combined, recombined and reduced to form magick words (spelled forwards and backwards), all of which contain increasingly complex values and magical virtues. As we will see, this magical letter distillation process is characteristic of Enochian magick.

Perhaps most intriguing to Dee were the last eighteen leaves of Soyga. These pages contain thirty-six tables, each comprising a grid of 1,296 squares, arranged in 36 × 36 grids. Each of the tables' 1,296 squares is filled with a Latin letter. Together the tables could form a cube comprising 46,656 squares. Each of the thirty-six tables is identified by an astrological or elemental symbol; the first twenty-four are attributed (in pairs) to signs of the zodiac, the next seven to the planets, the next four to the elements (Fire, Water, Air, and Earth), and one simply to "Magistri."[35],[36]

For our purposes, I impress upon the reader's mind the profound importance of alphanumerics and how much information can be encoded within a grid of a magick table. I will try to demonstrate this with a very simple illustration, shown in figure 1.



♆ A 1	♅ B 2	♄ C 3
♃ D 4	♂ E 5	☉ F 6
♀ G 7	☿ H 8	☽ I 9

This table is made up of nine squares. Each square contains one of nine letters, and these letters can be considered by themselves or in combination with the others to spell magical words. Each individual letter has many traditional meanings attached to it. To keep things simple, I've arbitrarily assigned just two correspondences (numerical and planetary) to each of the letters; these are shown in the corners of each lettered square. Theoretically, the number of correspondences each square can represent is nearly infinite.

For example, in this particular table, c not only represents the letter c but also the number three and all things threeish. What do I mean by threeish? One very big example is all things in the universe that exist in time and have movement, and all things that have a beginning, a middle, and an end. In this example c also represents Saturn and everything Saturnian (from wisdom and restriction to darkness, old age, and lead).

Like DNA, alphanumeric squares carry an unimaginably vast amount of information in a deceptively small package. As a resident of our 3 × 3 table, the c square also carries information drawn from its position relative to the other letters and their correspondences. Can you begin to see how much information is contained in that one little square alone? Imagine, then, the mass of complex data that could be tightly stored in a 36 × 36 × 36 square cube represented by the Book of Soyga.

I've discovered no evidence of a direct connection between the Book of Soyga and any of the magical workings that led ultimately to the reception of Enochian magick. Nevertheless, the fact remains that even before Dee met Kelley, the mechanics of the alphanumeric cipher system, as presented in Soyga, captured Dee's analytical imagination and had become part of the way he expected to receive divine information. Indeed, at every phase of Dee and Kelley's workings, alphanumeric squares and codes would play a major role.

We know Dee held the Book of Soyga in high regard and was particularly preoccupied with learning the secrets of the thirty-six tables. The magical process of the Book of Soyga (shuffling and distilling immense numbers of letters and squares into smaller and smaller bits of concentrated information) would become the modus operandi by which the spirits would ultimately communicate the secrets of Enochian magick to Dee and Kelley. It would be the method by which they received the Holy Table, the Lamen, the Ensigns of Creation, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, the Table of Nalvage, the Elemental Tablets, and, most dramatically, the angelic language and the forty-eight calls. In a way, this process is a metaphor of the mechanics of creation itself. As Carl Sagan[37] said, "If you wish to make an apple pie from scratch, you must first create the universe." In this case, our apple pie is the manifest universe—the world as it presently exists—the world Dee and Kelley wished to understand and magically affect.

This world is the end product of a progression of cosmic events that physicists believe began with an immeasurably dense singularity (containing all the potential information that would eventually become the universe) that burst open and set into motion the phases of creation. The immensely packed assembly of thirty-six 36 × 36 alphanumeric squares found in the Book of Soyga is a crude but appropriate model for such a singularity. The intricate process of combining, shuffling, and distilling information-packed squares magically mimics the astronomical processes by which atoms and elements to stars and planets were formed in the creation cycle from seemingly chaotic units of a potential universe.

The Book of Soyga did not play a direct role in the magical operations of Dee and Kelley, but the patterns and formulae it embodied would remain the methodology of their angelic communications until the end of their association. I believe that the two magicians, by taking part in this incremental process of creation, became personally attuned to the magical universe as it presently exists, and thus prepared themselves to receive and engage in Enochian magick. In the chapters that follow, I will present only the briefest snapshots of the step-by-step process that I believe was the attunement program that prepared Dee and Kelley to receive the Enochian magick system. Hopefully, by your participation in the process, you also will undergo (however vicariously) a similar transformational experience and become fully prepared to actually practice Enochian vision magick.

But first, let us pray.

CHAPTER SIX

Let Us Pray

> No man should ever undertake any great or important undertaking without first invoking the blessing of God.
>
> —Master's admonition, California Free and Accepted Masons
>
> The whole secret may be summarized in these four words: "Inflame thyself in praying."
> —ALEISTER CROWLEY[38]

One of the most fundamental and important magical tools Dee used throughout his life was prayer. So, before we begin to examine magick rings and protective breastplates and holy tables and other such wizardly items, we need to first get something straight about prayer.

It's okay to pray. Even if you think you don't believe in the same God that Dee and Kelley believed in, it's okay to pray. I realize for many twenty-first-century magicians the word prayer carries with it unpleasant memories of childhood church and Sunday school traumas, and bedtime fears that "if I die before I wake" somebody was going to take my soul to God knows where.

In magick, prayer has nothing to do with religion. It does, however, have everything to do with the magician's grasp of facts of life in the magical world in which he or she intends to operate. Part of that reality is the mystical fact that existence itself is an expression of consciousness, and there are levels of consciousness higher and lower than the one we are currently attuned to.

By the simple act of uttering a prayer, our apparently limited consciousness reaches out and makes contact with a higher level of consciousness, and by doing so, we insert ourselves into the divine circuitry of the cosmos. As we do, part of us (a part that we might not be aware of) wakes up, as it were, and recognizes our rightful place in this circuitry.

In my book The Key to Solomon's Key,[39] I illustrate this concept using the legend of King Solomon as my example. In the excerpt below, I discuss prayer in the context of spirit evocation, but the same thoughts hold true to all forms of magick, including Enochian.

> The third chapter of the book of Kings[40] tells us that at the beginning of his reign the Lord appeared to Solomon in a vision by night and said, "Ask that which I > should give you.” Solomon answered:

>
> “Give therefore to thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people and to discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?” And it pleased the Lord because Solomon had asked this thing. And the Lord said to Solomon, “Because you have asked this thing and have not asked for yourself riches, neither have you asked the lives of your enemies nor have you asked for yourself long life, but have asked for yourself wisdom to discern judgment; Behold, I have done according to your words; lo, I have given you a wise and understanding heart, so that there has been none like you before you, neither shall any arise after you like you.”[41]
>
> Before undertaking the task of ruling his people and building the Temple, Solomon doesn't begin by consulting with his inferiors (his ministers, his generals, his architects, his building-supply contractors, or labor leaders). He doesn't immediately enmesh himself in the energy-draining details of micromanaging such a huge and important project. Instead he turns his attention upward to the highest level of the hierarchical scale of consciousness. He makes direct contact with Deity and, instead of behaving like a helpless youngster asking a parent for pocket money, he boldly makes himself available to serve as a conduit through which the Deity's infinite wisdom and understanding can pass.
>
> This profoundly mature and uncomplicated request is instantly granted, as if Deity had no choice but to acquiesce. A unique[42] spiritual hierarchy is created, with Solomon enthroned midway between heaven and hell—poised to work in cosmic harmony with the divine consciousness above him, poised to compel the infernal spirits to do the same.
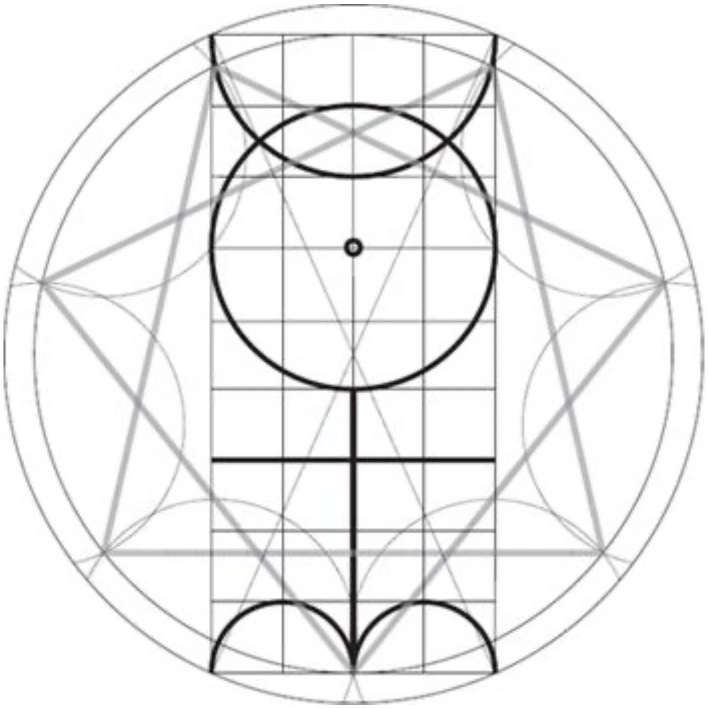
> This is the primary secret of Solomonic magic. As long as the magician remains plugged in to that which is above, he or she is simultaneously plugged into (and must begin to master) that which is below.[43]

Dee's prayers, both in English and Latin, fill page after page of his diaries and magical records. I confess I am neither inclined nor devotionally equipped to follow his exhausting example. I do, however, recognize the efficacy of prayer as an indispensable preliminary to magical operations. And, while I do not personally believe that the biblical Solomon ever existed as such in empirical history, as a magical artist I embrace his myth and happily adopt him as a patron saint of magick.

How appropriate, then, that the first magical tool Dee and Kelley would receive from their angelic contacts was the Ring of Solomon, and that before putting on that ring, the magician must first pray.

BOOK II

De Heptarchia Mystica



CHAPTER SEVEN

The Ring

> Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all Miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrowght by Salomon.
> —THE ARCHANGEL MICHAEL, MARCH 14, 1582

The first system of magick Dee and Kelley received from their angelic contacts was a form of planetary magick referred to as De Heptarchia Mystica. It was delivered mostly in late 1582 and amended somewhat the following year. The details of how it was painstakingly received are recorded in Dee's Quinti Libri Mysteriorum[44] and edited for purposes of practical working in his "De Heptarchia Mystica."[45] Unfortunately, we don't know exactly how, or even if, the magicians actually operated this particular form of magick. What we do know is that besides receiving the names and symbols for forty-nine planetary "good angels" Dee and Kelley were instructed to create a number of magical items—items that were almost entirely ignored by the Golden Dawn and Crowley. These items, I believe, can be extremely important tools for the modern Enochian magician; these are the Ring, the Holy Table, the Ensigns of Creation, the Lamen, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth.

First we need to examine the Ring, for without the Ring the magicians were told they could "do nothing." Unlike most other things they would receive from their angelic contacts, the Ring was delivered in a relatively straightforward manner.

I will not quote long passages from Dee's records, but his description of the circumstances surrounding the reception of the magic Ring are so colorfully dramatic that I cannot resist quoting a brief passage. The date is Wednesday, March 14, 1582. Dee and Kelley were engaged in their fourth action[46] and experiencing a close encounter with the archangels Michael and Uriel. (The following excerpt retains the inconsistent spelling and punctuation of Elizabethan English. The Greek delta, Δ, is Dee, "Mi" the archangel Michael.)

> Δ: Now Michael thrust out his right arme, with the sword: and bad the skryer to loke. Then his sword did seame to cleave in two: and a great fyre, flamed out of it, vehemently. Then he toke a ring out of the flame of his sworde: and gave it, to Uriel: and sayd, thus:
>
> Mi: The strength of God, is unspeakable. Praysed be god for ever and ever.
>
> Δ: Then Uriel did make cursy unto him.

> Mi: After this sort, must thy ring be: Note it.
>
> Δ: Then he rose, or disapeared, out of the chayre, and by and by, cam again, and sayde, as followeth.
>
> Mi: I will reveale thee this ring: which was never revealed since the death of Salomon: with whom I was present. I was present with him in strength, and mercy.
>
> Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all Miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrowght by Salomon: This is it, which I have revealed unto thee. This is it, which Philosophie dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels skarse know. This is it, and blessed be his Name: yea, his Name be blessed for ever.
>
> Then he layd the Ring down uppon the Table: and sayd, Note.
>
> Δ: It shewed to be a Ring of Gold: with a seale graved in it: and had a rownd thing in the myddle of the seale and a thing like an V, throwgh the top of the circle: and an L, in the bottome: and a barr cleane throwgh it: And had these fowre letters in it, P E L E. After that, he threw the ring on the borde, or Table: and it semed to fall throwgh the Table and then he sayde, thus,
>
> Mi: So shall it do, at thy commanndement. Without this, thow shalt do nothing. Blessed be his name, that cumpasseth all things: Wonders are in him, and his Name is WONDERFULL: His Name worketh wonders from generation, to generation.[47]

Solomon was, and remains, the archetypal magician, and his legendary exploits as a master of spirits fill the pages of traditional Jewish, Islamic, and Ethiopian religious literature. In many of the stories, his magical ring played an important role as the source of his power to control demons. I can imagine Dee and Kelley were very impressed to be given the Ring of Solomon by none other than the archangel Michael himself.

Although the ring's design is unique, the word PELE (wonder worker) is found in two books which Dee already had in his library: De Verbo Mirifico by German humanist and Hebrew scholar Johann Reuchlin and Cornelius Agrippa's Occult Philosophy. (Agrippa apparently took the term from Reuchlin.)

Dee was told the Ring should be made of pure gold. If he indeed had one made, it has not survived the centuries. Realistically, few of us today have the skill to fashion or the resources to have a golden ring custom made.[48] Nevertheless, Michael seemed adamant, “Without this, thow shalt do nothing.” And so I've come to the conclusion if I'm to practice this particular art of magick, then before I do anything, I'm going to wear the Ring.

Here is the pattern for a Ring that can be made out of colored paper or poster board. I realize such material is not as impressive or romantic as pure gold. You might even think that a true magick Ring cannot be made from a scrap of paper. You might tell me you'd feel silly wearing a paper ring. If you feel this way, then I hope you won't be offended when I tell you that if you can't make a real magick Ring out of paper, then you'll not be able to make one out of gold. The same goes for the other magical items I am going to discuss in the next few chapters.

Before I practice any aspect of Enochian magick, I recite two short prayers. The first is a prayer John Dee used regularly throughout the years of his magical workings:[49]

> Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart.

The second is a prayer I fashioned from the words the archangel Michael spoke to Dee and Kelley during their March 14, 1582, action:

> Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is > WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

After reciting these prayers and putting on the Ring, I then position myself at the Holy Table and prepare to put on the Lamen.

CHAPTER EIGHT

The Lamen

> Beware of wavering. Blot out suspicion of us, for we are God's creatures that have reigned, do reign, and shall reign forever. All our Mysteries shall be known unto you.
> —THE ANGEL BRALGES, ONE OF THE ANGELIC PRINCES NAMED ON THE LAMEN, NOVEMBER 16, 1582, PRINCE BRALGES, NOVEMBER 16, 1582[50]

The Lamen and the Holy Table are inextricably linked. By wearing the Lamen over the heart, the magician becomes linked to the Holy Table. I cannot say it any plainer than that. But putting on the Lamen and sitting at the Holy Table are empty gestures unless the magician has some idea of what these items represent and how they are connected.

The designs for both the Lamen and the Holy Table were distilled from tables composed of letters of the names of planetary angels of the Heptarchia. Even though the chronology of their reception is a bit tangled, it is probably easiest to discuss the Lamen first.

Traditionally a Lamen is a breastplate that is hung from the neck by a chain or ribbon. The breastplate of the high priest of Israel is the biblical archetype for this most important piece of magical adornment. It was a square plate, a 3 × 4 grid embedded with twelve precious stones representing, among other twelveish concepts, the tribes of Israel and the signs of the zodiac. The Lamen that the angels delivered to Dee and Kelley contained no precious stones but displayed eighty-four angelic letters arranged in a most curious and exacting manner.

Two versions of the Lamen were received by Dee and Kelley. The first, delivered in 1582, was a rather odd assortment of lines, squiggles, and letters reminiscent of Solomonic or Goetic sigils. This Lamen, they were told, was to be made in gold and worn as a protective device. After receiving it, the magicians spent the rest of the year and part of 1583 receiving material relating to the forty-nine planetary good angels of the Heptarchia (see figure 5).

The seven-letter names of these angels were received (much to Dee's cryptographic delight, I'm sure) by the complex manipulation and distillation of letters from a cross-shaped table composed of seven 7 × 7 tables (343 squares in all, each containing a number and a letter). This process was dictated by the archangel Michael during a grueling three-hour session. Just to give you an idea of the shape and size of this table, I've included a rough image without the letters and numbers.

The magicians were then instructed how to organize and arrange these 343 letters to reveal the hierarchy of planetary good angels. Each of the seven planetary spheres was assigned a king, a prince, and five ministers. Figure 5 shows how the 343 letters form the names of the forty-nine good angels and how they are arranged according to planet (starting at the top of the wheel and working counterclockwise: Venus, Luna, Saturn, Mercury, Jupiter, Mars, Sol). Note also that only the names of the kings and princes are in all capital letters.

It is obvious from the surviving material that some technique of practical magic was intended to call forth the heptarchic kings, princes, and ministers. Illustrations of flat wooden disks containing the names of the kings and other unexplained characters tantalize us with glimpses of an organized magical system. But the sad fact remains that important source material that could shed light on this has not survived the centuries.

However, just as amber encapsulates and preserves the essence of a prehistoric insect (right down to the DNA), so too the Lamen and the Holy Table capture the distilled essence of the heptarchic hierarchy and system.

After receiving the names, sigils, and hierarchical structures of the forty-nine good angels, the magicians were informed that the first Lamen they received during their actions the previous year was a false one, delivered to them by an “illuding spirit.” They were given instructions how to create a new one, which was to be worn not for protection per se, but in order to “dignify” the magicians as worthy practitioners of this form of magick.

I'm going to try to illustrate (as painlessly as possible) how both the Lamen and the Holy Table were created and why I believe their use in Enochian magick is important. Now, the reader might be tempted to skim over the following material, invoking my slogan, “Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received.” But I beg you to resist that temptation. By following through (even halfheartedly) the methods by which these magical tools were constructed, you will slip, however subtly, into the divine creative stream that produced them. You will become part of the same process that programmed and prepared Dee and Kelley.

The key to the construction of the Lamen was a 12 × 7 table containing the letters of the names (minus the initial b[51]) of the seven planetary heptarchic kings and their princes (see figure 6).

As you can see, the names of the kings are found on the right half of the table, the names of the princes on the left half. The names in this table are read from right to left. You will immediately notice that the kings of one planet are not matched on the same line as the prince of the same planet (e.g., the sun ☉ king, Bobogel, is set on the same line with the Venus ♀ prince, Bornogo, instead of on the line of the sun ☉ prince, Befafes).[52] This odd juxtaposition of planetary king and prince puts a certain strain on the sensitivities of those of us who like the order of our universe nice and symmetrical. However, this is the arrangement the angels insisted upon for the 12 × 7 table from which the Lamen was to be formed. As we will soon see in the following chapter, they will rectify the imbalance in the 12 × 7 table in order to create the Holy Table. But first let's continue to see how the Lamen is built.

The basic form of the Lamen is a table of twenty-four squares (arranged from top to bottom: 2—4—6—6—4—2) enclosed within diamond square, enclosed by a square, enclosed by a larger square.

The letters of the 12 × 7 table were applied to the Lamen by means of an exercise that first divided the table into three sections, described as flesh, heart, and skin. The letters were then transferred to the blank Lamen in three steps.

Step One: The letters of the flesh were added to the perimeter of the Lamen in their same relative positions to the 12 × 7 table.

Dee was told that the Latin letters of the finished Lamen should be translated into the angelic script. (I'll discuss the angelic alphabet a bit later.) Figure 15 shows the completed Lamen with angelic letters.

As with the Ring, gold was the material suggested for the Lamen, but it can be made from paper or poster board. The Lamen I first used was printed on both sides (Latin letters on one side, angelic script on the other) and laminated in plastic. In the area just above the top center I punched a hole through which I threaded a black ribbon.

CHAPTER NINE

The Holy Table

> Every one of those sides must have 21 Characters: But first, at every corner make a great B.
> —THE ANGEL IL, APRIL 28, 1583[54]

Magick tables were nothing new to Renaissance magicians. Unlike the protective circle and triangle spirit-trap apparatus used by Solomonic magicians, a properly consecrated magick table in a room transforms the entire chamber into holy ground. The table itself becomes the Holy of Holies, the place whereupon earth and heaven touch. Drawings of the period show the magician on his knees, his arms stretched in supplication, before a magick table sheltered by a conical tent.

Dee was already using a table of practice before Edward Kelley entered the picture, but afterwards, as the elements of the heptarchic magick developed, it became clear that the communicating spirits wanted Dee to customize his table in a most specific manner. The angels wanted the Holy Table to be an "instrument of conciliation," made of "sweet wood,"[55] and built two cubits square and two cubits high.[56] The table was to stand upon a carpet of red silk that was large enough to accommodate the scryer's chair. Once the Sigillum Dei Aemeth and the seven Ensigns of Creation were in position, the Holy Table was covered by a red silk cloth with gold tassels that hung from the corners. The scrying stone or black mirror was then placed upon the covered Sigillum.

The public's first view of the Holy Table (sometimes referred to as the Table of Covenant or Table of Practice) was published in 1659 by Meric Casaubon in his A True & Faithful Relation ….[57] It was Casaubon's image that was reproduced in 1912 in Aleister Crowley's magazine The Equinox[58] and numerous books since then.

It may come as a surprise to many (and be highly amusing to others) that Casaubon's impressively printed image of the Holy Table is perhaps the greatest flaw in his liberally flawed and ill-titled A True & Faithful Relation. One look at the description and drawing in Dee's Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Appendix[59] reveals the eighty-four letters that form the border of the Holy Table and the twelve letters that fill the 3 × 4 center square of Casaubon's image are printed in backward order. Figures 16 and 19 illustrate the correct arrangement of the letters on the Holy Table.

The Holy Table and the Lamen are inextricably linked. By wearing the Lamen, the magician is linked, or conciliated, to the Holy Table. The object that forms this magical link and serves as the common denominator between the Holy Table and Lamen is the same 12 × 7 table that was used to construct the Lamen—the same table that bore the names of the seven planetary kings and the seven planetary princes of the heptarchic hierarchy.

Did I say the same 12 × 7 table? That's not entirely accurate.

Recall that when we were discussing the 12 × 7 table in the previous chapter, something appeared out of whack. The names of the planetary kings did not share the same lines as their planetary counterpart prince (e.g., the sun ☉ king, Bobogel, is set on the same line with the Venus ♀ prince, Bornogo, instead of his sun ☉ prince, Befafes). This planetary mismatch in the 12 × 7 table's construction did not appear to bother the angels, and indeed the "flaw" seemed to be a vital characteristic of the Lamen.

As you can see in Figure 17, the version of the 12 × 7 table that is the key to the Holy Table "corrects" this imbalance by rearranging the names of the planetary kings to match those of the princes of the same planet. Furthermore, the table is reversed, so that the kings now occupy the left side of the table and princes the right, and the direction in which the names are read is reversed to read from left to right.

In my mind, the differences between the two 12 × 7 tables demonstrate a fundamental fact of life—the fact that even though human beings are an integral part of the hierarchy of spiritual beings, we currently find ourselves “on earth,” trapped in a tomb of matter and to all appearances separated from the greater realities of the spiritual “heavens.”

Qabalists tell us that we are created in the image of Deity—that we are, in the truest sense, a little reflection (a microcosm) of the great intelligence and creative force that creates, sustains, and destroys all things in the universe (the macrocosm). As Hermes Trismegistus said, “As above, so below.”

That's all fine and good, and I go about my magical business as if it were true. But honestly, even though I'm composed of the same material that makes up the sun and moon and stars and angels and archangels and the supreme Deity, even though I am striving for selfawareness and do my best to be a divinely creative individual, still I don't feel much like the macrocosmic Deity. Compared to the macrocosm, my microcosm is way out of whack. My life is one of stress and imbalance. From where I stand, there is a very big break between Deity's above and Lon Milo DuQuette's below. I'm like the 12 × 7 table from which the Lamen is created: I've got all the condensed components of a perfectly tuned universe in me, but they are out of sync just enough to keep me from actually being the perfect reflection of the big “way things are.”

I can really identify with the way the Lamen is constructed. Like it, my hierarchy of planets is mismatched and unbalanced. (Take one look at my astrological chart if you don't believe it!) Like the curious inconsistencies that characterize how the individual letters are transferred from the 12 × 7 table to the Lamen, my individual components are a litany of curious inconsistencies.

The 12 × 7 table that makes the Holy Table, on the other hand, sets this all straight. It is like the macrocosm showing the microcosm how it's done. As I sit before the Holy Table with the Lamen over my heart, I can almost feel the Holy Table's order and perfection pulling magnetically at my heart through the Lamen, connecting me by an almost tangible electric current to the Holy of Holies, pulling my heart and my attention toward the sacred spot in my living-room temple where heaven touches earth. The Holy Table is indeed an instrument of conciliation, an instrument of reunion.[60]

The letters of the 12 × 7 table are transferred to the Holy Table in the following manner. First, to make things a little easier to see let's turn the 12 × 7 table on its end.

The border of the Holy Table is first segmented into twenty-one cells per side. Per angelic instructions, the sacred letter B is placed in the four corners, and then the letters of the 12 × 7 table are inserted in the remaining cells as indicated by the four sets of arrows on figure 18. The 3 × 4square in the center of the Holy Table is extracted from the central heart of the 12 × 7 table, as highlighted in figure 18.

The arrows around the edges of figure 19 (see page 54) show that the letters are arranged to generate a counterclockwise whirl. In the Ritual of Preparation of chapter one, I chant seven rounds of the perimeter letters in this order using the angelic pronunciation. I also do the same for the twelve letters of the center square. By doing so, I effectively activate the Holy Table and the objects that sit upon it (including the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, the Ensigns of Creation, and the skrying mirror). The chant affects a powerful shift in consciousness unlike anything I have experienced before in magical practice.

As the manifest universe is the evolving end product of the dynamic forces that created it, so too the Holy Table manifests on earth as the perfect miniature working model of the heavenly matrix. It is a magical machine with many moving parts, all in perpetual motion.

Picture in your artist/magician's mind how, like the stars in the rotating arms of a spiral galaxy, the eighty-four angelic letters that form the border of the Holy Table circumscribe the other objects on the table-top with an eternal counterclockwise movement around the outside of the table's hexagram (symbol of the macrocosm).

Within, the twelve angelic letters in the 3 × 4 square in the center of the Holy Table's hexagram churn with the dynamics of the up-down/right-left movement suggested by its four rows of three letters networked with its three columns of four letters.

The Lamen is born of the same alphanumeric codes as the Holy Table, but its construction is flawed by a slight imbalance. So too the magician, in his or her present state, is the seemingly flawed *micro*cosmic reflection of Deity. By wearing the Lamen, the imperfect magician is linked to the perfection of the Holy Table, and while in this exalted state may become privy to the secrets of the *macro*cosmic universe.

The design of Dee's Sigillum Dei Aemeth ("the seal of God's truth") is perhaps the most recognizable image of Enochian magick. It is a powerful magical device, alive with the angelic forces of an ordered universe in which "Seven, rest in Seven: and the Seven, live by Seven: The Seven, govern the Seven: And by Seven all Government is."

Unlike the hierarchies of the Lamen and the Holy Table, the Sigillum's hierarchy of angels was not condensed, distilled, or otherwise generated from the seven 12 × 7 tables from which the names of the forty-nine good angels were drawn. Nevertheless, the Sigillum is the centerpiece of heptarchic magick and is the object through which all heptarchic energy (if we dare call it that) is focused.

The Sigillum itself was a disk nine inches in diameter and approximately an inch and a half thick. It was made of pure beeswax and placed in the center of the Holy Table. The scrying crystal or black mirror was placed upon it. Four smaller wax versions were placed beneath small boxes, upon which stood the four legs of the Holy Table.

Dee was first told to simply copy the design from a book he already had in his library. But Dee had at least two volumes[62] that contained designs for sigilla. He couldn't make up his mind which one to use, so he asked for further clarification. The angel then gave instructions how to construct an entirely new sigillum based on the format of the others but adding an array of heavenly personages: seven god names enclosing seven sets of angelic names.

It is clear to me that the construction of the Sigillum was a vital step in Dee and Kelley's preparation program and that construction can serve that same important purpose to the modern magician as well. I'm going to walk you through the steps of how it is constructed, because I hope readers who are serious about actually doing magick, rather than merely studying it, will want to build their own.

I've provided you with a blank sigillum (figure 21), and I encourage you to make multiple photocopies of it. Enlarge it, if you wish, to nine inches in diameter. Then follow the step-by-step instructions. As you do, you will not only be building this magical device on paper, but you also will be installing it inside yourself. Constructing your own Sigillum Dei Aemeth is the fastest and easiest way I know to meet and connect with the angelic forces resident in the design and make them part of you. It may take you several tries to get it all right, but I'm confident when you have completed your Sigillum you will think it worth the effort.

Building the Sigillum

Step One: The Seven God Names

The seven god names were drawn from numbers and letters that appear in the forty cells that make up the perimeter of the Sigillum. The magicians were told to divide the outer perimeter of a blank ring into four sections. Then they were to divide each of the four sections into ten (making forty cells in all). Kelley then had a dramatic and colorful vision, facilitated by the archangel Michael, with the help of Uriel and the angel Semiael. In this vision, forty angels stepped forth, one at a time, and parted their garments to reveal one of three things:

1. a number positioned above a letter,
2. a letter positioned above a number, or
3. a single letter.

Some of the letters were capitalized, but most were lowercase. As they revealed their letters and numbers, each of the forty angels also uttered a different pious declaration in Latin, such as, “O God, God, our God, blessed are you, now and forever” or “And you are true in your works.” Then the angel disappeared or was consumed in flashes of fire or other such dramatics. The magicians were then left with a string of numbers and letters, which I've arranged in a table (see figure 22).

←	4	9	7	t	22		6	22	20	14	6		18	26	l		l	7	13	H		y	t	o	e	10	11	15	8	r		6	o	5	h	o		a	a	6

Figure 22: Outer perimeter bar code (the lowercase letter l is italicized so as to not be confused with uppercase I*)*

First make sure your blank Sigillum is oriented so that the pentagram in the center is pointing toward the top of the page. Then refer to figure 23 and locate the topmost cell of the Sigillum's outer perimeter— the cell that contains the number 4 over the capital letter T. Fill in that cell with a 4 over a T. Then, referring to the table (figure 22) and moving clockwise, fill in the remaining thirty-nine cells of the outer perimeter of your blank Sigillum as you see them in figure 23.

From the letters and numbers of the perimeter the seven god names and their sigils are drawn. The starting points for the god names are the cells that contain capital letters. These are also identified in figure 22 with asterisks beneath them.

From those starting points, note the number inside the cell and count your way to find the next letter in the god name. You count clockwise when the number in the cell is positioned above the letter, and you count counterclockwise when the letter is positioned above the number. Keep counting until you reach a cell that contains a letter but no number. That will be the last letter of that particular god name. It's almost like turning the dial of a combination lock, and, indeed, that's exactly what you're doing.

Confused? Don't be. It's much easier to actually do it than describe it. Just keep figure 23 in front of you as you follow the directions that follow.

Starting at the cell with 9/G in it (near the top of the circle), count nine cells clockwise (because the number is above) to 6/a. From there, count six cells clockwise to l/8. Count eight cells counterclockwise (because the letter is above) to 20/a. Count twenty cells clockwise to 8/a. Count eight cells clockwise to the single letter s. Because there is no number assigned to the s cell, we know that s is the final letter to this god name.

When all the counting is done, we have spelled the god name Galaas. The archangel Michael would later advise Dee and Kelley to alter the spelling (an archangel's prerogative) to Galas.

Michael assigned Galas a characteristic sigil and a number (see figure 24). He also instructed that the sigil and number of Galas should be placed on the Sigillum, in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately the eleven o'clock position (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Galas and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Saturn.

Starting with 7/G (near the bottom of the circle), count seven cells clockwise to e/21. Count twenty-one cells counterclockwise to t/9. Count nine cells counterclockwise to h/14. Count fourteen cells counterclockwise to the unnumbered letters og to finish the god name Gethog.

Michael assigned Gethog the sigil and number shown in figure 25 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately nine o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Gethog and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Jupiter.

Starting with 4/T (near the top of the circle), count four cells clock-wise to 22/h. Count twenty-two cells clockwise (because the number 22 is on top) to 11/A. Count eleven cells clockwise to a/5. Count five cells counterclockwise to o/10. Count ten cells counterclockwise to t/11. Count eleven cells counterclockwise to the cell that contains the single letter h to finish the god name Th Aaoth.

Again using his archangel's prerogative, Michael later advised Dee to slightly alter the spelling to Thaoth. He also assigned Thaoth the sigil and number shown in figure 26 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately seven o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Thaoth and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Mars.

Starting with H/12 (near the bottom of the circle), count twelve cells counterclockwise to 22/o. Count twenty-two cells clockwise to r/16. Count sixteen cells counterclockwise to 26/l. Count twenty-six cells clockwise to 6/ω.[63] Count six cells clockwise to single letter n, producing the god name Horlωn.

Michael assigned Horlωn the sigil and number shown in figure 27 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the space between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at six o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Horlωn and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Sol.

Innon

Starting with 15/I (near the left-hand side of the circle), count fifteen cells clockwise to 7/n. Count seven cells clockwise to 14/n. Count fourteen cells clockwise to o/8. Count eight cells counterclockwise to the single letter n, producing the name Innon.

Michael assigned Innon the sigil and number shown in figure 28 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately four o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Innon and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Venus.

With Aaoth, you have your choice of either (1) starting at 11/A (near the left-hand side of the circle) and counting eleven cells clockwise to a/5 or (2) starting with 6/A (near the left-hand side of the circle) and counting six cells clockwise to a/5.

In either case, once you get to a/5, count five cells counterclockwise to o/10. Count ten cells counterclockwise to t/11. Count eleven cells counterclockwise to finish at h, producing the god name Aaoth.

Michael assigned Aaoth the sigil and number shown in figure 29 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the space between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately two o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Aaoth and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Mercury.

Starting at 5/G (near the left-hand side of the circle), count five cells clockwise to a/24. Count twenty-four cells counterclockwise to l/30. Count thirty cells counterclockwise to e/21. Count twenty-one cells counterclockwise to t/9. Count nine cells counterclockwise to h/14. Count fourteen cells counterclockwise to the single letters og, producing the name Galethog.

Michael assigned Galethog the sigil shown in figure 30 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately one o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Galethog and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Luna.

These seven god names—Galas, Gethog, Thaoth, Horlωn, Innon, Aaoth, and Galethog—are distilled into one supreme name. Strangely enough, the great name is also spelled Galethog. The code that reveals this distillation can be found on those little numbers that appear beside six of the sigils of the god names. Let's take a look at the supreme god name as it appears with the sigils.

Obviously, the sigils of the divine names contain the stylized letters G, a, l, xe, t, and og. The little numbers beside the letters point out seven landmarks among the forty cells: 5/G, a/24, l/30, e/21, t/9. Og has no number attached to it, confirming that it is the end of the supreme god name.

Step Two: The Seven God Names of the Outer Heptagon and of the Planetary Archangels

A heptagon (a seven-sided figure) rests just inside the perimeter of the Sigillum. Each of the seven bars that compose the heptagon is divided into seven cells and is filled with the names of the next order of angels in the hierarchy of the Sigillum. These seven names were drawn from a 7 × 7 (sevenfold) table delivered to Dee and Kelley in a series of brief and colorful visions (see figure 33).

The names are read horizontally and are inserted in the bars of the outer heptagon as shown in figure 34.

When the table is read vertically, however, the names of the seven classic planetary archangels appear:

Zaphkiel	(Saturn)
Cumael	(Mars)
Haniel	(Venus)
Gabriel	(Luna)
Zadkiel	(Jupiter)
Raphael	(Sol)
Michael	(Mercury)

These archangels were assigned to these planets many years before Dee and Kelley received them and could have been found in any number of books in Dee's library. However, Dee and Kelley insisted that the table was given to them before they noticed these names were generated by the table. Whether we choose to believe their assertion or not, the fact remains that these particular angels are not unique to the Enochian system.

In order to read each archangel's name using the seven god names on the bars of the heptagon, we are obliged to project the letters in progressive layers rising from the surface of the Sigillum itself. I wish I could graphically illustrate this using the modern magick of animation, but you can demonstrate this for yourself. Let's turn to the first table in figure 35 and use the name of the planetary archangel of Saturn, Zaphkiel, as our example.

Start with the capital Z found in the first cell of the name ZllRHia, then move to the first cell of the name aZCaacb (to pick up the a), then move to the first cell of the name paupnhr (to pick up the p), then move to the first cell of hdmhIaI (to pick up the h), then move to the first cell of Kkaaeee to pick up the K, then move to the first cell of eellMG (to pick up the e). Finally, move to the second cell of the ZllRHia bar of the heptagon and pick up the final l to spell Zaphkiel.

I hope you can visualize what happens every time you move to another bar of the heptagon to pick up a letter in the archangel's name. As you move, you are literally shifting the dimensional structure of the Sigillum up another level—in the case of Zaphkiel, eight levels in all (see figure 36). (Picture the multilevel chess game played by characters on Star Trek.)

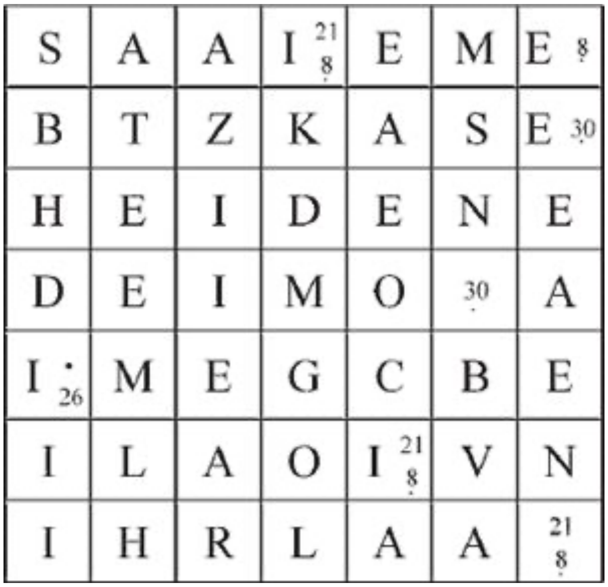
Compound this with the fact that Zaphkiel's name is braided together in these same layers with the names of the six other archangels' names. Viewed this way, the Sigillum is no longer a flat image placed on the flat surface of the Holy Table. It is a multidimensional space hovering over the Holy Table—a magical basket formed of the netting of the entwined letters of the names of the seven planetary archangels. It is within this invisible basket that the scrying stone or black mirror is placed during the magical operation. Is it any wonder visions appear in such an environment?

But we're far from through with the wonders of the Sigillum. Fill the cells of your personal Sigillum's outer heptagon, and then let's move inward another step.

Step Three: The Seven Names of the Planetary Angels Beneath the Bars of the Outer Heptagon

Just inside the bars of the outer heptagon are seven more divine names. These names are drawn from a second 7 × 7 (sevenfold) table given to Dee and Kelley, letter by letter, in vision. These names are read horizontally and placed beneath the bars of the outer heptagon.



S	A	A	I 21 8	E	M	E 8

I	L	A	O	I 21 8	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	21 8

You will immediately notice some of the squares in this table contain tiny numbers (21 over 8, 8, 26, 30, and so on) and variously placed dots. These are added to indicate the addition of the letter l or letters el or al (angelic suffixes) to the letter in the square, the better to spell out the names of the various angels this table will produce.

These names of these seven great angels are added to the Sigilum as shown in figure 38.

Step Four: The Daughters of the Light

Five more sets of planetary angels are drawn from the second sevenfold table. The first set was revealed in vision by seven young women (called "Daughters of Light" or "Women") clad in green silk. Each bore a little blue tablet on her forehead that identified her by name: El, Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn, and Stimcul.

The names of the Daughters of Light are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the upper right section of the table in a diagonal, downward direction.

Although the angels were not identified with planets in the original material, the manner in which the vision proceeded to reveal these names suggests these seven angels carry the following planetary assignments:

E(l)	Saturn
Ese	Mars
Akele	Venus
Stimcul	Luna
Me	Jupiter
Iana	Sol
Azdobn	Mercury

The names of the Daughters of Light are placed on the Sigillum in clockwise order in the points created by the interlocking lines of the heptagram (see figure 40).

Step Five: The Sons of the Light

Next came seven young men (called the "Sons of the Light" or "Men") dressed in white, each carrying a metal ball: the first ball was gold, the second silver, the third copper, the fourth tin, the fifth iron, the sixth quicksilver, and the seventh lead. Each had a tablet of gold on his breast that identified him by name: I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, and Stimcul.

The names of the Sons of Light are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the lower left section of the table in a diagonal, downward direction.

Ih	Jupiter
Dmal	Sol
Beigia	Mercury

Next came seven "little wenches" ("Daughters of Daughters") dressed in white, having tablets, which appeared to be white ivory, on their bosoms, identifying them as S, Ab, Ath, Izad, Ekiei, Madimi, and Esemeli.

The names of the Daughters of Daughters are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the upper left section of the table in a diagonal, downward direction.

Step Eight: The Planetary Angels of the Pentagram

Finally, Dee and Kelley were instructed in a relatively straightforward manner how to arrange the names of seven planetary angels—Sabathiel (Saturn), Zedekiel (Jupiter), Madimiel (Mars), Semeliel (Sol), Nogahel (Venus), Corabiel (Mercury), and Lavanael (Luna)—around a pentagram at the very center of the Sigillum. These seven names are also drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading it in a zigzag manner, illustrated in figure 47.

Because the original Dee and Kelley material does not confirm the planetary attributions to all the various names on the Sigillum, I will not presume to do so either. I have, however, created a chart (see figure 49) that I currently use to help me in my meditations on the subject. I offer it along with the key to reading the names of planetary archangels from the first sevenfold table.

And now your Sigillum is nearly complete. The only thing left to add is the design on the back. It is a very simple image of a cross dominating a small circle, around which are the letters of the divine word AGLA (an acronym for the Hebrew phrase Ateh Gibor Le-olam Adonai, "the Lord is mighty forever.")

Years ago, on a Christmas morning, I melted the stubs of scores of candles into a round Christmas cookie tin.[64] After the wax cooled and hardened, I removed the wax disk from the tin and set to work carving my own Sigillum. Other magicians I know have sealed their drawings of the Sigillum upon wooden disks that they purchased for pennies at a crafts store, or glued the image to foam board. Whatever the medium, I think the presence of the Sigillum is an important factor in creating the magical environment conducive to Enochian vision magick.

There is so much more the angels told Dee and Kelley about the Sigillum, including suggestions for how every letter in each of the names contains a set of angels, and on and on by sevens by sevens. I encourage you to continue your exploration of the Sigillum's mysteries. But now we must move on to the seven Ensigns of Creation, where I promise you a much shorter journey.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The Ensigns of Creation

> Of these seven tables, characters, or scotcheons. Consider the words spoken in the fifth book Anno 1583, April 2nd. How they are proper to every King and prince in their order. They are Instruments of Conciliation.
> —JOHN DEE, FOOTNOTE TO Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Liber Tertius

The Ensigns of Creation are seven planetary talismans designed to be positioned on the Holy Table in a circle surrounding the Sigillum Dei Aemeth or laid out in a line along the edge of the table nearest the scryer. They were to be made of purified tin or else painted directly upon the Holy Table. Like the Lamen and the Holy Table, they are "Instruments of Conciliation" connected to the Heptarchia planetary kings and princes in a manner that, I must confess, is not altogether clear to me.

Five of them are square tables containing squares filled with numbers, letters, crosses, and lines. Two ensigns are a circle surrounded by a square. The letter B (Pa in the angelic language) is by far the most used letter in the ensigns.

The ensigns originally displayed Latin letters. The communicating angel would later insist that the Latin letters be replaced with the corresponding characters of the angelic script (see chapter fourteen). Dee was reluctant to do this and even asked the angel if he really had to. The angel said he must. We don't know if he ever did.

It is clear that the ensigns were to be utilized ritualistically, such as being held in the magician's hand during prayers or invocations. But information on exactly how things were to be done is incomplete, and there are no records whatsoever of Dee and Kelley actually performing rituals of heptarchic magick.

However, the ensigns remain part of the Holy Table ensemble, and their subsequent connection to the table and the magician's own Lamen make them, in my opinion, an integral component of the hierarchical current that charges the holy ground of the Enochian magick temple.

Figures 53 and 54 show the ensigns lettered in the angelic script. To my knowledge, this is the first time the ensigns have appeared in print in their correct form.[65] As with the Ring, Holy Table, Lamen, and Sigillum, the ensigns can be reproduced in paper board or whatever material is at the magician's disposal.

Figure 55 shows the positions in which the ensigns are placed on the Holy Table around the Sigillum. Note they are positioned near the points of the Sigillum's heptagram.

The entire assembly is one big magical machine—the Sigillum resting like a sevenfold, multidimensional dynamo in the center of the Holy Table's swirling and churning angels and the circling Ensigns of Creation. The scrying stone or black mirror is placed upon the Sigillum at the very heart of this magnificent instrument like the monitor screen of a magical computer connected to the ultimate worldwide-web.

We have made only the tiniest scratch on the surface of Dee and Kelley's material of this period. There is much more information concerning De Heptarchia Mystica available to the serious student, and I encourage the reader who feels drawn to this system to make the effort. I know it is only a matter of time before some bright magician fine-tunes, perfects, and transforms the material into a workable magical system.

The focus of this book, however, is Enochian vision magick, and we must now move on to the second phase of Dee and Kelley's magical operations. Through our understanding of the Ring, the Lamen, the Holy Table, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and the Ensigns of Creation and of their construction, we have prepared ourselves to meet with angels on the holy ground of our temple.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Do I Need All This Stuff?

> Never since the beginning of the world was this secret delivered, nor this holy mystery set open, before the weaklings of this world.
> —THE ANGEL IL, APRIL 29, 1583

The question I'm sure many of you are asking at this point is, "Do I need all this stuff?"

During the classes that I conducted in our home in 2005 and 2006 (with experienced magicians) and subsequent day-long workshops I've conducted around the country with people having little or no prior magical experience) it has become abundantly clear to me that the magical objects and "furniture" Dee and Kelley received during the Heptarchia periods (the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamen, the Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth) can and should be formally employed in order to create the specific environment of consciousness conducive to the practice of angelic vision magick.

Furthermore, it has been my observation that regular and repeated activation of this magical "temple" by means of the little ritual outlined in chapter one (and laid out more fully in appendix I) can attune the magician to this uniquely ordered universe and serve to progressively strengthen and enhance his or her visionary capabilities.

Most exciting for me was the discovery that once the magician is prepared and the temple activated the angelic forces (especially the good angels resident in the Holy Table, Lamen, Ensigns of Creation, and the planetary angels resident in the Sigillum) can be individually called forth or visited by means of classic evocation techniques or even informal extemporaneous prayers and conjurations. In other words, I believe that even if he or she never went on to practice Enochian magick per se, a resourceful magician, willing to experiment, and armed with a proper understanding of the tools and formulae of the Heptarchic periods would be already prepared to engage in angelic vision magick of a high order.

This is new territory for all of us, but it holds much promise, for it entails the possibility of contacting the same angelic forces that engaged Dee and Kelley throughout most of their day-to-day actions. Obviously, dealing with these angelic forces offers an alluring challenge for today's more intrepid magicians who, when frustrated by gaps and perplexities in the original material, will not be afraid to go straight to the communicating angels for guidance and clarification on how all this should operate. Indeed, I expect to see in the years to come exciting and viable magical systems develop as the result of the magical efforts of gifted practitioners who dare to make such angelic contact.

But do you need all this stuff?

My answer is this: In order to do this particular variety of magick you need all this stuff inside you. That's where the real magick takes place. But until such time as you have internalized all this (even in the most cursory and general manner) it is necessary to have some outward, visible, material representation of the magical concepts and forces you are dealing with.

I suggest, if you're serious about engaging in this magical art form, then you should, at the very least, provide yourself with a Ring, a Holy Table, a Lamen, a Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and the seven Ensigns of Creation. Make them out of paper if you have to. Copy them straight out of this book if you have to. But have them. Make them real to you. Consecrate them by using them. Use them to create your Enochian magick temple.

The sense of art for some magicians is stimulated by replicating as much as humanly possible the tools and procedures as outlined in ancient texts. By doing so, they achieve a level of empowerment they believe is necessary to execute the work. Personally, my sense of art is quite happy with paper rings and photocopied Holy Tables. However, I have over the years been blessed with many talented colleagues who have generously helped me equip my temple so I might better demonstrate these things to others.

Here is as good a place as any for me to pause and describe what I believe the source material suggests would transform a clean uncluttered room into the holy ground of an Enochian magick temple.

The Temple

Upon the floor in the center of the room is a square carpet of red silk cloth large enough to accommodate the Holy Table and the chair of the scryer.

Upon the silken carpet are placed four miniatures of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, made of wax. They are covered and protected from the table legs by shallow cylindrical boxes.

Upon the box-covered sigilli rest the four legs of the Holy Table.

The Holy Table is made of sweet wood (laurel).

Upon the Holy Table, arranged as we've discussed, are the seven Ensigns of Creation (lettered in the angelic script) and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, made of purified beeswax, nine inches in diameter and an inch and a half thick.

The Holy Table and all the objects upon it are covered by a red silk cloth with gold tassels that dangle from the corners. This cloth should match in material and color that of the red silk carpet.

Upon the covered Sigillum the scrying stone (a crystal ball) or black mirror is placed.

The scryer's chair is placed on the carpet near the table. His or her feet should touch the carpet.

The Ring and Lamen should be near. The magician should ceremonially put them on at the beginning of each session and remove them at the conclusion.

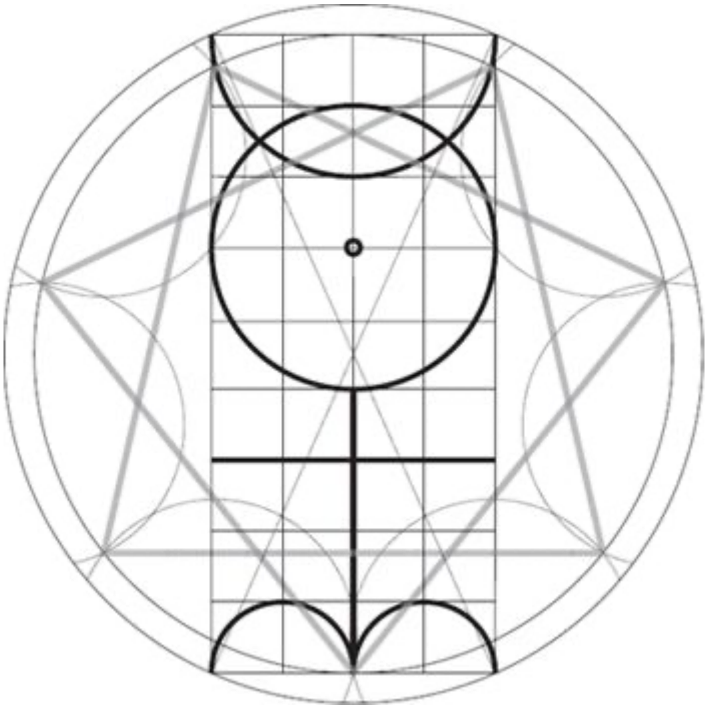
Renaissance magicians often wore crowns and white linen robes, and on one occasion in preparation for a specific working, Dee and Kelley were instructed to wear white linen robes. In an operation that took place on July 13, 1584 (at the very end of the Enochian communications), the archangel Gabriel told the magicians:

> See that your garments be clean. Herein be not rash: Nor over hasty; For those that are hasty and rash, and are loathsomely appareled, my knock long before they enter.[66]

In practical operations conducted by my Monday night class and my Enochian magick workshops, everyone is shoeless and wears comfortable street clothes. In private sessions, such as the one I described in chapter one, I put on a simple black robe. Not only does it carry with it a certain personal magical virtue, but its color does not distract from the images reflected in the black mirror as I scry.

BOOK III

Liber Loagaeth and the Angelic Alphabet



CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Liber Loagaeth

> Every element (of the book) hath 49 manner of understandings. Therein is comprehended so many languages. They are all spoken at once, and severally, by themselves, by distinction many be spoken. Until thou come to the City, thou canst not behold the beauty thereof.
> —THE ANGEL ME TO JOHN DEE, EASTER DAY, 1583[67]

The second phase of Dee and Kelley's magical operations remains, for the most part, a tantalizing mystery to modern students. Covering most of 1582 and 1583, it is a period characterized by considerable tension between the two magicians, but one that also produced a large body of work in the form of a book referred to at various times as Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus, the Book of Enoch, and Liber Loagaeth.[68] While in recent years Enochian scholars have courageously set out to give us a closer examination of this information, it unfortunately has not been enough to allow modern practitioners to develop anything near a workable system from this material.

One of the reasons more attention isn't paid to this period is the nature of the material itself and the nearly complete lack of direction concerning how it is to be applied. Also, the focus of the communications of this period is driven by Dee's very personal fixation on discovering lost books of the Bible, the Apocrypha, and in particular the Book of Enoch, which is mentioned in several places in the Bible. The resulting character of Liber Loagaeth is rich in apocalyptic imagery and prophetic sounding rhetoric. This has been seized upon in recent years by commentators who would project a patently sectarian interpretation upon the material, even going so far as to suggest sinister (perhaps even Satanic or Lovecraftian) motives behind the “angelic” communications.

We are all, of course, free to our own religious convictions and spiritual worldviews. After all, they are part of the magical artist's pallet of tools. I think it wise, however, to keep in mind that when we study the Dee and Kelley material, we are not only eavesdropping on questions framed in the minds of two sixteenth-century Englishmen and put in the context of biblical literature, but we are also hearing the answers to those questions given in such a manner as these men could understand—that is, framed within the same cultural and Biblical context. I'm sure if Dee had been a Chinese alchemist or an African shaman in these same circumstances, the angels would have communicated the same universal answers unencumbered by the apocalyptic nomenclature familiar to the Jewish or Christian mind.

Joseph Peterson wrote in the introduction of his marvelous book John Dee's Five Books of Mystery:

> The importance of Liber Loagaeth cannot be overemphasized. From it would "be restored the holy bokes, which haue perished euen from the beginning, and from the first that liued." The truths it contains will end religious disputes and restore religious unity. "Which when it hath spread a while, THEN COMMETH THE END."[69] In short, it will usher in the new age. Since the book is so central to these angelic communications, it is amazing that it has remained unpublished.[70]

Amazing indeed, but as I wrote concerning De Heptarchia Mystica, it is only a matter of time before someone cracks the code of this breathtakingly immense body of work. What do I mean by breathtakingly immense?

One surviving manuscript comprises forty-eight leaves, each containing 49 × 49 lettered squares, 115,000 lettered squares in all. Each square was filled, letter-by-letter, according to Kelley's vision. In the end, the magicians were left with forty-nine calls in an angelic language. (Note: These calls were not the same calls in the angelic tongue that would come later and form the centerpiece of the Enochian phase of Dee and Kelley's partnership.) Loagaeth literally means "speech from God," and the magicians were informed that the words of the forty-nine calls were the same as those uttered by God at the dawn of creation—in the same language spoken by Adam when he named all things.

Unfortunately, these calls were never translated (or else the material has been lost), and attempts by modern linguists have failed to find enough landmarks of a properly constructed language to put the calls of Loagaeth in the same category as the angelic language that would be received in the third and final phase of the magicians' actions.

Kelley's visionary skills were severely exploited during this period, and his visions were characterized by the presence of a dazzling light that both magicians could see. The light would fly out of the scrying stone and penetrate Kelley's head, putting him in a trance in which he could read and comprehend the text of Liber Loagaeth. He was, however, forbidden to translate it and told that God would later provide the translation. At the end of the session, the light would leave Kelley's head and return to the stone. When he returned to normal consciousness, he claimed to have no memory of the experience.

As tempting as it might be, I am, for the time being not incorporating any of the calls from Loagaeth in my Enochian-magick preparation ritual. However, something else of great importance came out of this period: the angelic alphabet.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

The Angelic Alphabet

> He wiped his finger on the top of the Table, and there came out above the Table certain Characters enclosed in no line: but standing by them selves, and points between them. He pointed orderly to them with his finger, and looked toward the skryer at every pointing.
> —EDWARD KELLEY DESCRIBING HIS VISION OF THE ANGEL'S REVELATION OF THE ANGELIC ALPHABET, MARCH 26, 1583[71]

I confess, even with clear copies and transcriptions of the source material in front of me, it has been very difficult for me to wrap my mind around the order of the visionary events of Dee and Kelley's years together. Because certain elements of these magical systems were often corrected or amended by the angels in subsequent visions, often occurring months apart, it is extremely difficult (for me at least) to present a clean chronology of events. The circumstances surrounding the reception of the angelic alphabet are no exception.

The alphabet was received during the Loagaeth period, but because the magicians were told to replace the Latin/English letters of the Lamen, Holy Table, and the seven Ensigns of Creation with letters from the angelic script, its influence reached back in time to touch the Heptarchia period as well.

The twenty-one characters of the angelic alphabet appeared fully formed in yellowish letters that rose in Kelley's vision above the table. The images of the individual letters then obligingly hovered over a sheet of paper and stayed visible long enough for him to copy them in ink before fading away.

Words in the angelic language are written from right to left, and that is the order the letters first appeared to Kelley. All twenty-one letters appeared in a single row and were separated by dots. There was also a dot preceding the first letter.

You will notice that the name for the first letter received, Pa, is the only letter whose name is capitalized. Pa, b in English, has a special significance in the magick of the Heptarchia. For example, the names of all the forty-nine good angels begin with b, the letter b appears overwhelmingly on the Ensigns of Creation, and each of the four corners of the Holy Table displays an oversized Pa.

This abundance of *b*s has caused several knowledgeable modern magical commentators to speculate that b must represent the number seven, the number upon which these magical systems seem to be based. While that makes a great deal of sense to me, I have nonetheless found nothing in the original material that would specifically suggest numerical equivalents to any of the single letters of the angelic alphabet.

What is very clear, however, is the fact that the communicating angel wanted Dee and Kelley to immediately memorize the letters of the angelic alphabet and the letters' names. Dee was a busy man and wanted to be excused from this time-consuming duty. The angel Me would have none of it. In this March 26, 1583, exchange, Dee tries to make the angel understand, “Look man, I've got a life!”

> Me: I instructed thee before-hand and told thee, that both of you must jointly learn those holy letters (For, so, I may boldly call them) in memory: with their names: to the intent, that the finger may point to the head, and the head to the understanding of his charge.
> Dee: You perceive that I have diverse affairs which at this present do withdraw me from peculiar diligence using to these Characters and their names learning by heart: And therefore I trust, I shall not offend, if I bestow all the convenient leisure that I shall get, about the learning thereof.

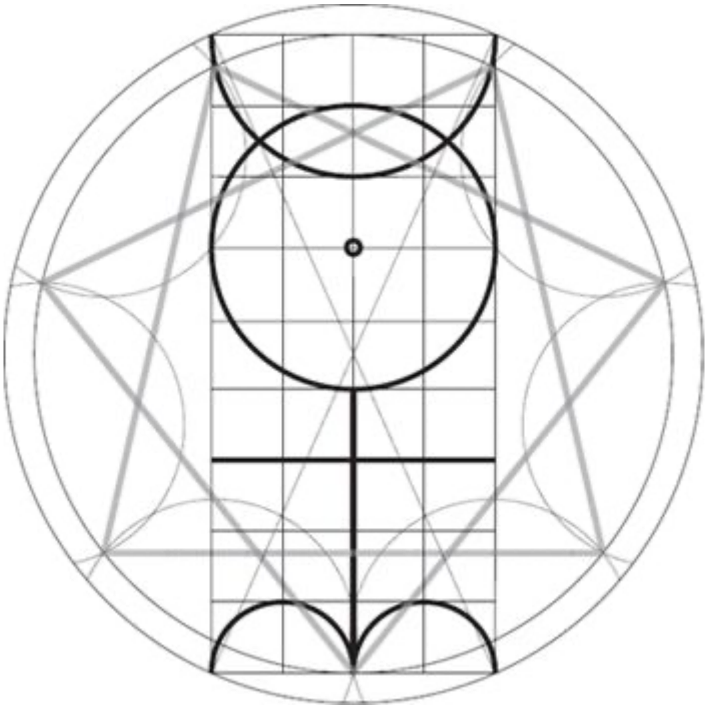
Me: Peace, Thou talkest, as though, thou understoodest not. We know thee, we see thee in thy heart: Nor one thing shall not let another. For short is the time, that shall bring these things to proof.[72]

BOOK IV

Enochiana



CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Enochian Magick

> The Lord appeared unto Enoch, and was merciful unto him, opened his eyes, that he might see and judge the earth, which was unknown to his Parents, by reason of their fall : for the Lord said, Let us shew unto Enoch, the use of the earth : And lo, Enoch was wise, and full of the spirit of wisdom.
> —THE ANGEL AVE, MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1584[73]

To my knowledge, Dee and Kelley never used the word Enochian to describe the system of magick they received between April 10 and July 13, 1584. Throughout their actions, they simply referred to it as angelic. We cannot, however, be faulted too badly for attaching the biblical patriarch's name to the system. The magicians were told that this was the magick given by God to Enoch (the seventh man from Adam) in the form of a book and that Enoch (before he ascended bodily into the presence of God) passed it on to others. Over the generations, the book fell into wicked hands, and God caused it to be lost. But because of Dee's piety and prayers, God was moved to once again deliver it to mankind.

These final days were an especially difficult period in Dee and Kelley's relationship. They and their families were living in Krakow, Poland. Their actions were regularly interrupted by "evil spirits," who encouraged the magicians to abandon the actions. Kelley was increasingly impatient and uncomfortable with the work, voicing his fear of the possible evil nature of the communications on one hand. Ironically, Kelley was at the time practicing demon magick behind Dee's back. Dee was furious when he learned of this. So were the communicating angels, who warned that such behavior attracted evil spirits into the magician's environment—an annoying and time-consuming distraction. Finally Kelley promised Dee and the angels that he would knock off the black magick.

The angels, too, appeared to be growing impatient with Dee and Kelley, as if they realized the magical chemistry that existed between the two magicians (the personal factors that made them such a perfect operator/receiver team) was rapidly disintegrating. In April, the magicians were told in no uncertain terms that the work had to be completed by August. The magicians met their deadline with time to spare. July 13, 1584, Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, saw the final communication that completed the reception of the angelic calls and provided the names of the thirty Aethyrs. Not only had the Enochian phase of Dee and Kelley's operations ended, but, indeed, the entire angelic adventure had also come to a close. The plug was pulled. The communicating angels fell silent.

The magicians would continue on and off for several years with visionary operations and unsuccessful mago-political adventures in Europe. But, with the exception of only three brief references in their subsequent diaries, they never again mention the angelic magick. One of those latter-day references (the Tabula Recensa), however, is very significant to the study of the Enochian magick period. I'll speak more on that very soon.

The reception of the Enochian material was (at least to my impatient attention span) even more confused and topsy-turvy than that which characterized the Heptarchia and Liber Loagaeth periods. Sadly, as we discovered in the two earlier cases, the surviving information, while abundant, still does not provide us with adequate information on how it all was supposed to work as a practical system of magick.

And here is where we must again tip our magical hats to S. L. MacGregor Mathers, the adepts of the Golden Dawn, and Aleister Crowley, who at the dawn of the twentieth century developed this material into a remarkably logical system of vision magick—a system possessed of the solid infrastructure lacking in the surviving source material, a system that, for all intents and purposes, offers the diligent practitioner a practical and elegant unified field theory of hermetic and qabalistic magick.

As applied most commonly today, Enochian magick is a two-part magical system: one part focusing on the elemental universe, the other on the aethyric. The former enables the magician to summon or visit in vision the spirits of the myriad levels of the elemental worlds of Fire, Water, Air, Earth, and Spirit; the latter enables the magician to systematically penetrate increasingly higher heavens (or Aethyrs) to access information from those heavenly levels of consciousness.

I will soon show how these two systems are operated. But before I do that, and in keeping with our program of systematic attunement, I need to introduce you to another magick table. It was the first revelation of the Enochian period, but it is also, in my opinion, the final component of the preparation protocol. This tablet was delivered to the magicians by the angel Nalvage in April of 1584. It is an item that was acknowledged by the adepts of the Golden Dawn but never incorporated into any practice. It is something, however, I believe should not escape our attention. No name was given to this object. Some modern scholars designate it simply the Tablet of God. I shall refer to it as the Round Tablet of Nalvage.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The Round Tablet of Nalvage

The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo the beginning and end of all things.

"The Method of Science—The Aim of Religion" was the official motto of The Equinox, the great magical periodical first published by Aleister Crowley and his colleagues in the early years of the twentieth century.[74] This same phrase could also comfortably serve as the watchwords that describe what the art of magick is to me.

Conversely, superstition (as the word is commonly understood) has, in my opinion, no place in the arsenal of the modern magician. This, I believe, is especially true concerning the practice of Enochian vision magick. In all my years of magical practice and exploration of this system, I have never encountered a single case of so-called psychic attack, demon possession, headache, hives, or hernia—indeed any ill effects whatsoever—resulting from the practice of this particular kind of magick.

That being said, strange and unexpected things do occasionally happen to those who practice magick. And while I believe it is bad for one's mental health to ascribe undue importance to these phenomena, it is important that they be dispassionately observed and recorded. So, before I discuss the Round Tablet of Nalvage and its importance to the system of Enochian magick, I feel I must share with you two little stories that might help you understand the level of respect I hold for this particular magical object.

Twenty years ago, I was teaching a class in Enochian vision magick at our home in Costa Mesa. This class was different from the Enochian magick classes I had taught previously, for it was the first time we would study and experiment with using the Round Tablet of Nalvage. In preparation for the first class, I decided to make a copy of the tablet out of wax (as I had done with my Sigillum Dei Aemeth). A friend had given me two massive, black wax candles shaped like giant chessmen (bishops). My plan was to melt these down in a round Christmas cookie tin and carve the squares and the angelic letters of the Tablet of Nalvage on the cooled wax disk.

It was a foolish time to be starting an arts project like this, because our landlord had just informed us he was bulldozing our house in two weeks and building apartments on our lot (thanks a lot!), and we were deep in the midst of packing up our things to move. Still, magick is magick, and life goes on. I put the two black wax bishops in the cookie tin and slid them into the oven. I set the heat on the lowest possible warm level and went out to the garage to help (watch) Constance pack.

As you might imagine, we had some very interesting things in our garage, many of which we hadn't looked at in years. We did more reminiscing than packing. I didn't forget the black wax bishops in the oven, however, and checked on them regularly. It seemed they were taking a long time to melt, so I turned up the heat a little higher.

Back out in the garage we found a stash of psychedelic artwork Constance had painted and drawn in the late sixties, when we were hippies living in the woods of southern Oregon. We hadn't seen them in fifteen years. What a treat! We lingered over them for probably ten minutes before I remembered the black wax bishops for the Round Tablet of Nalvage in the oven.

When I opened the back door, I found the kitchen dark except for a warm orange glow that, like a spectacular sunset, brightened the dark clouds of smoke that filled the house from the ceiling to about four feet from the floor. The oven was completely engulfed in flames. I ran into the living room and found our son, Jean-Paul, lying on the floor watching television completely oblivious to the black smoke pressing its way toward him from above.

Once he and the dog were evacuated, I called for Constance (always a level head in times of emergency), and we proceeded to attack the fire. When I opened the flaming oven, I discovered that one of the bishops had slid to the side of the cookie tin and parts of it had melted down the outside rim. The wax had run to the bottom of the oven and dripped down upon the pilot light, which then become the eternal flame of Costa Mesa. There was nothing we could do to turn off the oven. Constance eventually had to turn off the gas outside, and with the help of baking soda and wet towels, we got the fire out. I rescued the cookie tin and let it cool in the sink. A couple hours later, in the charred ruins of our kitchen, I carved a beautiful black wax Round Tablet of Nalvage.

Now, I'm the first to confess that this story has less to do with magick and superstition and more with my own carelessness and stupidity. (I am now forbidden to use the oven for magical crafts.) The accident did, however, serve to give me a healthy respect for the Round Tablet of Nalvage—a respect that in the last year has increased immeasurably. And that brings me to my second magical tale of Nalvage.

As we'll soon see, there is much we know about the Round Tablet of Nalvage. What we don't know is how it was intended to be used. As I was preparing for the class series that inspired this book, I debated with myself how (or even if) I was going to introduce it into our studies. After all, there is nothing in the source material that hints at what is to be done with it. Late in the afternoon, I prepared our living room temple for the evening's class. The Sigillum and ensigns were set neatly on the Holy Table; the table was covered with its red silk cloth, and the obsidian mirror was set in place.

I went to the closet cupboard in my office and took down my black wax Round Tablet of Nalvage from the topmost shelf. I unzipped its plastic bubble-wrapped envelope and carefully removed it. I had to admit, after all those years, it still looked magnificently magical. I took it into the living room and set it down upon the covered table. I sat down in my comfy chair, and in the warm glow of sunset (which brought to my mind the glow of our blazing kitchen so many years earlier), I meditated about how the Round Tablet of Nalvage fits into the system.

I didn't get much meditating done, because the moment I closed my eyes I fell asleep. I awoke just a few minutes before people would start arriving for class. I still didn't know how or if I was going to the use the tablet for the night's gathering. I hastily decided that if I didn't have sound reasons for using the tablet, I was going to skip it altogether—at least for that night. I took the tablet off the Holy Table, wrapped it back up, and carefully put it back on the top shelf of the closet cupboard.

I went to my desk to turn off the computer and gather things for class, when I was startled by the sound of something smashing against my guitar, which was mounted upright in its stand near the open closet door. With the guitar strings still ringing, I turned to see that the Tablet of Nalvage had flown from its shelf, ricocheted off my guitar, and was resting inches from my feet.

As a reasonably rational man, I am of the opinion that there is nothing supernatural in the world, just natural things that have yet to be explained. I'm sure there is nothing I can say to convince the cynic that the tablet hadn't fallen naturally from the shelf because I hadn't put it there properly. I remain, however, extremely impressed at the distance this object had to travel across physical space in order to strike the guitar and find its way to my feet at the very moment I had decided not to discuss it at that evening's class.

Needless to say, I changed my mind about the importance of the tablet, and in the few moments remaining before class members started to arrive, I composed the two-part chorus that incorporates the dynamics created by the letters of the Round Tablet of Nalvage—a chant that has become the last (and perhaps the most important) component of the Ceremony of Preparation.[75]

Now, let's take a brief look at those dynamics and how a chant based on the Round Tablet of Nalvage can be constructed.

The Tablet of Nalvage is not really round. It is a square divided into four squares (or continents) and surrounded by four outer bars (see figure 59). The continents and bars are subdivided into lettered squares (nine squares per continent and four squares per bar). But before we start filling in the letters, let's see what the angel Nalvage had to say about the continents.

Nalvage told Dee and Kelley that continents 1 and 2 are "dignified," while 3 "is not yet dignified, but to be dignified," and 4 is "without glory or dignity." Nalvage described them in Latin as follows:

1. Vita suprema (highest life), the continent of "joy";
2. Vita (life), the continent of "potentiality";
3. Vita non dignificata, sed dignificanda (life not dignified, but which shall be dignified), the continent of "creation"; and
4. Vita est etiam haec, sed quae perperit mors ("Even this is life, but life which will be paid with death"), the continent of "discord."

Each continent contains nine letters that, when read in various ways, yield words in the angelic language. In order to more easily see these words, I have separated the tablet into its component parts (see figure 60).

When read counterclockwise, the outer bars of the tablet spell the names of four classes of angels: luah (praising angels), lang (ministering angels), sach (confirming angels), and urch (confounding angels).

These angels circumscribe and contain the angelic forces at work within the continents. Nalvage gave the following Latin meanings to the words inside the continents when the words are read horizontally from left to right (see figure 61).

idz – Gaudium – Joy aoi – Praesentia – Presence mzr – Laudantes – Praising	sai – Actio – Action god – Factum – Events urr – Confirmantes – Establishing bna – Potestas – Power daz – Motus – Motion iab – Ministrantes – Ministering	fos – Luctos – Lamentation sea – Discordia – Discord rdi – Confundantes – Confusing

Figure 62 shows how the letters of the continents are read to reveal the nature of the divine powers resident in the tablet.

First notice how the three letters of outer corners of each of the four continents (upper left corner of upper left continent, lower left corner of lower left continent, and so on) all spell the Enochian word meaning God—iad.

Notice next that the three diagonal letters of continents spell the words moz (joy), bab (power), sor (action), and ser (lamentation).

Finally, the three letters of the inner corners of the continents spell the words zir (I am), zna (motion), gru (deed), and osf (discord).

The arrows in figure 62 show the beautiful symmetry the words create within the tablet. If we put the words of each continent together, we arrive at phrases such as:

Continent 1. iad moz zir (I am the Joy of God.)
Continent 2. iad bab zna (God's Power in Motion)
Continent 3. iad sor gru (Result of God's Action)
Continent 4. iad ser osf (God's Discord and Lamentation)

This rich tapestry of joy, movement, creation, and sorrow is contained and encircled by a counterclockwise whirl of the angels: luah, lang, sach, and urch.

Concerning the tablet as a whole, Nalvage said,"The Substance is attributed to God the Father."[76]

In reference to the letters on the outer bars, Nalvage said, "The first circular mover, the circumference, God the Son, The finger of the Father, and mover of all things."[77]

Referring to the continents and the manner in which their letters are read, he said, "The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo the beginning and end of all things."[78]

Like the Holy Table, the Round Tablet of Nalvage, once decoded, displays divine and angelic words and names in perpetual motion in such a way that one can almost sense what is meant by the term choir of angels. In group workings, I break the participants up into two voices as we ceremonially chant the words from the tablet.

Voice One: luah lang sach urch

Voice Two: iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf

The effect is powerful even when I'm alone in the middle of the night and chant one voice at a time.

Once Nalvage described the dynamics of the tablet, he didn't go on to provide instructions on how, or even if, the tablet was to be used. Is it a talisman? Is it to be worn as the Lamen? Is it to be held or placed on the Holy Table? We don't know.

However, we do know that after the two magicians had become attuned to the structure of the Round Tablet of Nalvage, the entire remaining system of Enochian magick was revealed in less than ninety days. This has led more than a few magicians to speculate that the Round Tablet of Nalvage might be the key to a mysterious and unexpressed “first call” of the Enochian system, or perhaps even represent the call itself.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

The Forty-eight Calls

> Move, therefore, and show yourselves: open the Mysteries of your Creation: Be friendly unto me: for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.
> —FROM THE FIRST CALL[79]

The centerpiece of the Enochian system is a collection of calls[80] in an angelic tongue that is significantly different from the language delivered in Liber Loagaeth. The reception of the calls followed that of the Tablet of Nalvage. They were first dictated to the magicians in the angelic tongue, then afterwards translated into English. Careful examination of the calls and their translations reveal that Enochian is a real language and not simply strings of barbarous names and words. The calls read like evocative hymns or invocations. They are constructed of real, sometimes breathtakingly beautiful sentences that can be translated (not merely transliterated). The language exhibits a remarkable consistency of word meaning from call to call. It has a form of grammar and syntax. This phenomenon, coupled with the multiple double-blind/letter-by-letter method by which it was received, makes this (in my mind at least) one of the most extraordinary aspects of Dee and Kelley's workings.

Technically, there are forty-nine calls. However, as the first call was said to be unexpressed, I will refer to them as if there were forty-eight. They appear translated in their entirety in appendix II of this book, along with the keys to how they are put to use by modern Enochian magicians (see also chapter twenty-seven).

Beginning on April 10, 1584, the first four calls were painstakingly delivered, letter-by-letter (in backward order, because the angels at first voiced fears that the calls were so powerful it might be too dangerous to deliver them in a straightforward manner). As usual, the letters were drawn from an assortment of lettered grids. The angels also provided translations to the first four calls immediately after their delivery.

Then things changed. It appears that even the angels became impatient with this tedious method. They proceeded to deliver calls five through eighteen in a straightforward manner, but they would wait six weeks before delivering the English translations.

The fact that the translated words from the first four calls (delivered backwards) matched (or were otherwise linguistically compatible with) the translated words of calls five through eighteen (delivered forward and translated six weeks later) all but rules out the possibility that either Dee or Kelley invented the angelic language or the calls.

The nineteenth call (the Call of the Ayres or Aethyrs) and the names of the thirty Aethyrs (or heavens) were received on July 13, 1584, Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, effectively ending Dee and Kelley's angelic magick relationship. However, before that final communication, the angels would deliver an incredible amount of material to the two magicians between April 10 and July 13—material that three hundred years later would inspire the adepts of the Golden Dawn to develop the hybrid system we now call Enochian magick. I call it hybrid because the "Enochian" magick developed by the Golden Dawn and Crowley is based on a number of assumptions that connect the forty-eight calls with other "Enochian" material Dee and Kelley received after the reception of the calls. I refer to what are now commonly called the Elemental Tablets, which I will discuss in detail in chapter twenty-three and beyond. While eminently logical and based on the most anal-retentive hermetic principles, many of the assumptions made by the Golden Dawn and Crowley were nonetheless not clearly made in the original Dee material.

First, however, we need to look at the circumstances that triggered the final and most astounding chapter in the story of the reception of Enochian magick. It all started with Dee wanting to spy on the king of Poland and ended with the reception of what appears to be nothing less than the printed circuit board of the mind of God.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

The Ninety-one Parts of the Earth

> Dee: Hey Nalvage, I'd sure like to magically eavesdrop on secret meetings between King Stephen of Poland and his ministers. I'd like to know if Count Albert Laski will soon succeed Stephen as king of Poland. Can you help me do this?
>
> Nalvage: No problem, Dr. Dee. But first you have to understand how the universe where this can happen operates. You need to understand how everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth.[81]
> —IMAGINARY CONVERSATION, JOHN DEE AND THE ANGEL NALVAGE

The fantasy dialogue above is more than just another one of my lame attempts to be witty. It describes what, for all intents and purposes, was happening during this phase of the Enochian magick revelations. Dee was indeed trying to squeeze from the angels some information regarding political intrigues in Poland. The angel Nalvage's response was to first try to explain to Dee the mechanics of how specific spirits rule specific parts of the earth. In doing so, Nalvage would ambitiously attempt to demonstrate how everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth. The results of this revelation Dee would neatly memorialize thirteen months later in Liber Scientae Auxilii et Vitoriae Terrestris.[82]

Nalvage started by dividing the universe into thirty segments that would eventually be identified as Aires, or Aethyrs (see column I of figure 63). To the thirty Aires he assigned ninety-one parts of the earth (see column II), which he first referred to by the geographical name recognizable to the sixteenth-century magicians, such as Syria (see second name in column III), then by the name by which it is known in the divine realms, such as Pascomb (see second name in column IV).

He then assigned each of these pairs of names to one of the twelve mythical tribes of Israel, along with their directional coordinates, an angelic king, and a respectable number of good ministers.

All this information and more can be found in figure 63. Columns I through V contain the information Dee and Kelley received at this stage of the reception. The symmetrical characters found in column VI and the names of the good princes of the Air in column VII were delivered to Dee and Kelley at a later date than the information in columns I through V. This fact will have astonishing significance when we examine the circumstances and sequence of events that brought to a close the angelic adventures of the two magicians. The key to the columns of the table is as follows:

Column I	Number of the Aire
Column II	Sequence of the ninety-one parts of the earth
Column III	Names of the ninety-one parts of the earth as imposed by man[83]
Column IV	Names of the ninety-one parts of the earth as imposed by God (Note: These are also the names of ninety-one governors of the Aethyrs; see chapter twenty-eight.)
Column V	(from top to bottom) Tribe of Israel, quarter of the earth assigned to the dispersed tribes of Israel, angelic kind, number of good ministers
Column VI	Divinely ordained symmetrical characters (see chapter twenty-one) (Note: The mystery of the missing symmetrical characters 28, 29, and 30 would be revealed to Dee and Kelley later; see chapter twenty-four.
Column VII	Names of the good princes of the Air (Note: These are also the names of the thirty Aethyrs; see chapter twenty-eight.)

Using the second of the ninety-one parts of earth, Syria, as our example, we see that its divinely ordained name is Pascomb. The tribe of Zabulon is assigned to Syria/Pascomb, as are the angelic king Zinggen and 2,360 good ministers.

In order for you to appreciate the amazing circumstances surrounding the reception of the Enochian material, it will be important for you to have a general understanding of the chronology of events that took place in the spring and early summer of 1584. This I will try to provide in the following chapter.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

The Golden Talisman and the Watchtowers of the Universe

> Now therefore hearken unto me: for I will open unto you the secret knowledge of the Earth, that you may deal with her, by such as govern her, at your pleasure; and call her to a reckoning, as Steward doth the servants of the Lord.

Very early on the morning of Wednesday, June 20, 1584, Edward Kelley was aroused from a sound sleep by someone (something) patting him on the head. He opened his eyes and beheld an angel, “clothed with feathers, strangely wreathed about him all over, etc.” standing at the head of his bed. The angel would later identify itself as Ave, one of the Sons of Sons of Light from the Sigillum Dei Aemeth (see chapter ten). Ave proceeded to project a vision that would dramatize the elements and structure of the entire system of Enochian magick as widely practiced today. The following is from Dee's diary:[85]

> There appeared to him [Kelley] four very fair Castles, standing in the four parts of the world: out of which he heard the sound of a Trumpet. Then it seemed out of every Castle a cloath to be thrown on the ground, of more than the breadth of a Table-cloath … [86]
> … Out of every Gate then issued one Trumpeter, whose Trumpets were of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end.
>
> After the Trumpeter followed three Ensign Bearers.
>
> After them six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands.
>
> Then followed a comely man, with very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train.
>
> After him came five men, carrying up of his train.
>
> Then followed one great Crosse, and about that four lesser Crosses.
>
> These Crosses had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosse, all over.
>
> After the Crosses followed 16 white Creatures.
> After them, an infinite number seemed to issue, and to spread themselves orderly in a compasse, almost before the four foresaid Castles.

The highlights of Kelley's vision would eventually be memorialized upon a round talisman etched in gold, which is today on display at the British Museum. Much as I'd like to believe this object was fashioned by Dee himself, it is almost certainly a forgery patterned upon the flawed image printed in Casaubon's A True & Faithful Relation. For reference, however, I will continue to refer to both the vision and the image as the Golden Talisman.

The four castles, or Watchtowers, formed a cross, the center of which was a circle supported by twenty-four columns. Figure 64 illustrates the lower quarter of the Golden Talisman.

Ave would elucidate upon the nature, powers, and hierarchical status of the characters on the Golden Talisman. Eventually he would go into far greater detail by projecting and organizing all of it upon what he called the Great Table or the Great Table of the Watchtowers. The Great Table is the Rosetta stone of Enochian magick. How it was received and how it is connected to the information Dee and Kelley had already received concerning the ninety-one parts of the earth present us with perhaps the most convincing proof that the two magicians were indeed in contact with noncorporeal intelligences of a superior order.

CHAPTER TWENTY

The Unlettered Great Table and the Four Great Seals

> The seals and authorities of these Houses are confirmed in the beginning of the World. Unto everyone of them be 4 characters, (tokens of the presence of the son of God: by whom all things were made in Creation.)
> —THE ANGEL AVE, JUNE 20, 1584[87]

In a working that took place on Wednesday, June 25, 1584, the angel Ave showed the magicians the image of a table that was divided into four sections by a central cross. Each of the four sections was identified as one of the castles of the Golden Talisman vision. Also called Watchtowers, Watchmen, princes, and mighty angels of the Lord, they were each represented by a seal. Three of these seals, by their imagery, bear a direct and unambiguous connection to the Sigillum Dei Aemeth or the Ensigns of Creation.

The first seal was assigned to the upper left section of the table. It was the image of a capital letter T with four rays beaming vertically from the top bar. This seal comes from a major landmark of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. The 4/T cell is the first (near the top) of the forty cells that form the perimeter (see figure 23). The 4/T cell is where we began counting to create the seven Names of God drawn from the Sigillum.

The second seal was assigned to the upper right section of the table and identified as an alphabet cross. We first saw this cross on the (lower right) corner of the first sevenfold table (see figure 33), which generated the letters of the large outer heptagon of the Sigillum, where the cross appears at the top left (see figure 34).

The third seal was assigned to the lower right section of the Great Table. Its origin was a little harder to track down. Ave said, "It is in that table, which consisteth of 4 and 8." One of the seven Ensigns of Creation that ring the Sigillum on the Holy Table (the one many modern magicians associate with Mercury) is a 4 × 8 table (see figure 54). The square occupying the position of the second column, second row, contains the cross, numbers, and letters exactly as appears on the vision of the third seal.

The forth seal was assigned to the lower left section of the table and was the image of "a little round smoke, as big as a pin's head." It is illustrated in one of the drawings of the Great Table in Sloane 3191 as a tiny circle with twelve rays issuing from it. It is perhaps the stylized representation of the figure that appears on the back of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth: a small circle from which projects the four capital Ts of a cross potent formed from twelve right angles (see figure 51). Perhaps it is connected to the Round Table of Nalvage and the twelve words that occupy its four continents. Frankly I've been unable to find any reference in the original material that would suggest either of these connections.

Figure 65 shows the positions of the Great Seals on the Great Table and the order in which they were revealed to Dee and Kelley on June 25, 1584. On April 18, 1587 (nearly three years after the magicians had, for all intents and purposes, discontinued their angelic workings), Kelley would receive a vision that would alter (or reform) several aspects of the Great Table, including the relative positions of the seals and all they represent.

As one might expect, this reformation remains the source of intense frustration to Enochian students and practitioners. To add to all the confusion, Dee at different times assigned different directional attributes to the quarters of the table. Later, the Golden Dawn, in order to develop a workable system from this material, would attribute the quarters of the Great Table to the elements of Air, Water, Earth, and Fire. Eventually, I will do that as well, but for the moment, let's be satisfied with identifying the four quarters of the Great Table by their seals and original numbers as shown in figure 65, while we move on to the wonders of what next took place.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

The Great Table

There was a terrible storm of thunder and rain, toward the end of our yesterdays action: which I said, was somewhat more than natural.

—JOHN DEE, JUNE 26, 1584[88]

I feel I must here briefly outline (if only for my own benefit) the sequential landmarks of the Enochian magick period up to this point:

- The reception of the Round Tablet of Nalvage,
- The beginning of the reception of the forty-eight calls in the angelic language,
- The reception of the order and earthly name of each of the ninety-one parts of the earth, together with:
  - – its divinely given name,
  - – the tribe of Israel to which it is assigned,[89]
  - – the direction assigned to that tribe,
  - – the name of its ruling angelic king,
  - – the number of good ministers.

(All of the above information is itemized in columns I through IV of the figure 63 in chapter eighteen.)

Then came:

- The vision of the Golden Talisman, with its four sets of castles:
  - – one trumpeter,
  - – three ensign bearers,
  - – six seniors ("six ancient men"),
  - – the king and his five princes (the "comely man, with very much Apparel" and the "five men, carrying up of his train"),
  - – five crosses in the air ("one great Crosse" and "four lesser Crosses"),
  - – sixteen dispositors ("16 white Creatures").
- The vision of the unlettered Great Table and the four Great Seals.

What happened next was so remarkable that I hope I can recount what happened clearly enough for you to appreciate how remarkable it was.
